Quickly taking on the outward bound mail that had been taken out by the boat, the plane took off again and after circling over the land to survey the landing field at Hospital Beach, prepared for the use of the plane when a water landing is not advisable, disappeared in the northwest on the return journey to the mainland. Cheers greeted the flier when landing and when he took off on the return flight, promising to return to-morrow with the balance of accumulated mails if the weather permitted.

NELSON MUST PAY PENALTY

Cabinet After Reviewing Case Decides Will Be No Interference.

PREPARATIONS MADE.

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 12.— (Canadian Press.)— Earl Nelson, internationally known as the "dark strangler," will pay the death penalty at Winnipeg on Friday morning next for the murder of Mrs. Emily Patterson. The cabinet having reviewed his case has decided that there will be no interference, it was announced early last evening.

Thirteenth Victim.

WINNIPEG, Man., Jan. 12.—(Canadian Press.)—William McConnell, of Philadelphia, Pa., arrived in Winnipeg yesterday in an attempt to identify Earle Nelson, sentenced to hang here next Friday for the murder of Mrs. Emily Patterson, as the man who strangled his wife to death in Philadelphia April 27 last year. He spent two hours in the death cell with Nelson, but Mr. McConnell is under strict undertaking to keep the result secret. He stated that he would remain in Winnipeg until after the execution, and hopes to see Nelson again.

Mrs. McConnell was strangled about three o'clock in the afternoon when her husband was at work. A towel was tightly tied around her neck and her body jammed beneath the bed. Only the most meagre clue was left by the murderer.

The condemned man told guards yesterday that he was ready. "When they are ready, I am ready," he said. He is eating heartily and is very particular in his selection of food.

Arthur Ellis, the hangman, arrived from Vancouver last night. The scaffold is in readiness and by a strange coincidence when Nelson hangs he will be the thirteenth victim who has passed through its trapdoor. Friday is also the thirteenth day of the month.

GIRL TESTIFIES AGAINST MELLOR

Trial of Former Clergyman is Commenced at Picton.

PICTON, Ont., Jan. 12.—(Canadian Press.)— Rev. J. J. Mellor, former United church pastor of this town, appeared for trial on a serious charge in connection with his relations with a young girl at one time a member of the choir of the church of which the accused was in charge. The trial is being heard by Judge E. H. Maclean.

During the morning the evidence of the girl was heard and a number of letters written by the minister to her were presented and read by the Crown. The girl's story dealt with her meeting with Mellor in the summer of 1923 and the gradual development of their friendship

The court roo m was crowded, but no women were allowed in with the exception of three who were on the jury. After the case started the doors of the court house were locked and nobody was allowed in.

Judge Maclean explained that he wanted a copy of the papers containing a report of the trial.

Mellor watched the girl closely from the prisoner's box as she took the witness stand. She gave her evidence in a low voice, scarcely audible in the court room, and several times was requested to speak more distinctly. Mellor looked very pale and haggard, but retained his composure during the girl's recital of their relations.

RUTH SNYDER GETS RESPITE FOR HEARING

Supreme Court Justice Levy Grants Writ Staying Execution.

MAY AFFECT GRAY.

Electrocution Stopped Until Mrs. Snyder Testifies in Insurance Suit.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—The pen of Supreme Court Justice Aaron J. Levy last night short-circuited the wires of death that were to crash out the life of Ruth Snyder in Sing Sing tonight.

The writ, which stays the execution, was served this morning on Warden Lewis E. Lawes at Sing Sing Prison. Fulfilment of the death sentence is automatically prevented until such time as Mrs. Snyder can appear at the trial of a suit brought by the Prudential Life Insurance Company.

It was Lorraine Snyder, the condemned woman's nine - year - old daughter, who was used by her attorneys to cheat the death chair. Judge Hazelton and Dana Wallace, counsel for Mrs. Snyder, argued that Lorraine would lose $97,000 in insurance if her mother were killed before she could testify.

The writ may affect Judd Gray, indirectly.

Mr. Hazelton and Mr. Wallace found Justice Levy in rooms of the Grand Street Boys' Association in West 55th Street, of which the Justice is present. They mentioned immediately the ground of their plea, and also emphasized that the litigation in which the Prudential Insurance Company as makers of the policies is the other party, involved the welfare of Lorraine Snyder, the daughter of Mrs. Ruth Snyder.

Justice Levy did not require any lengthy argument to convince him that the writ should be granted. As soon as Mrs. Snyder's attorneys had presented their ground he signed the order and Mr. Hazelton and Mr. Wallace departed immediately.

The sentence of Mrs. Snyder and Gray directed that they be put to death during the week of January 9. The exact time is within the discretion of Warden Lawes. It is customary in prisons for all death sentences within a certain period to be executed the same night. Therefore it was believed that Warden Lawes would postpone Gray's death until after the hearing before Justice Levy.

Habeas Corpus Sought

OSSINING, N.Y., Jan. 12 (Canadian Press). — Last-minute lawyers' plans for attempts to stay the executioner's hand filled the last full day of allotted life of Mrs. Ruth Snyder and Henry Judd Gray.

But though lawyers were working feverishly, the prisoners themselves showed only apathy. Mrs. Snyder remained in bed all day, refusing food almost entirely; Grey read his Bible, ate normally, but without apparent pleasure, and waited quietly for the end.

Both prisoners learned from newspapers that Governor Smith had denied their plea for a stay of execution, but neither showed any great emotion. Earlier, Warden Lawes had said that the prisoners had sensed that their plea had proved futile and that the news would be no surprise to them.

Has Three Visitors

Mrs. Snyder had three visitors yesterday, but only one of them, her brother, was admitted. The two excluded were the chaplain of the Queen's County Jail, who converted Mrs. Snyder to Roman Catholicism, and a Salvation Army woman prison worker. They both came at the invitation of Mrs. Snyder and the Salvation Army worker was armed with a court order, but Warden Lawes adhered to the rule of relatives only.

Mrs. Snyder's brother was with her for almost an hour, but the nature of their conversation was not revealed. Gray was visited by his mother and Samuel Miller, his chief of counsel, who announced before leaving New York that he planned to make one last court move in an attempt to save his client.

One Last Move

The move, he let it be understood, would be an application for a writ of habeas corpus.

Mrs. Snyder's three lawyers, Edgar F. Hazelton, Dana Wallace and Joseph Lonardo conferred in Jamaica all afternoon and then Lonardo left for Ossining with an application for a writ of habeas corpus for Mrs. Snyder to sign.

Lonardo was given a letter to Warden Lawes signed by the other two attorneys, asking that he be permitted to see Mrs. Snyder and that a notary public be furnished him.

In a formal statement issued after the conference, it was made plain that Hazelton did not approve of the move for a writ, even though he consented to the others making it.

The writs for both prisoners were to be asked on the ground that their constitutional rights had been violated when they were tried jointly. Miller asserted in addition to this, that he had important new evidence.

The time for the execution has been set for 11 o'clock tonight and all necessary preparations have been

GOVERNMENT APPOINTS HARBOR COMMISSION FOR HALIFAX PORT

Composed of Men Who Have Taken Interest in N. S. Capital.

THREE MEMBERS.

Implements Another Recommendation of Duncan Report on Maritime Grievances.

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 12.— (Canadian Press.)—The federal government yesterday appointed a harbor commission for the port of Halifax and the board as approved, comprises Peter Jack, C. W. Ackhurst and John Murphy. The Commissioners are all men who have taken a keen interest in the commercial and administrative affairs of the Nova Scotian capital.

Commissioner Murphy was Mayor of Halifax for four years, and prior to that he had sat in the city council for some considerable time. He also served as controller before Halifax abolished that form of civic government. Mr. Murphy on several occasions has offered himself as a candidate in both the Provincial and Federal fields, but without success.

Commissioner Ackhurst is associated with a large business organization in Halifax and has a thorough knowledge of Maritime commercial activities. He is a well known public figure who has also served his fellow citizens in the capacity of alderman and has taken a wide interest in the affairs of the city.

Commissioner Jack is a member of a widely known Halifax financial house.

Duncan Recommendation.

The appointment of the commission implements another recommendation of report by Sir Andrew Rae Duncan on grievances of the Maritime provinces. The Royal Commission over which he presided in 1926 recommended the establishment of harbor commissions at both Halifax and Saint John as steps that should be taken to remedy some of the disadvantages under which these cities were laboring. The government last year accepted the Duncan report in its entirety, and legislation was enacted to give effect to the various recommendations. The Saint John Harbor Commission was appointed and is now functioning; but the Halifax Board was held up at the request of Halifax commercial men. Further consideration of the matter was given and six weeks ago the question of establishing the commission was again brought into prominence and the decision reached by those most vitally affected to accept the government's legislation.

The government was informed of the desire of the Halifax business men to have the commission named forthwith and to-day the cabinet acted upon the renewed request by appointing the three commissioners who will direct and supervise the commercial activities of the Maritime port.

Playwright Fights Duel With Critic

MILAN, Italy, Jan. 12. — Canadian Press. — A sabre duel between Carlo Veneziani, a writer of comedies, and Marco Ramperti, dramatic critic, resulted in the playwright's defeat, after receiving three cuts in the right forearm. He touched his adversary only once. The parties were not reconciled after the encounter, which grew from Ramperti's reviews.

TRUTH CONTINUES TO DISCUSS SHIPS

Says Sister Ships of Patrician Were Scrapped in 1921.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—(Canadian Press Cable).—Returning to its discussion on Canadian Government's proposal to replace its two present destroyers, Patriot and Patrician, with new ships, the weekly "Truth," yesterday reprints a statement which it describes as "officially inspired from Ottawa." The statement says that the first of the new ships will be laid down immediately the Canadian Parliament approves the necessary estimate. It adds that the Patrician is still serviceable, so the second new destroyer will be ordered for later delivery, thus spreading the total outlay over two years.

"This message does not definitely contradict what was said in Truth," the weekly says. "The first destroyer, we are told, will be laid down as soon as Parliament votes the money, but nothing is said as to when she will be completed. As for the Patrician still being serviceable, all her sister ships in the British Navy were scrapped in 1921.

"Another point to which the message makes no reference is that the Canadian Department of Defense has asked the British Government to loan two destroyers to replace the old ones while the proposed vessels are under construction. I confess that if I were a Canadian I would ask 'Why build warships at all so long as you can borrow them?'"

CAMPBELLFORD STAYS IN LEAGUE

Club Decides Not To Withdraw From Trent Valley Circuit.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 12.—At a meeting of the Hockey Executive held at four o'clock yesterday afternoon, it was decided to continue in the Trent Valley Hockey League, and notice to this effect will be forwarded to the League secretary at once.

STEAMER ASKS FOR ASSISTANCE

Coast Radios Trying To Locate Source of Faint S.O.S. Signals.

FROM FREIGHTER GRIFFO.

SEATTLE, Wash., Jan. 12. Canadian Press. — With a storm reported off the coast of Washington, the radio stations early to-day were attempting to pick up the freighter Griffo, which sent out "S.O.S." calls late last night. The first call was received by Seattle harbor radio. No details were given. It was believed that the ship was about 300 miles out, bound for Honolulu. A second "S.O.S." was heard by the Oriental dock radio at Everett, Washington, at 11.30 p.m. The signal was faint but gave the name of the vessel with the word "help." In addition to Captain Herbert Martin, there were twenty three persons on board the steamer when she left here on Monday.

W.M.S. HOLDS TEA

Good Program Given at Social Held By Madoc Ladies.

MADOC, Jan. 12.—The W.M.S. of Trinity United Church held a very successful tea at the home of Mrs. S. Ashley on Monday afternoon with a good crowd and an interesting program.

The rooms were beautifully decorated with Christmas colors, and the tables and refreshments were very dainty. Mrs. Dingman presided at the tea tables, while a host of waiters attended on the wants of all present.

Mrs. L. Ashley, Mrs. A. Thompson, and Mrs. S. Ashley received the guests who were delightfully entertained by a solo by little Miss Helen Wellman, then by a short reading by Mrs. Duncan Brown entitled "The Twins." Rev. G. W. Rivers was then called on for a reading and he gave "Jenny McNeill's Ride", which delighted all present.

Music was furnished at intervals by the Misses Ludbrook, and others, and all were well satisfied with the pleasure of the afternoon, and also with the proceeds which go to the funds of the W.M.S.

Miss Norma Fair left on Tuesday to attend Business College in Belleville.

TARIFF DISCUSSED.

WASHINGTON, D.C., January 12 (Canadian Press). — For the third successive day, the Senate was absorbed yesterday with weighty discussions of the tariff, but adjourned without taking any action.

In the heat of the debate, when it was apparent that neither side was getting anywhere, Senator McMaster, Republican, South Dakota, whose resolution declaring for tariff reduction to increase the purchasing power of the farmer precipitated the battle, sought to save the day by offering an amendment making his proposal more specific, but it was to no avail.

The alignment of the Senate remained the same and the day closed with each side apparently holding its own.

The McMaster amendment provides that "many existing tariff rates are excessive and the Senate favors an immediate revision downward of such subjects, believing that it would establish a closer parity between agriculture and industry that would result in the general benefit to all."

Yesterday's tariff discussion virtually was monopolized by a debate between Senators Smoot, Republican, Utah, and Copeland, Democrat, New York, on the effect of the tariff on sugar.

Senator Copeland contended that the sugar tariff was costing the consumers of the country, and particularly the farmers, two hundred million dollars a year. Senator Smoot countered with the contention that the income from the sugar tariff more than offset any increase in the cost of sugar, and that therefore the sugar tariff rebounded to the general benefit of the country.

CAUSED $42,000,000 DAMAGE.

WASHINGTON, D.C., January 12 (Canadian Press). — Turning from its lengthy study of the Mississippi River problem, the House Flood Control Committee yesterday learned of the losses occasioned by the short-lived inundation that swept over parts of New England and New York last November.

In five States, the flood caused $42,000,000 damage, and nearly one hundred lives were lost, Representative Gibson, Republican, Vermont, who headed a group of New England members of the House, declared before the committee. Vermont was the heaviest sufferer, he said, adding that the Green Mountain State had a loss of $30,000,000 and of 63 lives.

FATHER FOUND NOT GUILTY OF KILLING INFANT

Not Sufficient Evidence That Death Was Caused By Blow.

TRIAL OF MASKEWEYS.

Judge Says Witness Who Gave Evidence Not Very Trustworthy.

TORONTO, January 12. — A verdict of not guilty was directed by Mr. Justice Wright yesterday afternoon when the Crown's evidence was concluded in the case of Harry Maskeweys, charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of his month-old baby.

The judge stated that there was insufficient evidence to warrant proceeding any further. It had not been established that the man struck the child.

"It was a proper case for investigation and all that sort of thing," the Court observed. "The Crown has done his duty fully and well. But there has to be some evidence that Maskeweys did strike the child a blow on the head."

Mr. Middlebro: "There is this about it. There is no denial made by Maskeweys when his wife swears 'you killed my baby.' That is some evidence that he hit the baby. The night before the child was all right. In the morning it was dead. The woman had no black eye on Saturday night. She did on Sunday morning."

The judge: "There has to be reasonable evidence. I am not satisfied. I don't think I would be justified, or the Crown either, in pursuing the case further. The only evidence is the statement of the wife in his presence which he doesn't deny. But the witness who gave that evidence is not very satisfactory or not very trustworthy."

His Lordship endorsed the record not guilty, discharged the jury, then addressed the prisoner:

"Nothing remains but to discharge you. I wish to say, however, that you were in a very great peril of being found guilty of a serious, most unnatural offence. Apparently, you have been living in a state of barbarism up there, and have been constantly having trouble with your wife. If this sort of conduct persists you will find yourself in prison. The laws of Canada must be observed."

RESUME HEARINGS ON TUESDAY NEXT

Several Leaders in Oil Industry Are Among Prospective Witnesses.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Jan. 12.— (Canadian Press.)— Hearings in the Senate's new inquiry into the leasing of Teapot Dome naval oil reserve by Albert B. Fall to Harry F. Sinclair will be resumed next Tuesday by the Senate public lands committee and several leaders in the oil industry are among the prospective witnesses.

The committee will inquire particularly into the ultimate disposition of the profits of the extinct Continental Trading Company of Canada, which concerns's receipts of 230,000 in Liberty bonds, the government declares, have been traced to Fall, who was secretary of the interior at the time the reserve was leased.

Sinclair and Robert W. Stewart, chairman of the board of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, was declared by the government to have been guarantors of the Canadian Company which was formed in 1921 and disbanded and its records destroyed in 1923. H. M. Blackmer and James O'Neill, oil operators, also are said to have been among the guarantors of the company, but neither is in this country.

Senator Walsh, Democrat, Montana, who prosecuted the original Teapot Dome inquiry, will serve in this capacity again.

THIRD FORM GIVES SCHOOL PROGRAM

Debate is Feature at High School Literary Society Meeting.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 12. — The Campbellford High School Literary Society held its third meeting in the assembly hall of the school on Monday, January 9. Roy Johnston was chosen as critic. The splendid program given by Third Form made the opening meeting a success.

The first number on the program was a selection by an orchestra composed of Ralph Speary, Franklin Linton, Eric Douglas, and Maynard Watson. This was followed by:

Current Events—Arthur Phillips.

Reading—Jean Nelson.

Vocal Solo—Marjorie Farrel.

An interesting debate, "Resolved, that it is preferable to live in the country rather than in the city," was given. The affirmative was upheld by Reta Wilson and Donald Love; the negative by Muriel Thompson and Edmund Putrick. Five minutes were allowed to each speaker. The judge, Roxy Wilson, Isabelle Graham, and Ellis Darling, decided in favor of the affirmative.

The orchestra played two more selections, after which the critic gave his report.

LONG TERMS FOR SICILIANS

Seven Members of Mafia To Go To Prison For Life of Hard Labor.

THIRTY YEARS FOR OTHERS.

ROME, Jan. 12.—(Canadian Press) —Government officials were confident yesterday that the notorious Mafia, scourge of Sicily for generations, had been dealt a death blow. After the trial at Termini Imerese, Sicily, lasting three months, 147 members of the band were convicted of various crimes ranging from larcency to murder. Seven were acquitted. The trial was the outcome of a promise made by Premier Mussolini to free the country from the shadow of the Mafia. When the verdict was read, the public prosecutor asked the court to impose these penalties, hard labor for life for seven, thirty years imprisonment for eight, and imprisonment of from five to twenty-five years for others convicted.

EXPOSED GARBAGE CAUSES TROUBLE

Water Gets Into Containers and Freezes, Adding to Work of Men.

Can you answer "yes" to the following questions? If so, then you are fulfilling the requirements of the Sanitary Inspector, Charles Stapleton and his staff.

Do you avoid leaving containers of ashes where water may fall in them and freeze their contents before the garbage collector makes his rounds? Are the containers fit receptacles for the purpose.

Do you thoroughly drain all garbage and wrap it in paper before placing it in the garbage receptacle? Is that contained the kind approved by regulations—metal with a top or lid?

Do you bear in mind that the collection begins at seven a.m. and set out your containers at the proper time?

Are you doing your best to make Peterborough a cleaner and more healthy city?

In conversation with The Examiner today, the Sanitary inspector explained many angles of the work of his department. Said he, "You cannot too strongly urge the citizens to exercise care and to co-operate with us. This is the time of year when our work is most difficult. Though the majority have, there are still many citizens who are not using proper garbage receptacles, who do not drain the garbage or who leave it where it gets wet; in both cases it freezes, the collectors are unable to clean the receptacles and when the garbage reaches the incinerator it will not burn because a large percentage of it is ice or snow."

Christmas Tree Problem.

"One of the worst things that the citizens have been doing for the past week or so, is placing their discarded Christmas trees along with the garbage. These are most awkward to handle and do not fit into the incinerator properly. It would be a relief to the collectors if the people would devise some other means of getting rid of their Christmas trees. Five teams, and sometimes six are kept busy at the present time and we are doing our best to keep the city clean", declared Mr. Stapleton.

District Churches

TRENT RIVER UNITED CHURCH.

Trent River, Jan. 12.—The Rev. W. R. Archer delivered an address Sunday afternoon to a large congregation, taking for his text Joshua 24 : 15, "Choose you this day whom ye will serve." The text was taken from the time the people of Israel were under the leadership of Joshua, who was brave and courageous. There was sin in the camp and sorrow and desolation was always the result, and because of sin terrible catastrophes came to the people. The minister remarked how many had kept laws or transgressed laws in the past year.

"We should consider at the beginning of the New Year what we are going to do," he said. "Joshua at 110 years of age and Caleb at 85 years chose 'As for me and my house we will serve the Lord.' When the people of Israel were asked who they would choose—idols, or God who delivered them, they chose Jehovah, their God in the new land."

On Sunday, January 15th, there will be a Communion service after the usual afternoon service.

A cottage prayer meeting was held on Tuesday night of this week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Redden.

Alterations have been made around the pulpit and altar rail at the United Church. The platform for the choir and organ has been extended to the south wall, which makes a great improvement.

Beech trees are almost immune from lightning, it has been discovered. Pine, oak and spruce are the trees most subject to lightning stroke.

WARSAW CHURCH SOCIETIES MEET

United W. M. S. and Anglican Ladies' Guild Hold Regular Gatherings.

WARSAW, Jan. 12.—The first meeting of the United church Missionary Society was held at Mrs. George Taylor's home on Thursday afternoon. A large number were out.

Mrs. R. Moore, past president, occupied the chair. The opening hymn was "What a friend we have in Jesus;" the Scripture lesson was the twenty-fourth psalm.

In giving the yearly report, Mrs. G. Taylor said the group system had been found a great aid in the work; the groups sometimes prepared the program and practically always looked after the lunch.

Mrs. E. R. Hamblin, who became a life member in June, has not yet received her certificate and pin.

The delegates to the Presbyterial in January are Mrs. George Taylor, Mrs. Thomas Cooper and Miss Clara Payne.

The treasurer's report was very gratifying. In the eight months, after all expenses were paid, there was one hundred and one dollars, and forty-six cents to send to the mission fund. There were only nineteen paid members. The sunshine mite-boxes brought thirteen dollars and forty-two cents.

Mrs. Herrington, very kindly offered to donate a dozen of any one of the Gospels for the use of the society. The offer was gratefully accepted. Mrs. Herrington is donating a dozen copies of one of the Gospels to the Aid, and the two sets may be interchanged. Mrs. Anderson had a full report of the group "A." They had been quite active and had raised some extra money.

The other groups had little to report Miss Clara Payne had donated some Japanese pictures for sale and brought some more to the meeting.

It was decided to use the missionary envelopes this year.

Mrs. Moore took up the fourth chapter of the study book. It dealt with the effect of distinctions, because of color and race, and showed that denying Asiatic and African races equal social privileges, especially by Christians, whose slogan is "The World for Christ," has a worse effect than the government exclusion bills. Examples were given where a Japanese valedictorian received letters he was not to appear, where people, other than white, could not enter certain hotels, trains, busses. All this, coming from a Christian country, tends to "break the arms of the missionaries." The chapter dealt with United States conditions, principally.

Luncheon was served by "A" group, and a pleasant social half-hour spent.

The Anglican Ladies' Guild met at Mrs. H. G. E. Choates' home on Wednesday afternoon. Nearly all the members were present.

They made plans for a social evening on Friday, January 20th, and they took charge of the Young People's community evening on Tuesday, January 10.

After the meeting was closed, ways and means were discussed over the teacups.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 12, 1928.

JUDGE O'CONNOR.

His host of friends in Peterborough will share with the people of Lindsay in their satisfaction over the honour conferred upon Lawrence P. ("Larry") O'Connor in his elevation to the bench as judge of Northumberland and Durham County.

Mr. O'Connor is one of the most popular residents of this district.

Here in Peterborough where, incidentally, he commenced his practice of the law in association with Judge Daniel O'Connell, he is held in the greatest esteem, and his appointment is regarded as a wise and justified action on the part of the Dominion Government.

Probably in Lindsay the rejoicing over the honor paid a popular citizen is somewhat moderated by a sense of loss in the departure of one of Lindsay's crack tankard skips, for "Larry" O'Connor's fame with the stane and besom is as widespread as his reputation for fair-dealing and integrity.

(From The Border Cities Star.)

The Star is in receipt of a letter from one of its readers calling attention to something that most of us have noticed at one time or another. It is the delight with which some motorists apparently drive their cars through roadside water when pedestrians are passing and almost certain to be hit by the flying fluid. It is not an unagreeable sensation to tool a machine at a fairly rapid rate through a puddle of water, and hear it "swish." It is a small thrill, perhaps due to the realization of controlling a considerable amount of horsepower and being safe and dry from the results. But when a motorist wheels through a puddle for the deliberate purpose of throwing water on passers-by, or when he is fairly certain that this will be the result, then this motorist should be taken into somebody's woodshed and spanked in such a manner that he will not care to sit down on even the soft cushions of his car, for some days.

As the old saying goes, it takes all kinds of people to make a world, including the moron who likes to splash pedestrians, the fellow who rocks the canoe, the chap who skates around the "Warning" sign on the pond in order to see if it is correct, that perpetual nuisance, the unnecessary horn-tooter, and a few others. We have always had this crowd with us and perhaps we always shall. Certainly it is a tribute to human tolerance that our homicide list is so comparatively short each year.

A GOOD INVESTMENT.

The City Council at its first meeting this year passed the usual grant to the Trent Waterway Development Association.

The Examiner is satisfied that this annual investment of $400 in this organization is good business for Peterborough.

The Trent Waterway Development Association differs from the Ontario Tourist Association in that, while the latter's mission is to bring visitors into Ontario, the former seeks to bring them in this particular district, and Peterborough and every other municipality along the waterway benefits accordingly.

The tourist traffic now ranks as the third largest source of Canadian revenue, being surpassed only by agriculture and forestry, and no municipality can afford to ignore the possibilities offered by this traffic, which the annual report of the Secretary of Commerce at Washington admits left two hundred millions in Canada last year, an estimate incidentally that is regarded by Canadian authorities as exceedingly conservative.

We in this district got a big share of this traffic in 1927, and the publicity campaign of the Trent Waterway Association must in a large measure be given credit for that showing.

There is every reason to believe that the organization will be even more successful in this respect during the coming summer.

THE COMMON TASK.

Worthy of note in connection with the inaugural meeting of the City Council this week was the fact that three former Mayors showed their interest in municipal affairs by addressing the meeting and discussing some of the problems of the day as they appeared to them.

There was a spirit of helpfulness about this action that could profitably be developed and expanded.

There is every reason why not only ex-Mayors but citizens generally should concern themselves more closely with what is after all their own business, seeing that the civic government is merely carrying on for the rest of us and managing the affairs of the city for the whole community.

That is an aspect of municipal government that is too often overlooked.

We persuade men to become candidates for office, fifty per cent. of us or so turn out and vote, and then when they have been placed in office we wash our hands of the whole responsibility and adopt a critical attitude toward those who have been public-spirited enough to undertake a very vital public service.

In another article on this page today there is a reference to the twenty-four Community Leagues operating in the city of Edmonton.

A few of these organizations in Peterborough lined up behind the municipal government and keen to assist in every movement aimed at the betterment of local conditions generally, would do much to speed this city on its way to greater progress and prosperity.

CANADIAN COAL FOR CANADIANS.

The Examiner is glad to note that the campaign to render Canada less dependent upon outside sources for her fuel supply is still being carried on, a particularly effective contribution being that of the Federation of Community Leagues at Edmonton, Alberta, whose action in sending out thousands of New Year cards containing resolutions for the use of all Canadians will do much to keep the question to the fore.

The card reads as follows:

"We resolve—

"To develop the great coal resources of Canada.

"To encourage the use of Canadian coal by Canadians.

"To rectify present conditions which prevent railway shipment of Canadian coal owing to high freight rates.

"To urge that investigation has revealed the possibility of lower rates without loss to the railways or payment of subsidy by the Government.

"To call upon the Federal Government for immediate action in instituting a freight rate that will permit the general shipment of Canadian coal and its sale in Canada at reasonable prices.

"To write to our friends and particularly to Federal Ministers and members of the House of Commons, asking for their co-operation in this great national undertaking."

By the way, this Federation of Community Leagues is an unique organization on its own account.

Edmonton, in this respect, is peculiarly fortunate, inasmuch as practically every district in the city can boast of its Community League, having for its object the educational, social, municipal and general uplift of the citizens.

There are twenty-four such leagues in all in the Alberta city, and they, as well as the service clubs and other organizations, are all enthusiastically behind the movement for securing greater consideration for Canadian coal.

PRAIRIE POPULATION.

If anyone is disappointed by the rather slow growth of the population of Manitoba in the last five years, he should bear in mind that Manitoba now has very formidable rivals in its younger sisters, Saskatchewan and Alberta. Between 1901 and 1911, while Manitoba's population increased from 255,211 to 461,394, that of Saskatchewan grew from 91,279 to 492,432, and that of Alberta from 73,022 to 374,295. At the end of the next decade Manitoba had 610,118 people, Saskatchewan 757,510, and Alberta 588,454. Saskatchewan now has a long lead over the older Province as a wheat-growing region, and this would mean a larger agricultural population. In Manitoba the larger increase has been in the urban districts, especially Winnipeg. Those who are apprehensive about foreign immigration may take comfort from the statement that out of 639,056 people in Manitoba 528,016 are British-born, including 422,396 native Canadians. It remains to be seen whether the building of the Hudson Bay Railway and the mining development now in progress will accelerate the rate of increase in population.

At the beginning of the present century there were fewer than 420,000 people in the territory now covered by the three Prairie Provinces. In 1921 there were more than 1,955,000, and at the present time there must be considerably more than two millions, or about five times the population of 1901. Perhaps so rapid an increase will not be maintained as the Provinces are filled up and good land becomes harder to obtain. But in making predictions about the growth of Canada the optimist has fared better than the pessimist up to this time, and history may repeat itself.—London Advertiser.

YOUR DAILY NEWSPAPER.

Your daily newspaper is a living force, for life is news in motion, says a writer in "The Canadian Daily Newspaper." Life and news react to each other and by lifting the blanket of ignorance between men, communities and nations the newspapers hasten humanity's progress towards social, intellectual and moral improvement which is the goal of civilization.

It is you and your friends who make daily newspapers in Canada the force they are, because your hunger for news is never sated. The newspaper which preached, "propagandaed" and amused alone would not endure a month. It is the news—the doings, the thoughts, the weaknesses—all the pageant of human life today that people crave and must have.

There is social news, sporting news, financial news, religious news; and also there is news of buyirig and selling in the retail markets which is told in our advertising columns. Our whole Canadian family of ten million persons reads this news in some form. At such times as these holidays, no news is more closely studied; but all the year around the life of the world is spread before this family and beside it is told the life of the shops and the markets.

Why do we persistently remind you of these things? Because as the Canadian families grew in number, the Canadian daily newspapers have grown proportionately in circulation; because the daily newspapers alone can unify these two great classes of news and bring them into the Canadian homes; because every growth in Canada's population and daily newspapers brings you growth in trading opportunity. It is well for every trader to be a student of such basic, economic connections.—Niagara Falls Review.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Perhaps it would be just as well to obey the advice of The Border Cities Star, which remarks, "Don't hock your ear-muffs yet."

Canadian winters have a refreshing variety. One year wolves are reported and the next caterpillars come to the fore.

Several Ontario municipalities are discussing the advisability of establishing airports. Here is one case in which Peterborough seems to be several laps in front of the field.

Toronto should not suffer from a paucity of fights this year with Belanger defending his flyweight title and Sam. McBride in the Mayor's chair.

The surprising thing about the Hornsby trade was that New York didn't take the whole Braves club in exchange for the "Rajah."

They say that when the mysterious Mister X visits the Poultry Show he finds even the hens laying for him.

If the mild weather continues much longer some of the local golfers will be unable to restrain themselves. The careful wife will see that the bag of clubs is well hidden.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, January 12 (Canadian Press). — There was an improved demand from English importers for Canadian oats here yesterday, and a moderate amount of business was done. There was also some demand for ocean grain room here, and engagements were made to Hamburg at nine cents per hundred pounds, and several loads were also booked to other ports.

Locally a fair trade was done in certain grades of oats for export account, and the market in this respect was a little more active, but the trade in car lots was quiet. The tone was steady, and prices were unchanged.

Prices for all grades of spring and winter wheat flour were well maintained under a quiet demand.

The millfeed market continued fairly active, and prices were firm. A fair amount of business was again done in standard grades of rolled oats, and the undertone was steady.

There was no further change in prices for fresh eggs, but the undertone was easy owing to the continued liberal offerings from both Ontario and British Columbia. In wholesale way British Columbia extras were offering here at 48c per dozen, and Ontario extras at 46c per dozen. A fair trade was done in a jobbing way and prices were steady. The receipts were 474 cases.

A little business was transacted in potatoes, and prices were unchanged. Car lots of Prince Edward Island Green Mountains were quoted at $1.15 per bag of 90 pounds, Prince Edward Island White potatoes at $1.05 per bag of 90 pounds, New Brunswick Green Mountains at $1.00 per bag of 90 pounds in bulk, and New Brunswick White potatoes at 95c per bag of 90 pounds in bulk, ex-track.

The market for imported beans was quiet, but a steady feeling prevailed for car lots of choice white handpicked at $2.65 per bushel, ex-track, and for smaller quantities at $2.75 per bushel, ex-store.

The demand for butter was again confined to small lots and prices ruled firm. The receipts were 71 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, January 12 (Canadian Press). — Corn led an all-around advance in grain prices yesterday. Buying of all cereals was more general and vigorous than for some time. Improvement of cash demand for corn was an outstanding feature, and there was much notice taken of a trans-Atlantic estimate that European importing countries would require 69,000,000 bushels of cor from the United States, as liberal amounts of wheat and rye.

Closing quotations on corn were strong, ⅝c to 1¼c net higher, with wheat ½c to ⅝c to ¾c to ⅞c up, corn showing ½c to ⅝c to ¾c advance, and provisions unchanged at 10 cents down.

Wheat rose with corn after an easier start. Better demand for red winter wheat acted as a stimulus, with premiums 2 cents to 4 cents higher and with millers taking increased amounts out of store. Estimates of flour stocks in the hands of bakers and distributors showed a big reduction from a year ago, dry weather complaints from domestic winter crop territory continued, and the Australian wheat crop was officially confirmed as 55,000,000 bushels smaller than last year.

Oats followed corn and wheat up grade.

Scattered selling eased down the provision market.

A Thought

THAT SUPERSTITIOUS SENSE

Some men are full of a supersitious sense. They seem to think that activity, aggressiveness, and pep are all that are necessary to build a business.

They seem to think that dash and go is the best evidence in the world that they will go.

A steady-going, constantly growing success is more often due to the many hours of quiet, silent study that have been given on the ways and means—on planning work ahead of the time when you must work your plans.

The man who is always in a passion to push things along, always in a rage to get more and more results—the man with a mania for volume of business, often gets his pep ahead of his plans.

The epochs in our business life are not in the visible activities, but in the silent, meditative moments when we often think things through and reverse our plans—plans that are more permanent that the much-talked-of eagerness and enthusiasm.

One hour of intelligent and previous planning is worth several hours of hustle and bustle that brings so much of confusion and cross-purposes the next day.

We make a great showing with our ambition, but we get greater results with plans that have been previously and carefully thought through.

Wise and Otherwise

The public should know more about mental hygiene, says an alienist. What we need, maybe, is a few more murder trials.

The year has seen quite a little flying by the ladies—both away from their husbands and at them.

We had just about gotten rid of the Chinese war when a man named Skjellerup had to go and discover a comet.

AVIATOR STOPS REBEL ASSEMBLY

Bombs Parties Gathering Near Quilali, Killing Nine Men.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Jan. 12.—(Canadian Press).—Rebels attempting a concentration four miles north of Quilali in the Province of Neuva Segovia yesterday were attacked by a United States airiplane commanded by Major Ross Rowell, nine of the rebels being killed and three wounded.

The marines occupy Quilali and the careful watch for any attempt of the Sandino forces to make a sudden raid led to the discovery of the rebel contingents assembling from various quarters for an assault on the town. Flying over the groups, Rowell dropped bombs and dispersed them. He said he might have done much more execution had he so desired.

MEMBER ELECTED.

W. A. Sanderson Re-elected Chairman of Marmora Public School Board.

MARMORA, Jan. 12.—At the meeting of Marmora Public School Board held on Monday, Mr. W. A. Sanderson was re-elected chairman and with Rev. A. B. Caldwell appointed representative on the Continuation School Board.

Social Evening.

A very enjoyable social evening combining games, contests and choice refreshments was held by St. Paul's Senior A.Y.P.A. on Monday evening. Next Tuesday is missionary night for the branch. An illustrated address on mission work among the Indians in the Peace River district is promised by the rector of Rawdon, Rev. M. J. Levason.

IT'S NOT HARD TO GROW THIN

People all about you can testify to that. Most of the slender figures seen today have been won in easy ways. Many have been won by Marmola prescription tablets, based on a modern scientific discovery. People have used Marmola for 20 years—millions of boxes of it. Now slender figures in almost every circle show what Marmola does.

A book in each box of Marmola gives the formula and states the scientific reasons for results. So users realize how and why effects are beneficial. A way which has done so much for so many deserves a test from you. Make it now, watch the results for a little while, then decide. Ask your druggist today for a $1 box of Marmola.

THE FUTURE OF PETERBOROUGH

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir: Much might be written regarding the future of this city, and I feel confident that every citizen would rejoice over the prospect of it one day becoming important, populous, and rich.

This may seem prospective. But is it not within the bounds of possibilities?

At present it may well be called a manufacturing city. But when we take account of its situation, surrounded and supported by a good farming country, with ample room for many more industries which would give employment and support to many.

Every means of transportation with educational advantages which rank the highest, would it be bold to forecast any limit of its attainments in the coming years?

This city is now rising from a state of stagnation which has gripped it in the past, and its guidance at present is not an easy task. Much hard spade work will have to be done to overcome existing conditions, and formulate a large practical policy for reviving and retaining municipal prosperity.

It is human to desire numbers and wealth and thriving industries—much these contribute to a city's development.

But we also need quality, contentment and soundness of growth; these with ideas and ideals that are nigh will give a well-balanced citizenship that will add much to a city's greatness.

Referring, Mr. Editor, to a recent editorial in your paper I heartily agree with you: That every citizen should co-operate with the men who have been chosen to represent us, and feel that they are shareholders in the municipal organization, and with a community spirit working together for a bigger, better, and greater Peterborough.

Regarding the future of Peterborough, I will stake my convictions that a careful, wise administrative policy will give direction to its possibilities.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for space in your valuable paper.

I remain, Yours, respectfully,

THOS. E. SARGEANT

Uncle Wiggily

By HOWARD R. GARIS

To-day's Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE LONG FISH

(Copyright, 1927, McClure Syndicate.)

Uncle Wiggily and the fuzzy Tickle Bug stood looking at Jingle Longtail, the little rabbit girl who was crying.

"Come dry your tears, my dear," said the bunny daddy kindly. "There are worse things in the world than lost dolls."

"Oh, but I loved Blinky so!" sobbed Jingle. "She was the loveliest doll I ever had—and now she's gone—boo, hoo!"

"I am going to help you get Blink back," said the Tickle Bug.

"But how can you when I dropped her down through a hole in the ice on the duck pond?" Jingle asked.

"I shall find a way!" said the jolly Tickle Bug. "It is my work in life," he went on, lifting one fuzzy leg after another as he sat on a little dried toadstool in the middle of the room. "As I told you father," he added, "as a rule I don't work at my trade of making folks jolly in December, as that is Christmas month, and it makes everybody happy anyhow. But I am going to work 'specially hard, Jingle, to make you happy now."

"Oh, I know I ought to be happy in Christmas month," sighed the little rabbit girl, "but I didn't think I'd lose Blinky. I call her that name," she explained, "'cause she blinks her eyes when she is going to sleep."

"A very good name," agreed the Tickle Bug. "But tell me how you lost your doll and then I shall tell you how to find her."

"I was walking home across the duck pond, which is frozen over," said Jingle, "and, all of a sudden, I came to a place where there was a hole and I could see water there. I jumped away in a hurry, for I didn't want to fall through the ice, but I dropped Blinky and she fell in!"

"It is too bad," said Uncle Wiggily, kingly letting Jingle take his birchbark handkerchief on which to dry her tears. "But maybe Santa Claus will bring you a new doll for Christmas."

"Oh, that will be lovely!" sighed Jingle. "But I would like my old doll Blinky back, just the same."

"And you shall have her!" buzzed the Tickle Bug. "Come on!" he called to Uncle Wiggily. "Bring a hook, a sinker and a long line."

"Oh, are you going to fish through the hole in the ice for my doll?" cried Jingle, suddenly stopping her crying.

"That's what I'm going to do!" said the Tickle Bug. "Come on."

So Uncle Wiggily, Jingle and the Bug hurried to the duck pond. The rabbit gentleman had found the Tickle Bug a little while before, when Uncle Wiggily was running away from the Bear. The bunny had hidden in a hollow log to get away from the bad chap, as I told you. And, finding some acorns in the log, Mr. Longears fooled the bear into thinking they were chocolate drops So the Bear ran after the acorn chocolates, and Uncle Wiggily ran home. On the way he met the Tickle Bug who made everyone happy except in December, and then everyone was happy anyhow, for that is Christmas month.

"Is this the hole where you dropped your doll?" the Bug asked Jingle when they stood upon the ice.

"Yes, that's the place," answered the little rabbit girl, pointing a paw at the hole. "Blinky slipped right down there."

"Then I'll just lower the hook on the end of the line down in the same hole," said the Tickle Bug. "The hook will catch in Blinky's dress and I can pull her up.

A big fish stuck his head up.

But just as he and Uncle Wiggily were lowering the hook, a big long fish, whose name was Mr. Pickerel, stuck his head up through the hole in the ice and asked:

"Are you trying to catch me?"

"We are trying to catch Jingle's doll," said the bunny politely.

"Well, that sharp hook might catch me or some of my friends," spoke the long fish. "So if you will pull it up out of the water, I will swim down to the bottom and see if I can find the little rabbit girl's doll."

"That's a fine idea!" buzzed the Tickle Bug. The hook was laid aside. Down swam the fish and, in a few moments, up he came swimming again with the lost doll Blinky in his mouth.

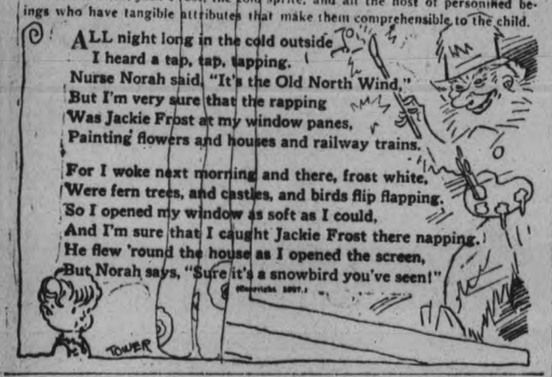
"Oh, how happy I am!" sang Jingle, as she took Blinky from the mouth of the fish. "Trank you, Mr. Pickerel."

"You are quite welcome!" the long fish answered. Then he swam away, Jingle hurried home to put dry clothes on her doll and Uncle Wiggily and the Tickle Bug followed. For the Tickle Bug was to spend Christmas month in the hollow stump bungalow with the Alarm Clock Cricket, who was a friend of his. So everything happened for the best, you see.

Jackie Frost

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS.

WHEN we wake on a clear, cold morning and find the window panes encrusted with wonderful landscapes, delicate flowers and lacy patterns we know Jack Frost has been there. He is, of course, only the sprite of the cold, but children and grown-ups, too, for that matter, like to personify all possible things until they assume very real proportions. Children especially find it difficult, if not impossible, to think in the abstract. All things are compared to something they know and endowed with material form or personal attributes. Behold, for instance, Santa, the Christmas spirit; Fairies, the helpful spirits; Brownies, the mischieous ones; Jack Frost, the cold sprite, and all the host of personified beings who have tangible attributes that make them comprehensible to the child.



ALL night long in the cold outside
I heard a tap, tap, tapping.
Nurse Norah said, "It's the Old North Wind,"
But I'm very sure that the rapping
Was Jackie Frost at my window panes,
Painting flowers and houses and railway trains.

For I woke next morning and there, frost white,
Were fern trees, and castles, and birds flip flapping.
So I opened my window as soft as I could,
And I'm sure that I caught Jackie Frost there napping.
He flew 'round the house as I opened the screen,
But Norah says, "Sure it's a snowbird you've seen!"

SONG SERVICE MUCH ENJOYED

Main and Echo Choirs Take Part in Omemee Program.

IN UNITED CHURCH.

OMEMEE, Jan. 12.—To lovers of music and singing the song service in Trinity United Church provided a rare treat. The regular choir was composed of eighteen voices. The echo choir, seated in the gallery, comprised about the same number and a group of Sunday School juniors occupied the centre front pews. Two familiar numbers were rendered by each choir, and the hymns selected for the entire congregation were well-known favorites, such numbers being used as "Jesus Keep Me Near the Cross," "For You I Am Praying," "Why Do You Wait, Dear Brother," "Pass Me Not, O Gentle Saviour," "Will Your Anchor Hold," "Blessed Assurance," and others.

After a few minutes talk by the pastor, in which reference was made to Moody and Sankey, the great evangelists, Mr. Rowland and Messrs. A. Stinson, Cyril Elliott and T. McCammon rendered very sweetly a composition by Mr. Sankey, "When the Mists Have Rolled in Splendor." Later, the same quartette evoked much pleasure by the rendition of "The Old Wayside Cross," with solo by Mr. McCammon.

Miss Mary Lowe contributed a pleasing vocal number, entitled "Haven of Rest."

As a fitting climax to the service the entire congregation joined heartily in the singing of "O Happy Day."

SOUNDS REASONABLE

"I got it at last!" shrieked the inventor. "I'll make a fortune."

"What is it this time?" asked the friend.

"Just a little device, but it will bring in millions. Every church in the country will buy one. It's a collecting box with different slots for different coins. All silver money falls on velvet, while coppers drop on a big bell."—Tit-Bits.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

DISTRICT CHURCHES.

GILMOUR MEMORIAL CHURCH.

"Enoch walked with God, and he was not for God took him," Gen. 5—24, was the text chosen by the Rev W. S. Edgar, in the Gilmour Memorial Church on Sunday morning.

Mr. Edgar said, "Enoch walked with God." How sweet and gracious is the record appearing as it does in the midst of a catalogue of dry and insignificant names. It is like coming across a living tree in a lumber yard. It is like an oasis in the desert waste. It is like a bit of cultivated farmland on a ragged moor, or the tinkling of living water beside the hot and dusty road. All the surroundings are dull and monotonous, and speak of death, but here is a welcome change, a record that is joyous and gladsome and speaks of life and immortality. "Enoch walked with God." How brief and yet how significant and full is this verse. We don't require a very strong imagination to fill in the rest. He walked with God, it was not so much a following as a fellowship, not so much a discipleship as a companionship, a keeping step together, a walking side by side. And therefore I say though the details of his life and circumstances are not made known to us, it is not difficult to realize what he was as father, husband, brother, neighbor, teacher, friend. We know where Enoch was when there was need in the next homestead. We know who was out of bed first, when there came an urgent call at midnight. We know how the servants tarried to old age in his service. We know how the atmosphere cleared when he came into the room. We can see his benevolence in seasons of joy, his self-forgetfulness in times of grief, his long enduring patience, with the dull and slow, his ready forgiveness to the penitent wrongdoer, and his quenchless hope imparted to those in despair.

We hear a great deal in these days of the power of environment moulding the character of the individual. Well, regarding Enoch, we can only say that his environment was not congenial to his walk with God, his surroundings were all against him, for in his day the world was in a state of great wickedness and almost universal unbelief. The terrible sinfulness that culminated in the flood had already begun to spread itself over the face of the earth, but Enoch seemed to rise clean out of his surroundings, never allowed himself to be drawn away from the great purpose of his life. The evils, the vanities, and frivolities of life utterly failed to divert his gaze from Him in whose smile he basked continually. He seemed to live in a world all his own, and was listening to music much sweeter than anything the world could supply; drinking at perennial fountains, fresher and purer than any to be found on the earth. He walked with God in spite of prevailing wickedness, and not only so, but he walked with God without many of the aids that you and I have to help us in our Christian life. He had no Bible wherein to read of God's wonderful sustaining promises, or to act as a light in dispelling the gross darkness that was surrounding him. How poor and weak many of our Christian lives would be, were it not for our Bibles. How often its counsel has come to us at the right moment and prevented us making grievous mistakes. How often has it imparted strength to us in moments of weakness, in the midst of temptation.

Enoch also had to walk with God, without the aid of public worship, and the fellowship of kindred spirits. It is wonderful how helpful we Christians can be to one another, how we can stimulate one another to stranger faith and provoke one another to good works. Now, these drawbacks against which Enoch had to contend renders his walk with God the more creditable and remarkable.

Here we have two things: first, the wonderful fact recorded, "Enoch walked with God"; second, the strange and signal honor conferred on him. "He was not for God took him." (1) The wonderful fact recorded. "Enoch walked with God." A brief and simple statement of a momentous fact. Of course the meaning is that he was an eminently good man, and lived a righteous life. There are many expressions in Scripture to represent a righteous life; among others there are two very significant and often used that fitly describe its two general aspects, "Waiting upon God," "Walking with God," "Waiting upon thy God continually," "Walking humbly with thy God." The one sets forth the heavenward and the other the earthward aspect of religion. In the one, man is the dependent, trustful, supplicating creature, in the other he is the active energetic agent. We all speak of men's ways and walking. We mean their conduct, the mode in which they carry themselves. All men have ways, all men walk somehow. The difference between men morally and spiritually is not between walking and not walking, but between walking rightly and wrongly. Some walk after the spirit and others after the flesh. Some walk in darkness, others in light. True religion is walking with God. We are meant to walk with someone. We are social as well as active beings. Solitary journeying is sorrowful journeying. Company gives safety as well as cheer, beguiles the long hours and stimulates the flagging spirits.

(2) The strange and signal honor conferred upon him. He was not, for God took him. It is not said how, when, or where the event took place, whether with or without attendant circumstances, alone or in the presence of others, suddenly or after notice, though the natural impression of the words is that of a quiet solitary and unexpected removal. But it matters little how a man goes to God. The going at all is the grand thing. I know not how it strikes you, but I always feel when reading this passage as if there was a beautiful fitness in this exit. God took him who had walked with him, and bore him away to another sphere. The very silence of the historian aids the impression, there is no breach between the earthly and the heavenly life, no defined horizon, clouds, and sky, fields, hills, and woods meet, and this world's beauty and the glory of the world above melt into each other, and one unbroken scene fills and satisfies the eye. He was with God here, he is with God there. He became more and more divine in the lower and harder condition of life and now he has reached a state where nothing exists to check or disappoint his God-ward aspirations. He became more and more separate from the evil, which, like a serpent's trail, is ever all below, and more and more akin to the good which is in its perfection.

Now you will notice that the rule of this fifth chapter is he died, the exception is, he should not see death. By faith Enoch was translated that he should not see death. Enoch was the seventh from Adam, and it is deeply interesting to find that death was not suffered to triumph over the seventh; but that in his case God interfered and made him a trophy of his own glorious power over death. The heart rejoices after reading six times the sad record, "he died," to find that the seventh did not die, and when we ask, "how was this," the answer is, "by faith." Enoch lived in the faith of his translation and walked with God three hundred years. This separated him practically from all around and made him a fit subject for such a signal honor.

Some people ask is it possible for us to walk with God to-day. I believe it is and I believe there are many who are doing this. They do not move in the limelight of the garish world. They are far remote from the noisy highways of vulgar publicity. They are "as violets by a mossy stone half hidden from the eye."

They please God and drink of the river of this pleasure, upon them rests the beauty of the Lord. They adorn the obscure sphere, the place of their feet is glorious. So I have brought them before you this morning that we may have fellowship with them as with their Lord. We can be indifferent to the blare of the trumpets of fame, it matters little whether that sounds, or is silent, for this shall be their lasting fame and the commendation which is beyond all earthly praise if, when our days and years are ended, we hear a voice from heaven saying, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

BOOK REVIEW

"RELIGION IN THE SCHOOL CURRICULUM"

By JOHN BLEADON MEYER.
(By Jeanette)

This little book, written by John Bleadon Meyer, B.A., D.D., whom many in the city will remember as a resident for a short time in Peterborough, some years ago, owes much of its attraction to a quality probably quite unsuspected by the author; a sort of naive, fine simplicity of appeal to the better instincts and the higher reasoning powers of its readers. Although written, as the Preface states, with the needs of teachers particularly in mind, it also aims to give a broad idea of a very beautiful type of religious belief, quite separated from sectarianism. It is, in brief, a small work devoted to "The Sacramentalism of Common Things," a phrase that is mouth-filling enough and yet is quite understandable when it is realized that the author is trying to make apparent the working of the power of God and hence, religion, through every atom and varied phase of life. Quoting Dean Inge, in "Christian Mysticism," he says: "From the standpoint of religion and philosophy the important change in the belief of later mystics is the idea that the natural and spiritual are somehow or other to be reconciled; the external world is no longer regarded as a place of exile from God, or as a delusive appearance; it is the living vesture of the Deity; and its 'discordant harmony,' though 'for many for the wise' which pseaks of things it needs interpreters,' yet 'has a voice behind the veil. The glory of God is no longer figured as a blinding white light in which all colours are combined and lost; but is seen as a 'many coloured wisdom.' its varied hues appearing not only in the sanctuary of the lonely soul, but in all the wonders that science can discover, and all the beauties that art can interpret."

Speaking of the union of religious and secular instruction in the tuition of the child, the author says: "Religion is not a department of life, but enters into all life. It will serve its purpose best in school if linked to the whole school course. We know that many in the Public School work have a vision of a broader religious teaching, the necessity of which in schools will soon be fully recognized, leaving only the finer distinctions and usages to the churches."

The author goes on, in short chapters, to take up the idea of religion as linked with subjects taught in school. He says: "It is the drowsy and muddy spirit of superstition which is fain to set some idol at its elbow, something that may jog it and put it in mind of God," which is a quotation from the works of John Smith, and is a portion of the foreword to the chapter on Language, which deals with the spiritual and invisible meaning of words, and the way in which words are adapted to a spiritual sense through the analogy of the spiritual quality to the material quality for which the word stands, and which is therefore sacramental of the spiritual quality. An instance of this is in the word "straight," which is used to describe a road that takes the shortest way, as it is used also to describe an honest man.

In the chapter on Physics, the author speaks of the idea of the Creator in making everything according to a moral ideal, and His expression of this ideal in physics and elemental things, so that His morally free creatures might perceive these ideals in them, and in so doing develop their own minds, and moral natures after the likeness of His.

"The supposed antagonism between science and religion only exists in little minds among the professors or would-be-champions of either subject," is a preface to the chapter on Mathematical and Natural Laws, in the first sentences of which the author alludes to the sacrament of reliability and faithfulness of God evidenced in the manner in which natural laws bring the regular order of day and night, the rotation of the seasons and the invariable exact result of the combination of certain numbers. "All of these things point to the care of the All-Soul for His creatures."

He finds also, in the chapter on Physiology and its teaching, a relation between the beauty and charm of the physical body and the desire of God that His creatures shall be workers of good, rather than evil.

"The God who is living in all nature and expressing Himself in all activity is surely revealed in the human face; and where else has He so fully expressed His love, truth, tenderness and patience? Thus, human beauty is the sacrament of Divine as well as of human goodness. Divine Truth, the Christ, is by nature and potentially in all humanity."

The chapter devoted to The Teacher opens with a quotation: "The reason there is so much mechanical, empty, forced teaching today is just because men and women have nothing to teach. No vital life-giving belief, no personal knowledge of the thing to be taught thrills their souls until it must be said."

He goes on later in this chapter: "What we are trying to make clear is, that we could have a really great and infinitely worth while religious training of the mind, in the school, based solely on natural and human experience, the things which the curriculum professes to deal with; and without teaching at all on the dogmas which divide Christian from Christian and Christian from Jew; such as the modus operandi of the sacraments and ordination; and the divinity of Christ.

"Further, it is high time that it were realized that that new conception of education, which views it not as the imparting of information, but as the training of mental powers, has a vital bearing upon this subject. For, granting that a religious apprehension, in the presence of nature and life, is one of these mental powers requiring training and development; and that this consciousness, if real at all, must enter into every state of mental life; is it not evident that a system of education which wholly disregards its existence is in every point deficient?"

"Again, the right time and way to teach religion is in connection with other subjects and not as a separate department; for religion is evidently a relation-to and interpretation-of all life and the whole universe; and if genuine enters into everything, and this with an intensity proportioned to its fullness and depth in us. It cannot, then, be confined to church services and certain specified classes. The result of this method is to give the impression that God is separate from His world; an impression all too common and doing incalculable evil today. Even the building of fine churches, necessary as they are, if not carefully guarded, can minister to this secularization of common things, this shutting out of God from His own world. Even as things are now, it is not right, for instance, to classify books as religious and secular. There is religion, good or bad religion, in all stories. You simply can't shut it out. In the more scientific books too, it is there, though it may take the religious mind to see it. Any study of natural history or mineralogy seems to me full of religion, because I approach it from the standpoint of the Book of Job."

"The general inference I wish to draw is, that while a specialist in religious literature or biography or history would be valuable, where one could be had, nevertheless the most essential religious teaching can best be given and should be given by the regular teachers, and in conjunction with the regular subjects, such as language, natural history, physics, mathematics, literature and history, and especially physiology."

An idea advanced in the chapter headed Parable and Pantomime is the teaching of religion by acts, such as was done so often by Christ in His healing miracles, and a recommendation is made for this type of pantomimic teaching through well-chosen plays which picture the truly human passions and great moral problems.

In the chapter entitled "The General Witness of God's Out-of-Doors," the author speaks of the revelation of God contained in a flower or in a landscape, and this chapter unfolds a theory which is, perhaps, the central idea of the whole book; the idea that God, in creating the Universe, was aware and cognizant of the facts of evil, sin and suffering, and gave mankind free will in order that, being enabled to choose the wrong, they might rather choose the right, and thus merit a higher reward. With the creation of suffering both in humans and in the lower orders, was also the creation of a capacity for unselfish love, which finds joy in sacrifice. The idea that God also suffers with His children is expressed here, that the crucified Christ on Calvary still throws a loving shadow over a suffering world.

Again, comes the idea that evil, with certain perversions excepted, is not really evil, but only a pathway provided for the soul whereby it may struggle onward and upward.

"What we claim is, that God understood what He was about, and its whole course, and His final ends when He planned this cosmos, and that because His ends, which are moral ends; the production of love or truth or character in free persons, could only be attained through including freedom in the scheme, God willed freedom, knowing well how often it would be misused and how much pain and sin was involved in the struggle forward or upward which characterized the cosmos. Moreover, He Himself remained so closely connected with the energy and life—physical, mental, moral—of it all, that He Himself struggled and suffered in it. That is to say, He never stopped creating, but is creating still."

Again, in the final chapter entitled "God and the World," a paragraph reiterates this theory:

"May we not, then, ask our readers to allow that things in nature which may give us the impression of moral physical or formal evil, as famine, blight, devastating storms; plague and disease; snakes, toads, tigers; rough and barren ground, desolate landscapes; and certain powers and instincts of human nature as the lusts of the flesh, irritability under provocation, selfishness, etc., may not really be in herently evil, but indirectly means of good, through our subduing, elevating, transforming, directing, rightly interpreting and controlling them. That is, the struggle involved, because of the ends it serves, is itself good, as these ends cannot be separated from it. For it is the way character is attained and probably the only way it can be attained.

"And may we further ask our readers to grant that while it might seem blasphemous to say that God was the author of sin or pain, or that evil is good—it is quite different to say that the relation of the good and the evil in human society may result on the whole in the production of character or moral good, and that this is what God intended."

"At any rate we are manifestly not justified in imagining God solely after our own desires. We must be prepared to learn the character, wisdom will of God from His Universe. That Universe includes suffering, pain, the abuse of free will which is moral evil. It includes, too, the interpreters of His works such as the poets, sages, prophets, Christ, the sacred Scriptures.

"Through the help of such, and his own contemplation, man's ideas have been progressively corrected, purified, elevated, as "the thoughts of men were broadened with the process of the suns."

The language employed throughout this little book is simple, direct and eloquent. On two occasions, the author uses little-known words, as "incerptible," a word used by the early English writers, derived from a Persian root, meaning to "take hold of," or "grab." Such a word is used in English as applied only to mental experience.

Another odd word is "mashal," a Hebrew word for a proverb or short parable; a similitude; a sentence or narrative founded upon the parallelism of outward and inward, material and moral, seen and unseen.

MERCHANTS SEEK TO CHECK OPERATIONS OF PEDDLERS

Keen Controversy Over Question at Meeting of Committee of House.

MERCHANTS HEARD FIRST.

People Whose Solicitors Travel Around Answer Their Arguments.

One of the keenest controversies in mercantile life to-day, namely, that between the retail merchant and the peddler or transient trader, obtruded itself into legislative circles again with the opening at the Parliament Buildings of a special investigation into the question by select members of the Municipal Committee of the Ontario House.

This issue has been an annual one before the Legislature for several years now, and its record in the past has been that of several hours of contentious discussion in committee, culminating in a year's hoist. It was with a resolve to solve in some way this unsatisfactory impasse when the House should next meet, that the Chamber last year inptructed a special committee to study the problem during the recess and presare a draft bill to deal with it.

Both sides to the controversy were represented in force before the committee, and the old arguments which frequent repetition has made familiar in legislative halls were given their strongest presentation. The retail merchants pointed out in favor of their advocacy of licensing fees to be paid by the transient traders to every municipality in which they sold goods, the fact that the transient had none of the expenses of taxation and premises under which the retailer labored. The basis upon upon which these itinerants were able to work, they claimed, was one of unfair competition, which was driving the legitimate retailer into bankruptcy.

The transient traders and peddlers, who had a strong array of eminent counsel to look after their interests, contended for their part that the injury to the retailer was not coming so much from their operations as from those of the departmental store, chain store, and mail order house. They declared that their operations generally would be impossible under the licensing plan proposed, and also offered evidence to indicate the soundness of the value which they were according to their patrons.

State Case for Merchants.

The retail merchants secured the hearing of their side of the argument first. The opening presentation of it was made by J. T. Crowder, Dominion president of the Retail Merchants' Association, who declared that the retail merchants had neither advocated nor sponsored the business tax which exists to-day, so that responsibility for the tax rested primarily with the Provincial Government. He affirmed, however, that the retail merchant was not protesting against the tax, being willing to bear his fair share of the burden of the cost of municipal services, but added that he did protest at paying taxes for the upkeep of roads, bridges, sidewalks, lighting plants, police force, hospitals, and other public conveniences in order to have them used by business men or business institutions which paid no taxes to the municipality.

Mr. Crowder pointed out that the present legislation covering hawkers and peddlers, which is not regarded as adequate, set forth certain exemptions, such as agricultural machinery, pianos, and newspapers and periodicals. The Retail Merchants' Association, he said, was willing to see these exemptions carried into the new legislation.

Hon. Mr. Finlayson, as chairman of the committee, inquired the reason for these exemptions, being unable to see why they should be granted when other articles were included.

Mr. Crowder conceded that his association did not actually favor any exemptions. "We thought," he said, "that we had to give something to get something, but the giving hurt just like losing teeth."

The retailers' case was further emphasized by a lengthy presentation from N. P. Douglas, Dominion secretary of their organization. Mr. Douglas stressed the property and business taxes which the retailer was required to pay, and pointed out that there was also a voluntary taxation to which he was subjected for the support of local charities and social life.

He continued by quoting actual examples of taxation paid by retailers. The village of Winchester and the City of Ottawa had the distinction of being chosen as the municipalities which he used to illustrate the burden under which the retailer labored. In Winchester, for example, the average tax bill of the butcher on account of business and property was $72.50, of the grocer, $126.11; of the general store, $332.98; of the jeweller, $175.06; of the furniture man, $665.46. In Ottawa the average grocer paid $378.08; the furniture dealer, $951.91; the boot and shoe merchant, $862.77; the jeweller, $1,829.28; and the departmental store, $11,542.

Mr. Douglas dwelt upon the large amount of business which peddlers and canvassers took away from the community. In order to show how many lines were affected, he quoted from the want advertisements of one day in the Ottawa newspapers, where agents were sought to handle from door to door, hosiery, neckwear, suits, watches, perfumes, soaps and drugs, and greeting cards.

Summing up the retailers' case, Mr. Douglas contended that the retailer was a necessity to the town, which could not exist if he did not serve it with his stock of readily accessible goods. In view of this necessity, it was argued that the retailer deserved encouragement and protection from the municipality, and that he deserved consideration as well for the interest which he took in the development of community life generally.

Public Not Protected.

"The principle of hawking and peddling or the sales of the transient trader," he concluded, "may well be termed 'bootlegging merchandise.' As the municipality receives no revenue from this business there is no control over the conditions of sale, and the public have no protection."

With the retailers' point of view thus broadly stated, discussion in the committee turned more upon questions of particular detail. E. M. Trowern, secretary of the Retail Trade Bureau, pointed out that so far the discussion had contended for either a fair deal for the retailer or the peddler. His idea was that provision should be made for a fair deal for the householder as well, and he would secure this by giving legal status to a small card bearing the legend "Peddlers prohibited." If the peddler ignored a card thus authorized, he would then be laying himself open to criminal prosecution. Such an arrangement, Mr. Trowern argued, would save the householders from annoyance.

Objection to the "drug store on wheels" was taken by H. E. Tapscott, president of the Retail Druggists' Association, who also voiced his organization's opposition to the plan which certain companies had of leaving a complete medical cabinet on consignment in a home, collecting periodically for only the articles used from it. General endorsation of the bill was given by representatives of the Peterborough City Council, the Hamilton Chamber of Commerce and the Retail Hardware Association.

At the afternoon session of the committee, objections to the plan of licensing commenced to be heard. J. R. L. Starr, K.C., called the witnesses for the opposition side, which included representatives of the greeting card industry, the periodical press, and various drug and tea companies.

Miss Clement, who appeared as the head of the Bovel Manufacturing Company of Ottawa, stated that her concern gave employment to 600 hawkers in various parts of Canada, the majority of whom worked in their home district. She made strong claims for the value which they afforded their patrons, and stated that in some cases the margin of profit to the manufacturer was no more than one per cent per article, so that any proposal for a license fee would be impossible to meet.

In the course of her evidence controversy developed over the relative quality of the goods sold by the hawkers and those stocked by the retail stores. Hon. Mr. Finlayson checked the argument on this point, however, declaring that it would be impsosible to arrive at any agreement upon it from the evidence which the two factions would give. Miss Clement did raise and impress upon the committee, however, the point as to whether the retailers were suffering from the inroads of the peddler upon their business, or that of the departmental stores, chain stores, and mail order houses, which represented the new trend which modern business was taking.

Greeting card manufacturers stated strongly that it would be impossible for them to operate under any licensing law. Newspaper and periodical publishers stated that they would still be able to operate, but on a reduced scale which would make the reading public the sufferer from the legislation. Merchandisers of teas were willing to have a tax, but believed that a maximum should be fixed above which the municipality could not charge. They also wanted double taxation by a county and a municipality to be effectually prevented, and they finally urged that no tax should be placed upon agents taking orders for future delivery.

Some of the teeth which are hidden in the bill suggested to govern peddlers, hawkers and transient traders revealed themselves at the second session of the sub-committee of the Legislature dealing with the proposed legislation.

Whereas in the past retailers had been solid in endorsing the project for a license fee for every non-resident trader, they commenced to suspect that perhaps they had been premature in their absolute approval and that the plan which they were favoring might operate as a boomerang to many trades.

Substantial manufacturing interests, too, appeared to combat the bill. They included the Massey-Harris Company, the Cockshutt Company, the Heintzman Piano Company, the Southam Press, the Brandes Radio Company, the Singer Sewing Machine Company, and various other companies. At the next session of the committee, the automobile manufacturers will present a brief showing that even their important industry would be seriously affected if the bill should go through in its present form.

Alternative is Discussed.

The difficulty, as manufacturers have urged and as the retailers commenced to find out, is that the bill would impose a license fee upon every salesman who went canvassing outside of the municipality in which his office was located. The breadth of the objection which this fact raises is such that it covers both retailers and manufacturers.

The agricultural implement dealer who has an office in a village would, for example, have to pay a license fee in every adjoining municipality in which he made a sale, and obviously agricultural implements are sold to only a small extent in the villages themselves. Piano, musical instrument and radio firms would suffer similarly.

Realization of the difficulty from three presentations which were made to the sub-committee members led to informal consideration of a plan of county license, to be taken out by the firm and to be authority for selling operations upon the part of any number of its agents. No conclusion was reached with regard to the practicability of such a scheme but much tentative discussion was given to the question of what the cost basis of such a license should be. The manufacturers generally intimated that they were not opposed to the taxation in principle, provided that it were fair. There was a difference of opinion, however, as to whether the cost of the license should be based upon county population or upon selling turnover.

"Closing" Salesmen Employed.

The musical instrument firms occupied largely a morning session of the sub-committee. They were represented by Earle Lawson, and their contention was that the bill in its proposed form would put their concerns out of business. They emphasized that in their business a "closing salesman" was often necessary to assist the local dealer, who might discover the prospective customer. Under the bill as proposed, however, the closing salesman would have to pay a tax in each municipality in which he operated, despite the fact that he might not visit twice in the same one in the course of the year.

It was in connection with the musical instrument and radio trade that the unhappy plight of the retailer under the bill as proposed was first emphasized. It was pointed out that the local village dealer, as soon as he went out into the agricultural community from which he secured most of his business, would be subject to tax. Agricultural implement dealers especially, who draw virtually all their business from canvassing in rural neighborhoods, realized the seriousness of this situation.

The commercial stationers, who were represented by Peter White, K.C., declared that their operations would be impossible if the act went through. They pointed out that they were selling principally account systems which could be sold only by personal calls and that they were not in competition with the retailers. Much the same argument was presented by the Southam Press, who detailed the business they had built up in advertising booklets. It was a class of business which local firms could not handle, some of the necessary machines costing as high as $30,000, but it was business which the Southam firm could secure only by canvass.

Corset Companies Give Views.

The Nu-Bone and Spirella Corset Companies made presentations, pointing out that theirs was principally a custom business and that the orders could only, accordingly, be secured by canvass. The Fuller Brush Company, of Hamilton, also declared that a license fee would seriously affect them, and Grayson Smith upon behalf of the Singer Sewing Machine Company, claimed that this concern's business also would be placed under a handicap.

Upon behalf of the Association for the Advancement of Music, Capt. Atkinson appeared and contended that the bill would increase the cost of musical instruments to the public.

During the session manufacturers and retailers complained over the principle of eliminating canvassers, so long as departmental and chain stores were allowed to send their advertising into any home without tax. Such advertisements in the newspapers, they pointed out, constituted the effective "canvassers" of these large concerns.

Almost every daily newspaper in Ontario was represented at Oshawa on Friday when General Motors of Canada held "open house" to introduce the New Chevrolet to the press. An interested visitor there at the time was Hon. W. D. Euler, Canada's Minister of National Revenue, who accompanied the newspapermen during part of their tour of the immense General Motors factories. The upper picture shows a group of journalists inspecting one of the new Chevrolets, which were greeted with enthusiasm. Below are Hon. Mr. Euler (left) and R. S. McLaughlin, President of General Motors of Canada (right), with another of the models.

At Trinity United Church, the usual Sunday school and Bible classes were held, with Mr. J. B. Hough presiding in the absence of the superintendent.

The subject for the morning was "The Surrendered Life," Rev. G. W. Rivers taking as his text, "They first gave their own selves." The choir was much better attended than usual owing to the presence of several new members.

The evening worship, beginning with a song service of several familiar hymns, was in tune with the New Year resolutions, the subject being "What we are" and "What we may become."

The hymns chosen were heartily sung, and a very helpful service concluded with the benediction.

Upward Move Prominent But Trend Is Irregular

NEW YORK, N.Y., Jan. 12 (Canadian Press).—Backing and filling movements characterized the trading in today's stock market. Upward price tendencies appeared to predominate, but the uneasiness regarding credit conditions and the immediate trend of securities prices was reflected in the marked falling off in the volume of sales. Pools staged sharp advances in a few issues, and several new peak spots cropped out.

Motors gathered strength on a prediction by President Sloan of General Motors that first quarter car sales and profits would break all records. Coppers moved under the leadership of Green Cananea, which sold at 1⅝ as against a low of 124 on Tuesday of this week. Nickel crossed 93 for a new high.

Mine Trading Is Light With Trend Downward

TORONTO, January 12 (Canadian Press). — Stocks again were inclined to lose ground on the Standard Mining Exchange this morning in lighter trading. Howey Gold sold down six at 1.65 and Dome Mines suffered a recession of 30 points. Noranda eased 20 at 21.80, and Sylvanite in active dealings lost 15 at 3.50. Losses of one to five points were shown in the following: Argonaut, Barry Hollinger, Gold Hill, Mining Corporation, Kirkland Lake, Pioneer, Wright Hargraves, and Jackson Manion. Goldale, Hollinger, Premier, and Kootenay gained fractionally.

Page Hersey Active; Toronto Stocks Firm

TORONTO, January 12 (Canadian Press). — Page Hersey was the most active stock in heavy trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day, selling up 4⅛ points at 94. Stocks were generally firm. Maple Leaf made a gain of 5⅛ at 116, while Western Canada Flour was up three at 45. MANY HEAR TALK ON SHAKESPEARE

Professor Pratt's Lecture at Y.W.C.A. Interesting and Instructive.

There was an exceptionally large attendance in the Green Room and library of the Young Women's Association last evening, for the Shakespearian lecture given by Professor A. E. Pratt, of Victoria University, Toronto, as one of the series of lectures on literature which he is giving at the "Y" this year. Mrs. E. E. Harvey occupied the chair. At the close of the address, a very pleasing musical program was rendered by Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Liddle. Mrs. Liddle, whose lovely contralto voice is always charming and effective, sang three songs of differing type, interpreting them in a manner that brought her the intent appreciation of a pleased audience. Campbell-Tipton's graceful and delicate composition entitled "The Spirit Flower" was sung first, followed by the vivacious music of "The Toy Balloon" and the plaintive melody of "An Old Refrain." Mr. Liddle played a number of attractive excerpts from "Mountain Scenes," including descriptive bits entitled "In the Canyon," "The Arbutus," and "The Burro Ride," and the musical program concluded with a fine rendering by Mrs. Liddle of the dainty song which has been set to the flowing music of "In a Monastery Garden."

Professor Pratt gave a splendid review of the story of "Romeo and Juliet," as dramatized by Shakespeare from an old poem, doing it in the space of half an hour. In preface, he gave an illustration of the contrasting manner of handling dramatic situations, as manifested in the work of Shakespeare and that of his contemporary, Marlowe, reading first an extract from the speeches of Barabbas in "The Jew of Malta," delineating Marlowe's method of awakening interest by means of narration. In character delineation, breadth of stroke, and in racial psychology, he considered Shakespeare far superior in his portrayal of the character of the Jew, Shylock, in "The Merchant of Venice."

Alluding to the dramatic fidelity of the Shakespearian type of drama, he went on to review the story of the two immortal lovers in "Romeo and Juliet," done in the type of poetic drama which is not familiar to-day, and outlining the story from the beginning, when the feud between the houses of Capulet and Montagu is described, to the final tragic scene in the death of Juliet.

Professor Pratt spoke of the contention often made by Shakespearian commentators, that the master craftsman lost a great opportunity in this play by neglecting to waken Juliet in time to see her lover die from the effects of poison, self-administered, and remarked that the play as written contained as much dramatic tension in its closing as the average audience could stand. He spoke also of the refusal by many eminent actors, including the great Booth, to finish with the shakespearian finale which narrates the reconciliation between the two warring houses, and their desire, in most instances, to conclude with the presentation of the death of Juliet.

FIELD SECRETARY VISITS MILLBROOK

Official Addresses Members of Orange Lodge on History of Order.

MILLBROOK, Jan. 12.—A special meeting of L.O.L. No. 79, was held in the Orange Hall on Friday evening, when Brother H. A. Graham, Field Secretary for Quebec and Ontario East, paid his official visit to the Lodge, and delivered an interesting and most instructive address.

The newly-elected Worshipful Master, Brother R. J. McKnight, was in the chair, and a number of visiting brethren, including the County Master, Brother Gray, of Perrytown, were in attendance.

The opening section of the Field Secretary's address was given up to a history of Orangeism, its present status and workings throughout the large territory which his office covers, and to necessary instruction in Lodge practices, and business procedure.

Mr. Graham was a delegate to the Triennial Conference held in London, England, last summer, and in the second half of his address he gave a vivid word picture of the historic places visited (including a stay at Londonderry), both in Great Britain and Ireland, and in France, during the time he was abroad.

The formal vote of thanks by Rev. P. C. Howard voiced the hearty appreciation of the Field Secretary's excellent address, and carried the suggestion that a public meeting be held, under L.O.L. auspices, when Brother Graham would be asked to repeat the 'travelogue' section, particularly, of his remarks, which had been found so entertaining and instructive that evening. This suggestion will probably be carried out within the next three or four weeks, when Mr. Graham, who is now making an official tour of the Lodges in his extensive territory, can arrange a convenient date.

The officers of L.O.L. No. 79, for 1926, are:

W.M.—Brother R. J. McKnight.
D.M.—Brother William Francey.
Chaplain—Brother W. T. A. Deyell.
R.S.—Brother R. J. McDonald.
F.S.—Brother Roy Hunter.
Treasurer—Brother Archie Lunn.
D. of C.—Brother J. Thompson.
Tyler—Brother J. Guthrie.
Committeemen—(1) D. Patton; (2) Wilbert Lunn; (3) I. M. Nattress; (4) W. H. Bingham; (5) T. H. Harkness.

The installation was conducted by Past County Master, Brother James Roddy, and a fowl supper was enjoyed at the close.

More copper has been produced in the last 20 years than in 7000 years previously.

50 YEARS AGO ONTARIO HAD MILD WINTER

Steamer Excursion Down River on Christmas Day Was Enjoyed.

CRICKET PLAYED.

Regattas Held at Many Places —Lawns Were Green as in Spring.

Noting the unusually mild weather of the last few weeks, many of the older residents have brought to attention conditions which prevailed as extremely rare in the course of a Canadian winter and a time when there was no snow, mild temperature, little rain but a general interference with all operations contingent with frost in the ground, such as teaming and hauling of building materials, etc., as well as work in the woods connected with the lumbering industry. Many remember the circumstances but do not agree as to the date and year, which included such freak weather. So an appeal was made to tell of the event and a fixing of the date. It came about fifty years ago, in the winter of 1877-78. Our Canadian winter is taken as including the months of and from November to the end of April following. October is considered a "fall" month, it presenting all the varieties of temperature from balmy warmth to snow and ice.

A glance at records show that throughout November and December there was only a trifle of snow, which speedily melted. For several weeks following there was a sort of deferred Indian Summer weather, the temperature never lower than sixty-five degrees. This condition extended throughout December and on into January, up to the middle of that month, but in February full winter conditions prevailed. While the soft warmth was a grateful thing for people in the towns, it played havoc with work, such as teaming and carrying of supplies to the lumber camps. Reports came in that the "cadge roads" through the swamps were impassable for either sleighs or wheels. In the woods the hindrances were severe. Such trees as were felled and cut into log lengths had to be left where cut, and did not reach the creeks and streams for another twelve months.

The surprising thing was that the mild months were not at all a local feature, as applied to the district immediately around the town and in the adjacent country. Severe winter storms often affect only a limited area and cause temporary inconvenience. The area affected seems to have extended from Montreal on the east to some distance from Toronto, on the west, and back from Lake Ontario for at least eighty miles, as far north as the height of land, at which point the surface waters make their way to the Ottawa river, and not by the Trent watershed to Lake Ontario. These facts are verified by statements in the press, which are referred to further on in this article.

On Christmas Day I participated in a game of croquet on the lawn of the home of late Arthur Rutherford, after a hearty turkey dinner. The grass on the lawn was as green as if June weather were prevailing. Such summer sports as were popular were indulged in the novelty of the occasion being attractive. Calcutt's line of steamers were prepared for service some days before, and excursions held on the river, many participating. Such a trip was indeed a rare event and one to be remembered. But the general public which patronized the steamboats were not fully reassured as to what might come about and only voyaged down the river as far as Robinson's Island (the spot on the shore of North Monaghan where the Robinson immigrants spent the first night on arriving in the neighbourhood). This island, it may be remarked, has since been acquired by the city and will be held as a piece of historic ground. The excursion party returned to town before evening set in.

A game of cricket was in progress all day, on the old cricket ground, in Ashburnham, now appropriately named as Cricket Place. A prosperous looking squad from the old Rifle Company walked out the Chemong Lake road and fired off countless rounds of rifle ammunition at a target braced against the big hill to the west of the road. No casualties are recorded. A lot of the charges were blank, meant for firing of salutes, etc. and much chagrin followed as those so loaded up, let off shots, and loud shouts of "missed the target," prevailed. So bad was the marksmanship that an investigation was called for and then the facts disclosed.

Out in the townships much fall ploughing had been done, the ground, while very damp, not being trouble-some, except in clay soil. All about town the contrast of leafless trees and green grass was conspicuous. The whole thing seemed unnatural. The snow plough man had a cinch, if he existed, of which I am not sure. Country roads and town streets were much mired and cut up, especially if weights such as tons of hay and cords of hard wood formed the loads. Taken altogether the time was not a happy one. Having expected regular winter weather and gotten ready for it, people were disappointed.

I reprint, below, something that I wrote for the issue of the Weekly Review, issue of December 28th, 1877:

"Such a Christmas season as we have just experienced seems to have been unprecedented in this part of the country within the memory of man, or of the oldest inhabitants. There is no sign of ice in the river or lake, and the fact of the steamboat excursion (referred to above) at this time of the year is far from being a solitary instance, as may be seen from the items, clipped from our exchanges, all over the province within distances of Lake Ontario.

"At Belleville, the ferry steamer was advertised to make a trip to Massassagua Bay (or Point) Bay of Quinte, on Christmas Day, and a yacht race took place on the bay."

Here is an item from as far north as Ottawa. "The steamer Maude went down the Ottawa river on Christmas Day with an excursion party. She was the first steamer that ever left Ottawa dock so late in the season, the Ottawa river, as a rule, being frozen over on the 1st of December in each year."

Then Port Hope comes into the picture, with a clipping from the Port Hope Guide. "A yawl boat race came off at Port Hope on Christmas Day, over a two-mile course, on the open lake (Ontario), the competitors being the captains and sailors from the fleet of schooners laid up for winter in the harbor and at the time in port."

Farther east we have the news. "A steamboat excursion took place from Berthier to Montreal on Christmas Day, to allow the excursionists to attend midnight Mass and return the morning following."

"An excursion was given between Trenton and Picton on Christmas Day by the steamer Utica, which had been making daily trips on the Bay of Quinte, the summer and autumn season not having been interrupted."

The Toronto Globe, two days after Christmas, said: "At two or three points down the lake (Ontario) shore regattas were held. Such an open winter has not been known in this section of the country since 1837, the year of the rebellion, when, however, considerable snow fell before Christmas Day."

The Mill Point Echo was led to exclaim: "The fact of steamboats plying their usual rounds on the inland bay on the 21st of December is so clearly inconsistent with the general expectation of holiday winter festivities, and the scream of the boat whistles strikes in such a discordant wail on the ear tuned for Christmas carolling that we feel disposed to criticize the new regime and repudiate the innovation. The general appearance of the country, the aspect of the weather and our inviting thoroughfares, replete with enticing wares, indicate anything but a Canadian winter, while the gloomy forebodings as reflected in the visages of our business men betray the results apparent from this state of things. We have heard of seasons nursed in the lap of spring, etc., but the present seems more like a foundling being left to the tender mercies of an indiscriminating and indifferent community. Something's wrong. Old Boreas has either lost his overcoat or has backed out of his contract. Probably the Polar Current is dammed back and is turned from its course. A lively time may be expected in accounting for the phenomenon."

At the time we had, ministering to the public, two accredited weather prophets, Moses Oats and a Mr. Vennor. The Toronto Mail breaks into poetic enquiry by printing a screed beginning:

"Mr. Vennor, tell us whether

and so on in humble verse, the writer being distinctly peeved. But the Mill Point Echo was commercially right, for clothing dealers, who had loaded up with the usual stock of heavy winter clothing saw no outlet for the stock and grumbled. There was much speculation as to the cause of the unusual mildness. Had the Gulf Stream made its way up the St. Lawrence? Was the planet Mars exercising its fiery influence? Undoubtedly the temperature of waters, both in streams and lakes seemed in no hurry to reach the point of freezing.

made. Although it has not been announced yet which of the murderers of the woman prisoner's husband would go to the chair first, it was generally believed that Mrs. Snyder would precede Gray. Warden Lawes announced that Mrs. Snyder would be accompanied to the death chamber by two matrons, who would remain with her until the end.

The Catholic Women's League held a very successful card party and tea at St. Alphonsus Lyceum yesterday afternoon, when twenty-three tables of bridge and euchre were played and a number of ladies dropped in later for tea. Arrangements were in charge of Mrs. A. J. Reynols, Mrs. J. J. Southern, and Miss Josie Conroy. The guests were received by Mrs. F. Fairen and Mrs. T. McQuillan, with Mrs. A. Sharpe officiating as treasurer. Assisting ladies were Mrs. J. J. Lynch, Mrs. M. Henry, Mrs. W. O'Brien, Mrs. T. J. Lane and Miss M. Croft. The big assembly hall was attractive with its stage lighted with vari-colored globes and a pretty tea table arranged with a silver vase of orange marigolds, bud vases of lily of the valley, and low silver candlesticks holding tall orange candles. Tea was poured by Mrs. E. Hiland and Mrs. James J. Doris, assisted by Mrs. J. F. O'Brien and the Misses Lottie Hogan, Marcelle McNulty, Ernestine McManus and Florence Giroux. During the tea hour a pleasing musical programme was given, including a pianoforte duet by the Misses Mary Reynolds and Veronica Scollard and several violin numbers by Joseph Nolan with accompaniment by Miss Reynolds. Prizes for bridge were won by Mrs. H. Gainey and Mrs. P. J Scollard and for euchre by Mrs. M. LaPlante and Mrs. J. Dwyer. An Old Recipe to Darken Hair

By JANICE RANDALL

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or grey. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, for only 75 cents. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the grey hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy, and you look years younger.

JOLLY JINGLES By Graham Hunter

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

The fog lifted from Faith's fever-dazed brain miraculously. Even before her eyes flew open to fasten hungrily upon Cherry, cunning came to her aid. Cherry must not know the truth: that she had run away and taken another name deliberately, with the intention of killing herself. Cherry and Bob must be protected, so that when she was dead they could marry without reproaching themselves for having made her unhappy. She would pretend that she had been a victim of amnesia, that she had signed the name, "Stella Fringle," to the register because she had forgotten her own name.

The plan was born even while her eyelids were fluttering. When she opened her eyes she forced them to stare blankly at her sister, who had flung herself on her knees beside the bed. Cherry's cheeks were carnation-bright from the cold wind through which she had rushed to her sister's aid.

"She doesn't know me!" Cherry screamed, stark terror in her beautiful face. "George! She doesn't know me! What's the matter with my sister? Tell me!" The terror-widened golden eyes swept from the doctor to the nurse, then back to Faith's fever-reddened face on the pillow. Faith closed her eyes and waited.

She heard George's anxious, gentle voice speaking to the doctor: "Your patient is Mrs. Robert J. Hathaway, of Shelton. She asked me to drive her to Darrow yesterday when I accidentally came across her on the streets of Shelton. I was afraid she was not well, since she was acting peculiarly, but I did not dream it was anything serious. On thinking it over I became somewhat alarmed and tried to telephone her here at the Denham. I was told that there was no Mrs. Hathaway registered here. Early this morning I telephoned her sister, Miss Lane, and told her all I knew. Mrs. Hathaway's husband was out searching for her, and without waiting to locate him I decided to bring Miss Lane here with me."

"The manager said she wasn't here!" Cherry interrupted. "Doctor, tell me: what's the matter with my sister?"

Faith, lying very still, waited breathlessly for the doctor's answer.

"I'm afraid it's nervous collapse in an exaggerated form, with symptoms of pneumonia due to exposure," the doctor said slowly. "But I confess certain aspects of the case puzzle me. The signing of an assumed name—her failure to recognize you—her inability to answer any questions even during apparently lucid intervals—"

"But why, why?" Cherry shrilled, bursting into tears. "She seemed perfectly well Saturday, and I know she was happy. Why should Faith of all people have a nervous collapse? Oh, Faith, look at me! It's Cherry! Please, darling, speak to me! Of course you know me! Oh, I can't bear it!"

"Please, Miss Lane, don't excite her," the doctor commanded sternly. "You will only aggravate the condition. It is clear that she does not recognize you. Can you get in touch with her husband, sir?" he added to George.

Lyrics of Life - By Douglas Malloch

LIKE YOUR MOTHER

So many girls, so many kinds,
So many tastes, so many minds,
Around so many maids you tarry,
I wonder just which maid you'll marry?
For sometime you will find the one,
And when you have decided, son,
One thing I hope, somehow or other,
She's just a little like your mother.

Your mother, you remember, boy,
Is just as much a hand for joy
As any girl with rippling laughter—
But joy that brings no sorrow after.
The maidens of your father's days
Had merry hearts, yet modest ways,
I hope your choice is just another,
Is just a little like your mother.

And I don't worry such a lot
When you're with someone who is not,
With all the smoking, all the drinking,
I guess I know the thing you're thinking:
You see your mother every day,
And I feel certain, in a way,
A girl you'll wed, somehow or other,
Who's just a little like your mother.

MILLBROOK, Jan. 12. — Dr. H. A. Turner was in Beaverton on Monday attending the funeral of his aunt, Miss Sophia Turner, who passed away on Friday, Jan. 6, at the advanced age of 95 years. Dr. Howson of Peterborough, was here in charge of Dr. Turner's practice during the latter's absence.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

FRIDAY, JANUARY 13, 1928

Good and evil aspects appear in today's horoscope, according to astrology, which finds that benefic stars dominate.

In the morning the energies may be stimulated and there may be an urge toward many activities.

It is well to pursue beaten paths, for the judgment may not be reliable under this direction of the stars.

This is not a favorable sway for aviation and presages controversies in Washington regarding government policies.

Again the seers call attention to the dissemination of all sorts of propaganda inimical to the well-being of the nation.

Mental strabismus is easily brought about under this direction of the stars, which in unfavorable to all who seek public approval.

Prison patrol systems and the whole penal process of dealing with criminals will be bitterly criticised in the next few months, according to the reading of the stars.

Fashions continue subject to the sway making for more feminine fripperies and more artistic modes.

Modesty is to become desirable as the pendulum of human ideas swings backward, astrologers prophesy.

In 1928 women again will become the subjects of songs and stories that carry the thought of reverence and lasting faith.

The evening of this day is unfavorable to those who desire to win public applause. It may be most discouraging to orators as well as actors.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a happy, pleasant year in which romance may enter.

Children born on this day probably will be successful in work that demands courtesy and friendliness.

GIRLS! TELL THIS TO YOUR SKINNY FRIEND

Tell him that the quick easy way to put pounds of solid flesh on his bones is to take McCoy's Cod Liver Extract Tablets.

Tell him that besides helping him to fill out his flat chest and sunken cheeks and neck McCoy's will make him strong and vigorous and give him more ambition.

Miss Alberta Rogers, thin and run-down gained 15 pounds in six weeks.

McCoy takes all the risk—Read this ironclad guarantee. If after taking 4 sixty cent boxes of McCoy's Cod Liver Extract Tablets or 2 One Dollar boxes any thin, underweight man or woman doesn't gain at least 5 pounds and feel completely satisfied with the marked improvement in health your druggist is authorized to return the purchase price.

Ask McDermid & Jury, Giles Drug Stores, James Lynch, Bond's Drug Store or any good druggist.

DRESS By MARY MARSHALL

This short navy-blue cloth coat has beige fur collar and cuffs and is worn with beige wool skirt.

Last year they talked of shorter coats but few women actually wore them. This winter they are estensively worn by smart women in France and to an increasing extent by smart women here. And gradually we're accustoming ourselves to an outside coat that does not cover the frock entirely.

With the long coats there is a decided advantage. So long as one's frock does not swear at one's full-length coat it hardly has to be designed especially for it, but with the shorter coat there has to be a very real harmony between frock and wrap. Fortunately at present we may wear either sort of wrap and there are times when the long coat is essential.

The shorter fur coat has come in for a good deal more endorsement in France than it has in this country. Save as a distinctly sports type of garment the short fur coat is seldom seen here at present.

I have seen some of the new things for spring—and among them I have seen quite a few three-quarter and seven-eighths length coats.

There are still some folk who believe that by this time every winter spring fashions are fully agreed upon. They seem to think that somewhere here or in Paris the leading dressmakers and those mysterious personages whom they refer to as "dictators of fashion" meet in solemn and secret session and decide exactly what women are to wear.

But the more you know of fashions the more you realize that the fate of any mode lies in the hands of the women who have no professional part with clothes designing and clothes making at all.

And so with these shorter coats. They are worn by some of the very best-dressed women, and a number of the French dressmakers have faith in them, but whether they will become one of the American fashions for spring remains to be seen.

DIET A POTENT FACTOR IN EVERY DISEASE

This, the third of a series of articles in which I am explaining the part food plays in the cause and cure of all of the common disorders, brings us on down the alphabetical list to the subject next in line.

Female genital derangements many times owe their origin to a sluggish state of the blood, heavy with foreign material which congests these delicate organs, and also to pressure from intestinal gas. Relieve the fecal and gas pressure by an enema and she how quickly the discomfort disappears. The material out of which tumors are developed must come from food used in excess of the body's requirements. The same blood which deposited these excesses of morbid materials in the organs can take them away if given the opportunity by reducing the quantity of food to the smallest necessary amount.

Fevers (acute) develop only because of some poisoning of the body by toxemias, and which at times brings up these poisons in an eliminative crisis. Out of what can you generate this effete material if not from unnecessary food?

Flatulence, or excessive gas pressure, is perhaps the most common symptom prevalent with every disease. Most people are literally "walking gas factories." Out of what can you make this stomach and intestinal gas if not from food used improperly?

Gallstones are alkaline concretions which form in the gall ducts or gall bladder from the stagnation of thickened bile. This congestion of bile not only produces gallstones but also all questionably entirely from using improper food in too large a quantity. This brings on many digestive disorders, due to the reflex action of the gall bladder upon the stomach and small intestine, especially in the region of the duodenum. In many cases the most violent symptoms of indigestion are due solely to an irritated or infected gall bladder filled with thickened bile or gallstones.

Goitre (simple) is characterized by an enlargement of the thyroid gland, owing to the deposit of mineral matter from a too liberal quantity of starchy food rich in these minerals. When the thyroid is irritated, as in hyperthyroidism, in addition to this mineral deposit there is an additional cause in toxic irritation from the by-products of imperfect metabolism, due to dietetic errors.

Headaches are not usually produced by anything more mysterious than plain biliousness. It is truly remarkable how many headaches from which one may have suffered for years will disappear completely when the liver is again functioning properly. Of course, there are other causes, such as eye strain and abscessed teeth; but no matter how persistent your headache has been, do not look for any hidden reasons until you have first regulated your liver by judicious dieting.

Heart troubles of all kinds are directly traceable to excessive stomach or intestinal gas and the distention of these organs by overeating, and overdrinking of any kind of liquids. Such gassy foods as onions, garlic, cooked cabbage, baked beans, etc., must be entirely eliminated. Over-exertion with physical exercise after a meal containing these foods will frequently cause a heart strain, and often sudden death.

Questions and Answers.

Question: A. E. M. asks: "Are lemons and salt hard on the kidneys? I drink two cups of hot water with a little lemon juice squeezed into it every morning, as I have heard this was good for biliousness, but have also heard it was hard on the kidneys."

Answer: The lemon juice you take in the morning never really reaches the kidneys. All of the citric acid fruits are beneficial to the body if used properly, but no matter how used, these fruits never have any bad effect on the kidneys. Be sure to take your water and lemon juice at least thirty minutes before breakfast. This is a good stomach cleansing treatment and induces the flow of bile, but is best used far enough away from a meal.

Question: G. C. asks: "What do you think of the banana-nut combination which all health magazines recommend? Isn't this a protein-starch combination?"

Answer: Bananas and nuts do not make a good combination from the standpoint of physiological chemistry.

Question: Reader asks: "Is it possible to find out the parentage of a child by a blood test? If not, is there any other way of proving same?"

Answer: There is no accurate way of determining relationship by blood tests, although many physicians have advanced claims that they have discovered methods of proving such relationship as a child to its parents. My investigations of these claims have always shown them to be exaggerated and not accurate.

Mrs. Ambrose Orser, Elginburg, Ont., writes:—"I suffered for some time with a bad heart which seemed to be controlled by my nerves. The least little excitement would cause it to flutter and palpitate, and at times I would have real bad spells. I suffered in this way for some time when, one day, I saw

FARMERS ATTEND DEMONSTRATIONS

Killing of Sheep and Judging of Livestock Are Explained.

OMEMEE, Jan. 12.—There was a fair attendance of farmers in this vicinity at the stock judging demonstration at Omemee on Tuesday and Wednesday. This demonstration is in connection with a short course, which is being held at Downeyville and is put on by the Ontario Government through the district agricultural representative, Mr. M. H. Winters.

Mr. Winters and other experts were present and discussed thoroughly sheep-raising and wool-grading. A public demonstration was given of killing and dressing a sheep in a scientific manner and the mutton judged the following day.

An address on hogs was given by one of the gentlemen and, with specimens to illustrate it, the difference between thick smooths and selects was pointed out to good advantage.

George Street Ladies Hear Splendid Reports on Year's Work.

The January meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of George Street United Church was held in the board room of the Sunday School Hall on Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, with about seventy-five members present.

The chair was occupied by the president, Mrs. E. W. Coon, who opened the meeting with prayer.

Mrs. S. R. Armstrong read the Bible lesson, and reports of the last meeting were given by the retiring secretary, Mrs. J. W. Kelly, and approved. The quarterly treasurer's report was given by Mrs. J. Spencer, retiring treasurer, and adopted. The minutes of the executive meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. W. H. Morton, and discussed. It was decided to work in the group system as last year, and leaders for the twelve groups were appointed. Miss Might, corresponding secretary, gave her yearly report, and reports were given by Mrs. E. H. Rowe for the Mission Band; Mrs. H. Strong, secretary of the Babies' Band; Mrs. Wood, superintendent of systematic giving; Mrs. J. W. Hales, convenor of Sick and Visiting Committee; Mrs. Helson, secretary of Strangers' Committee; Mrs. F. J. Ridpath, secretary of Missionary Monthly; Miss Birnie, supply secretary; Mrs. J. E. Todd, superintendent of Young Women's Auxiliary.

Mrs. J. W. Kelly gave a very interesting yearly report, and Mrs. Spencer, the treasurer's yearly report, showing that the society had reached its allocation.

These reports were received with applause.

Mrs. J. Spencer, Mrs. J. W. Kelly, and Mrs. E. H. Rowe, retiring officers, were then asked to come forward, and Mrs. Coon spoke words of appreciation for their past services, saying she was unable to express all she would like in words, so Mrs. Harvey would "say it with flowers."

They were presented with beautiful bouquets of pink roses, and Mrs. J. Spencer, who has been the faithful treasurer for ten years, found a box containing a life membership pin concealed in her bouquet. Each replied briefly, expressing her allegiance to the cause and the joy she had experienced in helping in the Master's work.

After prayer by Mrs. J. E. Todd, the study book, "The New Frontier," was taken up in a very able manner by Mrs. Harvey.

Refreshments were served by the executive of 1927, and a social half-hour spent.

Mrs. Vaughn Walker delighted the audience with a beautiful solo, accompanied by Miss Pearl Carruthers.

Mrs. Coon, in thanking these musicians, spoke of the regret felt by the Women's Missionary Society that Mrs. Walker was leaving the city, and thanked her for being so liberal in assisting with the programs since she came to Peterborough and to George Street Church.

NEW-BUSINESS RECORD SET BY IMPERIAL LIFE

President's Report Shows $40,000,000 New Insurance Written Last Year.

The Imperial Life Assurance Company broke all its previous records in 1927, when it wrote almost forty million dollars' of new business. This was revealed at the annual meeting of the company here to-day when President G. A. Morrow and Managing Director W. F. Weston delivered their annual reports.

The new insurance issued was an increase over 1926, the previous high year of $2,734,000. The company's assets were increased by nearly $5,000,000 by the year's business to $45,242,000. $4,000,000 was credited to the policy-holders' surplus fund in addition to $4,000,000 actually distributed to policy-holders.

The cash income of the Imperial Life was over eleven millions, an increase of ten per cent. over 1926.

Mr. G. A. Morrow, president of the company, in moving the adoption of the report said in part as follows:

New Records Established.

"In the year just closed new records in the company's growth were established. In this no doubt is reflected, to some extent, the industrial expansion in Canada and the individual prosperity and enhanced spending power of the Canadian people that obtained during the year. It has been ofund, however, that life insurance production is not wholly determined by these factors but thrives also in periods of depression. We have therefore, on amounts previously written off.

"The death claims paid during the year by the company totalled $1,270,000 and although of greater amount than those of the preceding year represented a slightly lower rate of mortality than even the favorable rate of 1926.

"Our assets have also kept pace with our assurances in force and last year amounted to forty-five and a quarter million dollars, having been increased during the year by more than five million dollars.

"If we analyze the securities comprising these assets, we should find that, as has been the case for some years past, the greatest amount of new funds for investment during the year was placed in bonds and debentures.

"Our investment in stocks was increased during the year by $412,000 and now stands at $1,053,000. These stocks are carried out in our statement at their purchase price. They are all of the highest grade, an indication of which is that their present market value is $212,000 in excess of the amount at which we have taken credit for them.

"The average interest yield secured in 1927 over all our invested assets was the satisfactory one of 6.13 per cent."

Outlook.

"Leading financiers and business men, both here and in the United States, have given frequent expression to the feeling of confidence in the financial and industrial situation.

"The New Year has opened without anything of importance to mar the prospect. Our financial institutions are sound and prosperous; our factories are efficient and well directed. The great development in our natural resources is attracting world-wide attention and bringing in vast sums of money. We are blessed with a sturdy virile people, ready to take advantage of their opportunities."

HEALTH EXHIBIT

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 12—In view of its unusual success here as a means of conveying accurate health knowledge to the average person, a Health and Hygiene Exhibit, dealing in graphic form with almost every common health problem, will shortly be placed on view in other centres throughout the Dominion.

As seen in Toronto, the exhibit was the combined work of health departments, insurance companies and more than a score of health and safety agencies. The Canadian Social Hygiene Council, which inaugurated the proposal, is sponsoring the additional showings in other localities.

It was estimated that 15,543 Torontonians received free health information on their own particular problems during the twelve days on which the exhibits were open. Approximately, a quarter million pieces of literature were distributed, dealing with everything from common colds to cancer—much of this in bulk lots for schools, clubs and industrial groups. Representatives of these, after attending, had expressed a wish to continue health work in their own associations.

Fifty health officers and health workers from other cities also attended and the exhibit, as a whole, was the largest co-operative movement for better conditions, on the part of all groups interested, that Toronto has ever seen.

The exhibits, divided into sections, ranged from pre-natal and infant care to the prevention of unnecessary illness in industry, periodic health examination and health education for adolescents. There were separate sections for men and women where information concerning social diseases, was given.

Free moving pictures and lectures by outstanding medical and public health leaders were daily features and the attendance at these ranged from eight hundred to fourteen hundred.

Posters, models, pictorial displays, photographs and similar methods were used to drive home health lessons. These were supplemented by literature and free advice given by the doctors or nurses who staffed each division.

Requests have come to the Canadian Social Hygiene Council for additional showings, not only in Ontario but throughout Manitoba, Saskatchewan and the maritimes. As many of these as possible will be filled.

Exaggeration Costly.

More details concerning the effect of infectious disease on business conditions and the extravagant statements which make the rounds following even a slight outbreak are contained in a letter from Niagara Falls, N.Y., to the Toronto Convention and Tourist Association.

The writer had just heard that there were "500 cases of smallpox" in Toronto and expected that it would have a serious effect on the influx of American visitors.

What had actually happened was that one or two cases had been reported among an unvaccinated group of freshman students at Victoria College. The Toronto department of health promptly quarantined the entire group of students in that college residence and vaccinated those who had not already protected themselves. The disease was squelched—but not swiftly enough to prevent exaggerated stories being accepted as correct by a number of American editors.

Remembering what had happened in Montreal, when re-write men and feature writers created, in newspaper columns, the picture of a state of affairs resembling the black plague of history, the Toronto organization was alarmed. The business men of Montreal lost thousands upon thousands, partly as a result of the epidemic and partly due to colorful reports which were wholly unsubstantiated.

Similarly, the objections raised to vaccination in Ottawa where smallpox has also been reported have created the impression in Buffalo and elsewhere that the disease is being allowed to rage unchecked and that it has already reached dangerous proportions.

Health Work Valuable.

No disease, apparently, creates a greater amount of apprehension in the mind of the average person than infantile paralysis. Reported outbreaks, throughout the west, created a condition which might properly be termed one of alarm.

A check-up made by the Canadian Social Hygiene Council shows that the amount of newspaper space devoted to discussions of it in the Canadian press during the past few months was approximately sufficient to publish three full-length novels.

One of the most important lessons to be learned from the outbreaks of this year, says a statement from the same source, is the incalculable value of carefully organized health departments in every locality, no matter how small. It was very obvious from newspaper reports that, in several cities, the fact that the local or provincial health department, was recognized by the average citizens as a thoroughly active and efficient organization, was of immense benefit. Statements and advice from officials were accepted without question and officers were unhampered in their efforts to take proper precautionary measures to prevent the spread of the disease. If the average citizen has, through some source, received a certain amount of health education and is intelligently aware of what the public health officials in his municipality are trying to achieve, the probability of an epidemic reaching serious proportions is, beyond question, greatly lessened. Lack of confidence, under such conditions, can contribute to the creation of a dangerous situation.

The outbreaks of infantile paralysis throughout Canada were bad enough but, unchecked, they could, very easily, have caused a health catastrophe and great loss of life. The point is that they were checked and health departments took immediate—and in some cases, drastic action.

Consider what might have resulted had these officials, in coping with these cases, been faced with the same problems as have arisen in Ottawa in connection with the present smallpox outbreak. There, due to opposition to vaccination measures, the work of restricting the disease is being carried on under great difficulties.

Luckily, as far as smallpox is concerned, most communities are already adequately protected and a widespread epidemic is unlikely. But in the case of infantile paralysis, medical science has not yet advanced as far as it has with smallpox.

The infantile paralysis outbreaks or to give the correct term, the outbreaks of poliomyelitis, are not confined to Canada. They have been reported from widely scattered sections of Europe and telegraphic reports covering the United States for 14 weeks ending October 1st, show 4,570 cases compared with 1,228 for the corresponding period of 1926.

The Stirling chees box and basket factory has changed owners, the Munroe Brothers of Bancroft and Bannockburn being the purchasers. The price paid was $20,000.

The home of Mrs. W. Bailey was the gathering place of many friends of Mrs. H. Laver (nee Blanche Whitton) who showered her with many useful and valuable gifts. A very enjoyable evening was concluded with the service of refreshments.

BEEF RING MEETS.

Average Weight of Animals Brought in During Year Was 436¼.

OMEMEE, Jan. 12.—The annual beef ring meeting was held in Omemee on Wednesday evening, and after a very satisfactory season, it was decided to reorganize for another year with the following officers: President, David Weir; Secretary-Treasurer, O. G. Williamson; Butcher, S. D. Vaughan. Each animal is divided into 20 full shares, and a member has the privilege of dividing his share again. The average weight of the animal for the season was 436½ pounds, the two heaviest beef weighing 530 pounds and the lightest 365 pounds. In order that each member may receive the same value, those who contribute the light beef have to pay cash to make up the required amount. An allowance of 1½ cents a pound more is credited to the members supplying the animals at the first of the season, as the cost of fattening is higher than later in the summer.

At the close of the season, after all expenses were paid, each member drew back the sum of $8.64.

The Williams Piano

FOR a piano to be endowed with rare tonal beauty is one thing—but for a piano to retain its beauty steadfastly over a period of years is quite another. The Williams piano enjoys a universal reputation for long life. It is one of those fine products of craftsmanship that passing years do not age.

Williams Pianos that have been in continuous service year after year bear but slight evidence of long usage. Years after the average Piano has lost its charm, the beauty of the Williams remains unfaded.

Believed "Syndicate Baseball" Involved in Hornsby Trade

STAR DENIES HAD TROUBLE WITH M'GRAW

Says Never Attempted To Undermine Authority of the "Little Napoleon."

FANDOM STARTLED.

Experts Probing Behind Scenes For Real Reason of One-Sided Trade.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12 (Canadian Press).—Instead of satisfying a startled baseball public with the explanation that Rogers Hornsby was traded to the Boston Braves "to avoid any future conflict in the management of the club and for no other reason," the New York Giants yesterday apparently heaped only fresh coals on the fires of debate.

The brief statement issued by Charles A. Stoneham, president of the Giants, was not only taken with several grains of salt by the assembled experts, but drew from Hornsby a sharp reply, in which the famous second baseball disclaimed any controversy with Manager John McGraw and denied any attempt last season to undermine the authority of the "little Napoleon."

While innocent bystanders still were a trifle groggy from the shock of the deal which sends the league's highest salaries star to a seventh place club, in exchange for two little-known players—Catcher Frank Hogan and Outfielder Jimmy Welsh—the experts probed behind the scenes for the "real reason" prompting what seemed, on the surface, like the most one-sided transaction in recent years.

Most of the observers took one of the two views: either that some mysterious circumstances caused the sudden trade or that it was merely the forerunner of another big switch in player talent by the Giants. The latter view is strengthened by the existence of a gaping infield hole left by Hornsby, and for which the club now has only rookie talent to fill.

Syndicate Baseball

The suggestion that "syndicate baseball" was involved, in other words that the Giants had an interest in strengthening the Boston club, was scouted by most observers.

In the absence of Manager McGraw, however, officials of the Giants made it clear that the chief reason for parting with Hornsby was to keep harmony on the club and prevent the possibility of "two managers" trying to run the outfit. Stoneham's statement frankly admitted this, but neither he nor Tierney shed any light on exactly what prompted the prospect of such "conflict" or on what ground McGraw and Hornsby differed.

Boston Satisfied

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 12 (Canadian Press).—The Boston baseball world yesterday inclined to the belief that there is a Santa Claus.

While various explanations and rumors concerning the origin of the deal which brings Rogers Hornsby to the Hub to captain the Braves, still eddied about in the wake of the sensational announcement Tuesday night, Boston fandom and officialdom seemed content to let the New York Giants' explanation of the deal stand for itself.

Officially, from Braves' headquarters, Boston has been after Hornsby for some time and gave up two promising as well as youthful players, both of whom are wanted by the Giants, to further that end. Unofficially the deal was something of an accident, growing out of Boston attempts to secure the services of a different New York player.

Unofficial Version

According to this unofficial version, President Emil Fuchs of the Braves met Manager John McGraw of the Giants some ten days ago on a dicker for another Giant infielder. The deal fell through, but at a later conference McGraw intimated that he would like Francis Hogan, the young Braves' catcher, and Jimmy Welsh for his outfield if the Braves President really had any trading in mind.

More in amusement than in earnest, Judge Fuchs replied that "It would take Hornsby himself to get those two." When McGraw gave serious thought to the statement instead of an answering smile, the Braves' chief executive got down to business and the deal went through as much to his own surprise as that of the lay baseball world.

The value of Hornsby as an addition to the Braves naturally overshadowed the whys and wherefores of his acquisition here, but in some quarters the hand of Charles F. Adams, the comparatively new vice-president of the Braves, was seen in the deal, despite the positive announcement that no cash was involved in the transaction.

It is no secret here that Adams spent money, and spent it freely, to bring a championship contending hockey team to Boston in the Bruins National Hockey League club, and when announcement was made here last summer that he had brought into the Braves' ownership, there were predictions that new and outstanding faces might be expected on the club roster.

New York Leading Chicago Bike Race

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 12. Canadian Press. — Reggie McNamara of New York, and Charley Winter of New York, were holding first place by two laps in Chicago's 19th International Six Day Bicycle Race, at the end of the 66th hour.

The jamming has been particularly wild, 137 laps having been gained, Ernest Hockler and Eddie Herkner, the Chicago team, and Alphonse Coosens and Gerard Debacts, the Belgian riders are tied for second place two laps behind the leaders.

WITHDRAWS FROM OLYMPIC CONTEST

United States Will Have No Hockey Representation at Games.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—(By C.P.)—The Toronto University grads' Canadian Olympic hockey team is virtually assured of an easy victory in the coming Olympic games, as the result of the indication at the meeting of the U.S. Olympic Association that the U.S. will have no hockey team in the winter sports, as has been the custom in the past.

As entries from all countries must be received at Olympic headquarters in Europe on January 30, yesterday was about the last opportunity the American Olympic Committee had to approve hockey and skiing entries.

It is considered highly unlikely that the members of the committee, many of whom come from distant points, again will be assembled in time for the sending in of entries of January 20.

The dropping of the hockey and skiing teams is no surprise to those who have been following the situation in both sports. Some time ago there was talk of taking the Eveleth hockey team of Minnesota.

This team had a good record last season, but was not so strong this season, and was not considered the strongest U.S. team. The University Club of Boston, which was considered strongest, did not care to undertake the expense, as finances were on a different basis this year than in 1924.

GAMES POSTPONED IN VALLEY LEAGUE

Three Matches Already Postponed Owing to Mild Weather.

MARMORA, Jan. 12.—Though four of the five teams in the Trent Valley Hockey League are favored with covered rinks, three games have had to be postponed already owing to the mild weather. Madoc and Campbellford were unable to clash at the former town on the 3rd. Stirling could not receive Madoc on the 9th and postponement was necessary in Campbellford's home fixture with Frankford on the 10th. The latter team has been able to play three games, losing to Tweed and Stirling and defeating Madoc. The other of the four games played thus far was that at Campbellford on the 6th when the homesters gained a decisive victory over Tweed by 6-1.

SHARKEY FAVORED FOR HEAVY BOUT

Will Go Before State Athletic Commission for Physical Examination.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12. Canadian Press. — Cloaked in ominous silence and with or without a tender left "maulie," Jack Sharkey will descend on the doctors of the New York State Athletic Commission to demonstrate his physical fitness for a 12 round battle with Tom Heeney, the bulky-muscled New Zealander, in Madison Square Garden on Friday night.

A picture of Sharkey, minus the torrent of words that have bubbled about the hitherto "loquacious Lithuanian" on previous fistic invasions of New York, will be something new to local fandom. Sharkey announced in Boston to-day that in the future he would be just a big strong silent man.

Jack's bout with Heeney, originally scheduled for early December, was postponed when Sharkey fractured a finged during a workout. The Boston battler, the most promising of the younger heavyweights until Jack Dempsey battered him unconscious with a body attack last July, has not fought since Dempsey's fists sent him to a Boston hospital for a few days suffering internal haemorrhages.

While local experts have had a suspicion that all was not well with Sharkey's left hand reports of the New Englander's workouts indicate that he is in splendid condition and weighing 193 pounds slightly under the heft he threw against Dempsey. He is reported to have developed new ring technique by leading with his right hand, in violation of all fistic fundamentals.

"Let him do that a couple of times to me just to show that he's in earnest and I'll knock him into somebody's lap," declared Heeney to-day, as he wound up training with three rounds against George Courtney, the middleweight star. Heeney scaled around 198 pounds, his best fighting weight.

Odds as high as 9 to 5 were offered however that Sharkey would whip the thumping Irishman who boasts the championships of New Zealand, South Africa, Australia and Ireland, in addition to American victories over Johnny Riske, the Cleveland baker boy, Bud Gorman and Jimmy Maloney.

Sharkey after the examination today, plans only light exercise to hold poundage down and keep muscles limber for the 12-round fray that may determine Gene Tunney's next challenger for the heavyweight title bout.

KITCHENER LEADS LEAGUE ONCE MORE

Defeats Falls To Move Out in Front—Tigers Beat London.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., January 12. — Kitchener Millionaires again took the Canpro leadership here last night, when they copped a 3-2 win from Mickey Roach's Cataracts. A crowd of 3,500 fans, a record for the season to date, were on hand and were treated to a fine exhibition of the winter pastime. Although the edge alternated throughout, the visitors had enough margin on the play to warrant their victory.

The Skinner squad, led by the elusive Ripley, were inside the Cataract defence many times, and only the good work of Norm Burmister in the Falls cage held their total to three.

The Holmes-Roach attack also got inside the visitors' rear guard fairly often, to lose out to Fisher in goal.

TIGERS SWAMP LONDON.

LONDON, Ont., January 12. — A fever of desperate switching in the line-up of the London Panthers last night, which finally brought Markle and Paddon on the forward line, Moore on defence, and Benny Grant in goal, saved last year's Canpro champions from the humiliation of a third shutout in succession, and though the visiting Hamilton Tigers marched off with a 6-1 victory the moral victory belonged to that remnant of the Dominion junior champions of last season. Through the virtue of a slight mastery of the parts of elementary hockey as played in junior ranks, the youngsters gave the victors their only real opposition of the night, and presented the only effective attack launched in the direction of the Hamilton net all evening.

STRATFORD MOVES UP.

WINDSOR, Ont., January 12. — Stratford Nationals moved a point ahead of the Toronto Ravinas and into fourth place in the Canadian Hockey League standing here last night when they trounced the cellar-champion Hornets by a score of 3 to 1. It was the third consecutive victory for the northerners and the third reverse for the home clan in as many straight starts, all of them before local fans.

The hirelings of Roy Brothers won because "Doly" Dolson played phenomenal hockey in the face of an aggressive Windsor attack and because their forwards took full advantage of their scoring opportunities. The Hornets had as many chances or more, but they could not push the disc past the stalwart custodian of the Stratford cage.

MARLBOROS LOSE TO KITCHENER TEAM

Green Shirts Score Five in the Last Period To Win Out 8-2.

TORONTO, Jan. 12.—Staging a last session rampage that netted five goals, after being held well in check by the Marlboros, Kitchener Green Shirts gathered an 8 to 2 victory in the senior O.H.A. game at the Mutual Street Arena last night. Led by Seagram, former Upper Canada College star, the Green Shirts had a decided margin, but Marlboros put up a plucky fight, and only faded in the closing chapter. Part of the Duke's defeat can be excused, for they lost the services of Bruce Burry, their regular defence player, early in the second period and were forced to go most of the route with only one substitute. Burry sustained a broken thumb in a checking encounter, and had to go to the hospital for treatment.

Seagram, although not in the best of health following his recent illness, was a trifle too much for the Duke checkers, and his bullet drive, that carried U.C.C. to many triumphs, was successful on three attempts, while he provided passes for two other scores. Seagram did not have any of his usual dash and speed, lacking condition, but even with that handicap he was the best in the game. Molson, on the right rail for the invaders, was almost as prominent as Seagram in the scoring, collecting four counters, but most of them came on tricky long shots.

FIRST DIVISION TEAMS IN RACE

Enter First Round Proper of Cup Next Saturday Afternoon.

LONDON, Eng., Jan. 12 (by the Canadian Press).—The first act of that great national sporting drama—the round in which the major clubs enter the English Football Association cup competition—is scheduled to take place next Saturday (January 14). Previous rounds have sifted out the little fellows and the weaklings in the minor divisions of the English League. The same keenness which has marked the public interest in the competition in past years is reported to exist this season. The luck of the draw has favored the big clubs and has swung directly against the southern clubs and the amateurs.

In all probability the first division teams will be found to have a bigger proportion of clubs in the next round than usual. There are only three instances where first division teams are opposing one another. Seven senior teams will have second division clubs as opponents. Eight third division clubs are drawn against first division teams and in six of them the latter have ground advantage. London teams have not been generously treated. A dozen of the city's clubs, including the great amateur club of the Corinthians, are interested. The Arsenals are the only seniors to be drawn at home. Millwall, playing the game of their lives this year and heading the standing in the southern section of the third division, are lucky. They meet Derby county at home and should be confident of the outcome as they beat this team in the fourth round at Derby last year. The London Caledonians, an amateur club, are also at home and must meet Crewe Alexandra. Another London tie will be Charlton Athletic versus Bury.

Among the games in which the first division teams play each other, the best will likely be the meeting of Blackburn Rovers and Newcastle United.

Newspaper prophets have picked the following to win: Corinthians, Bury, Clapton Orient, Aston Villa, Blackburn Rovers, Middlesbrough, Leicester City, Cardiff City, Everton, Sheffield United, The Wednesday, Huddersfield Town, Bolton Wanderers, Sunderland, Oldham Athletic, Port Vale, Reading, Manchester City, Notts Forest, Stoke City, Swansea Town and Rotherham United. The cupholders, Cardiff City, are at home to Southampton.

The draw follows—
Middlesbrough vs. South Shields.
Rotherham United vs. Exeter City.
London Caledonians vs. Crewe Alexandra.
Hull City vs. Leicester City.
Liverpool vs. Darlington.
Huddersfield Town vs. Lincoln City.
Southport vs. Fulham.
Nottingham Forest vs. Tranmere Rovers.
Blackpool vs. Oldham Athletic.
Manchester United vs. Brentford.
Stoke City vs. Gillingham.
Cardiff City vs. West Bromich Albion.
Charlton Athletic vs. Bury.
Wrexham vs. Swansea Town.
The Wednesday vs. Boscombe.
Bristol City vs. Tottenham Hotspurs.
Preston North End vs. Everton.
Port Vale vs. Barnsley.
Sunderland vs. Northampton Town.
Manchester City vs. Leeds United.
Blackburn Rovers vs. Newcastle United.
Swindon Town vs. Clapton Orient.
Portsmouth vs. West Ham United.
Millwall vs. Derby County.
Notts County vs. Sheffield United.
Bolton Wanderers vs. Luton Town.
Birmingham vs. Peterboro and Fletton United.
New Brighton vs. Corinthians.
Reading vs. Grimsby Town.
Burnley vs. Aston Villa.
Wolverhampton Wanderers vs. Chelsea
The matches will be played on the grounds of the first named clubs.

HEENEY HOPES TO FIGHT GENE

New Zealand Boxer Must Defeat Sharkey on Friday Night.

ODDS AGAINST HIM.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—(Canadian Press).—The possibility of a fight with Gene Tunney for the heavyweight championship in London, part of his native realm, dangled yesterday before the craggy countenance of Tom Heeney, burly hope of the British Empire in Tex Rickards never ending hunt for title material.

The durable Anzac, who left his plumbing tools "down under" in New Zealand to fight his way into match with Jack Sharkey, would like nothing better than the bout now drifting about in back of promoter's mind. First, of course, he must dispose of the loquacious gob from Boston in a twelve round match in Madison Square Garden on Friday night. The betting odds are eight to five that he won't, but none have been made within Tom's hearing.

BABE RUTH LUCKY MAN

Has Had Ups and Downs Both in and Off Playing Field.

STILL DRAWING CARD

When you come to think of it, the Babe, known less familiarly as Mr. Ruth, has been a very fortunate young or old man, little man or big man, as you choose to regard him.

The Babe has had his ups and downs in about equal proportions but he always seems to be up if it was only for another fall. Ruth is still the biggest man in baseball because he was gifted with such a rugged constitution and such astounding baseball talent that he couldn't ruin himself even when he seemed to be making the effort.

The Babe will be 34 in February and has been through 13 years of major league campaigning and a number of hard campaigns off the baseball paths and he is still going as one of the greatest players in baseball, the greatest drawing attraction in baseball—and, at last, something of those models that can be held up to young America.

There isn't much of a moral in the history of some of the virtuous athletes who never have smoked, never have taken a drink, never have broken up three automobiles in one season and never have eaten three steaks with trimmings and 12 hot dogs during an evening at Coney Island. But there is a moral, if you are interested in morals, in one who has been guilty of all of those things, got away with them and then quit them.

The good fortune of the Babe is based primarily on the fact that he was able to stand up under all kinds of punishment and come back so strong in one or two seasons that he was able to hit 60 home runs last season and shatter a record that was thought to have been recorded on the books for all times.

Others Not So Lucky.

This bit of fortune can be realized for its full value by recalling the misfortune experienced by other baseball players who were struck by bad luck when they were just in their prime.

The fate of Pep Young, regarded by John McGraw as the greatest rightfielder in baseball, who was stricken with kidney trouble and died at the age of 27 when he was just in his prime.

Chick Fewster, a youngster, was cut down almost as tragically when he was just starting his career. Fewster was looked upon as the most promising minor league second baseman to come up in years. He was a sensation in the southern training camp of the New York Yankees until he was hit on the head by a pitched ball in an exhibition game against Brooklyn. It nearly cost him his life and did end his baseball career, for he never was able to play first class major league baseball regularly again.

George Sisler, at the age of 32, was stricken with sinus trouble, and while he is still a good first baseman he was rated as a $20,000 player when he was sold to Washington and $20,000 is only the price of a fair minor leaguer.

Rabbit Maranville lived a free and easy life while he was playing good enough to be rated as one of the best infielders in baseball. But his living habits ended his major league playing at the ripe old age of 34.

But the Babe is still going.

Babe's Color Won Public.

The Babe was also lucky in the possession of that thing called color and magnetic personality. The public forgave him his errors because he was "just a big overgrown boy." He had everybody pulling for him and finally the pressure of that pulling had its results.

Another piece of good fortune was that he arrived at the start of the of baseball's greatest prosperity when big money could be paid. It might be suggested that the Babe was responsible for the period of prosperity because the old game was in bad shape when he started knocking them out of the park.

Ruth Still Worth Money.

He has been a financial success even though he threw his money away for a long time. He has two more years to serve on a contract calling for $70,000 a year. His income from sources outside of baseball must be close to $50,000 a year, and he has shared in the players' end of eight world series. His share of world series money in those successful years was as much or probably more than the annual salary of the ordinary player.

All in all, it seems that while he has not always been happy and has had his troubles, he has been lucky in a broad sense as he is still one of the highest salaried men in the country in spite of everything else.

PIRATES ATTACK SPANISH VESSELS

Trawlers Looted and Damaged By Men From Small Boats.

GIBRALTAR, Jan. 12.—(Canadian Press).—Piracy almost within the shadow of the great fortress occurred Tuesday when the Spanish trawler San Antonio was attacked by fifty Spanish fishing boats. The pirates numbered three hundred and were armed with pistols, knives, and clubs. They boarded the trawler, looted the vessel, and cut the nets.

Another trawler was treated in a similar manner. Their boats were run aground at Atumara, where Spanish coast guard was driven off.

AGED LADY ILL.

Mrs. Clements, Old Resident of Warsaw, Suffers Paralytic Stroke.

WARSAW, Jan. 12.—Mrs. Clements, Sr., had a stroke of paralysis on Tuesday last.

Her daughter, Mrs. Ellen Brown, from Toronto, was sent for immediately, and has been with her.

Mrs. Clements has been in or near Warsaw since she was a young woman, and for several years has lived alone, although members of her family live near, and some of them were in every day. She is nearly ninety years old.

When a little more than a year ago Charles A. Munn bought the British and European rights to the electric hare he went to England to see how that country would take to greyhound racing. He was laughed at. People refused to believe that a tin hare chase would arouse any interest among the sport-loving public. But today there are greyhound racing tracks in nearly all the principal cities, and some of them are attracting 200,000 spectators to the three meetings given each week.

Cubs Put Extra Talent in Last Year's Weak Spots.

PURCHASE MALONE.

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—The desperate bid of Chicago's Cubs for the National League pennant in the mid-season race of 1927, is to be duplicated right from the fall of the flag in the 1928 season, President Weeck and Manager McCarthy declare, with extra talent in those spots on the club which proved weaker last August.

The winter deals of the Cubs have been few in number, but momentous in possibilities, beginning with the trade which brought Hazen "Kiki" Cuyler to the team in exchange for Sparky Adams. His acquisition gave the team six heavy hitting outfielders, Wilson, Stephenson, Webb, Heathcote and Kelly being the others.

To strengthen the pitching corps, where the strain of the pennant chase really caused the beginning of the slump, the Cubs brought the 1927 strike-out king of all the leagues in the country, Pat Malone of Minneapolis.

He turned back 214 batters last year. Malone's purchase makes six pitchers figured to be ready for regular turns—Charlie Root, who won more games than any other major league twirler last year; Hal Carlson, Sheriff Blake, Guy Bush and Percy Jones. Back of these is the veteran southpaw, Art Nehf, who is being primed as the relief pitcher.

To fill the place of Spark Adams at second, the Cubs already had a string on Freddy Maguire, a youngster from Toledo with a little major league seasoning. For second and third base, the Cubs have a flock of candidates, and, assuming that Maguire will go in at second, there is admittedly a big question mark hovering over the third bag. Captain Charlie Grim, at first base, and "Woody" English at shortstop, are definite fixtures. Hartnett is still young enough to keep on improving behind the bat.

TUNNEY MUST WATCH LOUGHRAN

Britton Says He Wouldn't Bet on Gene Against Tommy.

You may get ready to laugh this off. In fact, before it is sprung, chuckles, jeers and assorted brands of razzberries can be distinguished in the making in the vicinity of the Tunney estate.

As a sort of introduction it might be mentioned for the sake of formality that Gene Tunney is the heavyweight champion of the world and that even his critics have to admit that he has an edge on the other current heavyweights.

Under the circumstances any discussion of the heavyweight situation involves matching of opinions as to how long Tunney will be able to hold the title and who will get it from him.

Such a discussion was held recently. Present were a nationally known referee of recent years, two or three ranking managers and some well-known fighters.

If there was anything decided in the discussion it was that Tunney would have to age down to his challengers as Dempsey did and that the process in a clean living man and hard worker like Tunney might take considerable time.

"What do you think of it, Jack?" was asked of one of the listeners who, as is characteristic with him, hadn't said a word.

"Tunney's better than any of those fellows they're talking about now," Britton answered. "There's only one fighter I wouldn't bet against to beat Tunney—Tommy Loughran."

It might be interposed here that while fighters are notoriously poor as judges of fights and other fighters, Britton is one of the best pickers in the country. He has been right on the winner of every big fight for years and his opinion is respected by some of the biggest operators in New York.

When Britton named Loughran, the light heavyweight champion, as the one fighter he would not bet against in a match with Tunney, there were skeptical glances turned in his direction.

"You're crazy," Dan Morgan, his old manager, said.

"Maybe I am," Britton said. "But remember you said the same thing in Philadelphia. You went for plenty and I picked up quite a little."

"Here's the way I figure it," Britton went on. "We all know how good Tunney is, how he lives and takes care of himself and how he believes in himself. But he's going right now. He can't help it. He's going to get in the same hole that Dempsey was. He won't be able to fight enough to keep in form. I know from experience that you have to keep fighting to keep going. I've been going longer than any of them and I think I ought to know.

"Lots of times I laid off fighting during the summer. I kept in shape, though, by walking, rowing, swimming, handball and other forms of exercise and kept down my weight. But when I went in for the winter work and started fighting I found that it never took me less than two months to get just right. And listen: I didn't have to stop them and take them like those big fellows. I could take my time working up to big bouts, but those big fellows have to be just right for that one fight.

"They say that Loughran can't hit, but didn't they say the same about Tunney? They say that Loughran is only a fair light heavyweight champion, and they said the same thing about Tunney. They say that Loughran has had a lot of bad fights, but didn't they razz Tunney?

"You will find in looking them over that Loughran is following the same path that Tunney had to follow. A hard road to get recognition. Tunney had a build himself up physically and fight to get a reputation, and Loughran is having to do the same thing.

"They've both got all the confidence in the world, they're both clean living, but Tunney will be forced by circumstances to lay up and Loughran can keep going and getting better and better.

"You may think that Loughran is a second-rater, but I'll tell you that a second-rater who has been fighting right along is a dangerous man for any champion who has been out a long time and has to step in and fight one great fight.

"I thought, and still think, that Dempsey was the greatest of the heavyweight champions that I have seen, and I have seen a lot of them in my time. I thought that Tunney was only an ordinary good fighter. But I bet on Tunney to beat Dempsey at Philadelphia and I was ashamed to bet on Tunney in Chicago. I bet on Tunney in Philadelphia just because Dempsey had been out of the ring too long. I backed my judgment against the knowledge that Dempsey could knock out anyone with one or two punches, and against my knowledge that Tunney had one bad fault—he doesn't duck, and anyone that holds his head up for Dempsey is taking a terrible chance.

"Before the fight in Philadelphia I saw Bat Levinsky. He used to be in Morgan's string with me and we are old friends. He's also a smart better. He asked me who I liked and I told him Tunney, and he told me he was taking all the long-price money he could get the same way. I told him I wasn't betting as much as he was and cautioned him about the way Tunney stood up and the way Dempsey could hit, even if his legs were gone.

"Bat then told me that he had been talking to Tommy Loughran. Loughran had been working with Dempsey and, you remember, the papers told how he had made a monkey of Dempsey in the sparring ring and that they had had some private workouts.

"Loughran was almost crying," Bat told me. "He said Tunney was the luckiest guy in the world in getting the first shot at Dempsey. He said, and he is no boaster, that he had beaten Dempsey with the little gloves and could have stopped him in the training camp, that he knew it and that the camp knew it. Loughran said he felt he was the unluckiest fellow in the world to know absolutely that he could beat Dempsey and that he couldn't get the chance to do it for all that big money.

"That experience," Britton said, "no doubt will make Loughran, if he has what I think he has. It gave him the confidence to go out and take every fighter offered to him, and it gave him the conviction that if Tunney couldn't stop Dempsey a year later when he was much worse, that Tunney was not such a wow.

"I may be wrong. I am not picking Loughran as the next champion, but I will not bet that he won't beat Tunney."

VON ELM LEAVES AMATEUR RANKS

Former National Champion Turns Professional Under Management of Kearns.

LOS ANGELES, Calif Jan. 12. — Canadian Press. — George von Elm, former national champion of amateur golfers, yesterday hooked his amateur rating into a bunker and decided to shoot down the fairways as a paid professional.

The flashy linksman, who conquered Bobby Jones for the amateur title in 1926, confirmed reports that he would abandon the amateur ranks and turn professional under the management of Jack Kearns, fight promoter and erstwhile manager of Champion Jack Dempsey. The Long Beach open golf tournament starting next Friday will mark von Elm's last appearance as an amateur.

Kearns had revealed earlier in the the day that von Elm was seriously considering his proposal and the fight promoter voiced his belief that there was plenty of money to be made out of professional golf if it were given the "proper ballyhoo."

Kearns declared that with von Elm's signature to a pro contract he would pair him with Al Watrous of Grand Rapids, Mich. for a country wide tour and possibly make up a professional foursome, another member of which would likely be Harry Cooper, the Los Angeles professional.

THEATRES

AT THE REGENT.

Strange and little known lore about one of the most interesting substances in the world—diamonds—formed the basis of research with which Milton Sills entertained himself during the filming of his latest First National Pictures starring vehicle, "Framed."

Between scenes of the picture, the star had recourse to reference works on diamonds. In addition to volumes in posseasion of the technical department, he discovered several other works packed with interesting information.

Much incidental diamond and diamond-mining lore appears in "Framed," which is the feature attraction at the Regent Theatre. Some of the most interesting points of the star's research, however, do not appear in the picture. The following is taken from Sills' notes:

Since the beginning of history, diamonds were known and highly prized, but it was not until 1456 that they were first cut and polished. Revolving steel disc covered with diamond dust and oil were used them, as now, in the process.

Amsterdam cut the most diamonds and boasted the best workmen until recent years, when the United States went ahead in both quantity and quality of stones cut.

BOY DROWNS IN DON RIVER

Four Year Old Falls From Cake of Ice—Trying To Paddle Across.

BODY RECOVERED.

TORONTO, Jan. 12. — Trying to paddle across the Don on a cake of ice, Bobby Bendall, four-year-old son of Arthur Bendall of 12 Flagler Street became the city's first drowning victim of the year yesterday afternoon.

The child would have been four years old on January 18—a week from yesterday. He was drowned at about 4.10 p.m. in approximately four feet of water at a point just below the Riverdale Zoo and directly opposite the dressing room which is provided for skaters using the rinks on the flats.

He, his younger brother, Billy, who is nearly three, and six-year-old Arthur Chambers of 9 Woodstock Avenue, had been given coppers by a neighbor and after buying candy had gone to the Zoo. At the Zoo, Billy appears to have become separated from the other two, for he was in Dundas Street east police station having his clothes dried after a soaking he had undergone, he said, in the Zoo duck pond, when word came of the drowning. The police did not know then that the victim was his brother.

Slips From Ice Cake

Bobby and the other lad were playing about on the riverfront, behind the dressing room. Bobby, police say, got on a piece of ice and began to paddle across the river, which is about 75 feet wide at this point and only partly under ice. What ice there is, is only a couple of inches thick. A few feet from the shore the boy slipped off his precarious craft and disappeared into the water.

A citizen on the opposite bank saw him fall and ran shouting, across the bridge a few yards north of the spot where the lad had disappeared. As he crossed the bridge he met David Maxwell, of 141 Langley Avenue, a fireman off duty, who hurried to obtain one of the pike poles which are scattered along the banks. The other, whose name remains unknown, continued to the refreshment pavilion, where he is believed to have telephoned for the life-savers.

Mark Williams, who runs the pavilion, rushed to the scene, where he and George Caldwell, of 99 Berkeley Street, assisted Maxwell in trying to locate the boy's body.

Body Recovered

After about ten minutes' search it is said, they found the body ten feet from shore and about 15 feet from the point at which the boy was believed to have disappeared. The body, which was recovered by Maxwell with the pike pole, was in four feet of water.

The amazing improvement of Prof. Stagg's University of Chicago eleven over the Maroon team of last year has furnished one of the big surprise of the current football season.

FAMOUS LOVE ROMANCES — POCAHONTAS AND CAPTAIN JOHN SMITH (V) — By Nicholas Afonsky

Two years after her marriage, Pocahontas—in the meantime well versed in all the ways of the white colonists—sailed with her husband and small son to England. With them went an old Indian named Tomocomo, whom Powhatan had sent as a guard for his daughter. With them were also several Indian maidens.

Pocahontas was received with enthusiasm in England. Old Tomocomo watched her triumphant progress with stoical interest. Powhatan had given him a bundle of sticks, telling him to count the number of Englishmen by making a notch for each. After a few days the Indian, with a grunt, gave up and threw the sticks away.

The great people of England drove in their coaches to call on the Indian princess. In compliment to her, many tavern keepers renamed their inns "La Belle Sauvage", a name which still is visible on old swinging signs in London. Pocahontas was presented to the King and Queen, who received her as a royal personage.

John Smith, whom Pocahontas believed dead, returned from one of his journeys to find all England talking about the lovely Indian princess who had once saved his life. He hurried to see her—and all her old feeling for him returned. "They told me you were dead," she said, and wept and could not speak.

Report of Year's Work Presented For Millbrook District.

OFFICERS INSTALLED.

MILLBROOK, Jan. 12.—The District Orange Lodge met here for its annual meeting on Tuesday afternoon, January 10, the retiring District Master, Brother William Lynn, in the chair. There was a good attendance.

An encouraging report of the year's work was presented by the presiding Master, all the Lodges of the district being in a flourishing condition as to membership, finances, and activities.

The officers for the ensuing year, who were installed by Past County Master, Brother Jas. H. Paul, are: D.M., Brother Wesley Fallis; D.D.M., Brother A. V. Thorne; P.S., Brother James Roddy; Chaplain, Brother (Rev.) P. C. Howard; Treasurer, Brother M. Todd; F.S., Brother T. H. Aiken; Lecturers, Brother Wilfrid Fallis and D. Patton; D. of C., Brother William Williamson.

The County meeting will convene here on the first Tuesday in February.

Regular Meeting.

Golden Sheaf Rebekah Lodge, No. 176, held its regular meeting in the I.O.O.F. hall, on Tuesday evening, the outstanding feature of the session being the annual installation of officers by the District Deputy President, Sister Mildred Mark, of Lindsay.

Accompanying Sister Mark was the Grand Marshal, Sister M. Milburn, also of Kawartha Lodge, Lindsay, and the other members of the installing staff were chosen from Junior Past Noble Grands of the local Lodge.

The District President is making her initial official visit to the Rebekah Lodges of the district, beginning with Millbrook, and conducted her work in a most impressive manner. The officers for 1928 are: J.P.N.G., Sister May Garside; N.G., Sister Thea Thorne; V.G., Sister Maud Armstrong; Warden, Sister Thelma Ball; Conductor, Sister Isabelle Thorndyke; Chaplain, Sister Irene Fallis; R.S.N.G., Sister Annie Ball; L.S.N.G., Sister Mabel Fall, P.G.; R.S.V.G., Sister Isabelle Syer; L.S.V.G., Sister Caroline Harkness; R.S., Sister Lila Whyte; F.S., Sister Zella Bentley; Treasurer, Sister J. Henderson; I.G., Sister Pearl Burnham; O.G., Sister Lillian Syer.

Committees: Finance, Sisters Irene Fallis, Ada Attwoodl, and B. P. Burnham. Membership, Sisters Mabel Fallis, J. Henderson, P. Burnham, and Annie Ball. Property, Sisters Thelma Ball, Jennie Henderson, and Zella Bentley. Visiting, Sisters May Garside, Lillian Syer, Bertha Hamilton, Annie Earl, Kathleen Ball, and Mina Bradley. Social, Sisters Thelma Ball, Lila Whyte, Isabelle Syer, Caroline Harkness, May Garside, and Isabelle Thorndyke.

The presentation of a Past Noble Grand's jewel to Sister Caroline Harkness was an interesting event, at the conclusion of the installation ceremony, the District Deputy President, Sister Mark, after a few appropriate remarks, pinning on the handsome emblem.

Brief addresses were made by the visiting officers, and others, and the service of refreshments brought this part of the evening to a close. Music, and games of carpet ball, an innovation by way of entertainment in the Lodge, filled out the time happily until the gathering finally dispersed.

BUS RUNS DOWN HIGHWAY BANK

Clings To Edge of High Bank For 300 Feet Before Upsetting.

NO PERSON HURT.

TORONTO, Jan. 2.— Carrying 25 passengers, a Del Ray bus, eastbound, went over a high embankment on No. 2 highway, east of Pickering, last evening and rolled over on its side without injury to a single person. Doctors were not called and all the passengers went to Oshawa or other destination when another Del Ray coach arrived a few minutes later.

The accident occurred about 6.30, the bus having left the Grey Line station at Bay and Dundas streets, Toronto, at five o'clock. Harry P. Griner, 65 Breadalbane street, who was driving, reports meeting a car with glaring lights, running close to the centre of the highway. Turning out to avoid a collision and momentarily blinded by the oncoming headlights, Griner allowed the right wheel of the bus to get over the shoulder of the road, which at this point, a mile and a half north of Pickering, slopes gradually about 20 feet to the ditch.

F. G. Jerome, provincial traffic officer, who was on the scene soon afterward, estimated that the big coach ran along the slope for more than 300 feet, while Griner was hanging on and trying to get the vehicle back on the road.

The bus was halted at the bottom of the slope, with its front wheels six inches from a telephone post, and there rolled over. The passengers had exhibited no panic, according to the driver, who reported that the men reassured the women and kept them quiet, although a couple of the latter were "a little nervous."

One blocked the exit at first while excitedly trying to find a missing purse, which the driver eventually recovered. With the bus on its side, the occupants climbed out a door on the left, which had become the upper side.

Only One Window Broken.

The car blamed for the accident continued on its way towards the city, its driver possibly unaware of the predicament of the bus. The latter, a Leyland, bearing license marked C-1643, appeared virtually undamaged; in fact, only one window was broken. Before the reporter left the scene, mechanics had hoisted the coach over on its wheels without trouble and the lights were on and engine running.

Ten feet farther along the highway is a culvert with a straight drop of about 12 feet. Had the bus not been brought to a halt where it was, the passengers would have been less fortunate.

Griner said he thought the car with the offending headlights was a passenger motor, and was inclined to feel that he had shown a "road hog" too much consideration.

"I almost wish I had let him have it," he said, looking at his coach, helpless in the ditch.

Bank clearings for the week totalled $1,19,231.

The Primary Department of St. James' Sunday School had an attendance last Sunday of 53 boys and 54 girls. With the superintendent, Miss Mary Collins, and all the ten teachers present, this constituted a record for the second Sunday of the New Year.

Do You Want $5

Who doesn't?

Well, we're not asking foolish questions, because we know the answer how to get $5.

Just find the Mystery Man at the Poultry Show to-night. He'll be Mr. X.... Maybe you know him. Anyhow, look at the above photograph, which has become slightly marred by the printers, and try to pick him out of the crowd.

Last night's Mystery Man took some finding. He entered the hall with two companions, and for some reason everyone seemed to pick on one of these companions, who was hounded all over the hall, while Mr. X peacefully examined prize tags and the birds they adorned, and watched the moving pictures, and played bingo, and even took the aggressive, asking dozens of other people, "Are you the Mysterious Mr. X?" Then, when he was thinking of calling it a night, and asking Mr. Glover for the $5 for himself, Lloyd Rutherford, 671 Aylmer Street, tackled him and had to be led up to receive assurance that he had won.

J. A. LeBlanc, of the Quaker Oats Company, was the Mystery Man on the first night; John R. Heron, News Editor of The Examiner was "it" last night; it is up to you to find Mr. X. tonight, and win $5 or a turkey. Get busy—and, anyhow, don't miss the Big Show.

TO-NIGHT YOU MUST SAY CORRECTLY, "YOU ARE THE MYSTERIOUS MR. X OF THE PETERBOROUGH EXAMINER" AND HAVE A COPY OF TODAY'S EXAMINER IN ORDER TO QUALIFY FOR THE PRIZE

Before daybreak, the cutter Haida of the United States coastguard put out of Seattle under forced draught to search for the distressed steamer.

FOLLIES 'CANARY' MYSTERY DEATH

NEW YORK—Margaret Odell, one of the most popular and prominent members of Broadway's night life, was found strangled when her maid, Amy Gibson, entered the living room of 164 West 71st street. The apartment had been ransacked and jewelry stolen, the slaying having evidently taken place about 11 p.m.

Miss Odell had spent two years abroad after her first success in "The Bretonne Maid," a popular musical comedy in which she had risen from obscurity to the rank of star.

Because of a part she played in an elaborate ballet of the "Follies," she was given the sobriquet "Canary." As a result of her success in this role, the title was changed from "Bird Ballet" to "Canary Ballet."

The mysterious slaying is told fully in the story, "The Canary Murder Case," starting in The Examiner on Monday.

ENGINEERING INSTITUTE HEARS INSTRUCTIVE TALK ON PROBLEMS OF AEROPLANE CONSTRUCTION

Lieutenant A. Ferrier, of Department of National Defence Addresses Meeting.

WELL ATTENDED.

Gives Brief Outline of Different Parts of Modern Plane.

"The Aeroplane as an Engineering Problem" was the subject of a most interesting paper delivered last evening at the regular meeting of the Peterborough Branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada, held in the Chamber of Commerce Council room. In this paper, Flight Lieutenant A. Ferrier, of the Aeronautical Engineering Division of the Department of National Defence, masterfully described the manner in which the aeronautical engineer attacks the problem of the design and production of an aeroplane.

In these days of rapid and sensational developments in transport by air, this was a subject in which everyone might be interested and it was not surprising, therefore, that a large number of members of the branch, as well as several interested citizens were on hand when the chairman, A. E. Caddy, M.E.I.C., called for order. He accorded the visiting speaker a brief but courteous introduction, and for the next forty-five minutes all present were well repaid for attending.

Flight Lieut. Ferrier

The speaker of the evening wasted no time in introduction. From his paper, one learned that, unlike Topsy, the aeroplane of today had not "just growed" nor was it just a happy combination of wood, wire and metal. Neither is it to be regarded as a thing of mystery, but rather it should be looked upon as a work of engineering.

Many Problems

In the building of an aeroplane, or rather before building it, there are many problems to be solved, decisions to be reached and plans laid. The load that it must carry, the power that is necessary to carry that load, the weight of the plane, the range or endurance qualities that it must have, and its performance in landing and at other speeds are all matters that the builder must be acquainted with. The weight that the plane is to carry largely determines the power plant to be used, and the power plant and weight determines the lifting surface that must be provided.

In Britain, the tendency, in this last regard, has been to favor the biplane; on the Continent the tendency has been toward the monoplane, with a similar tendency in America. But lately, there has been developing a compromise in the form

NELSON HANGS, DENYING CRIME

Declares Forgiveness Of All Who Testified Against Him at Trial.

STRANGLED WOMAN.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 13 (Canadian Press).—Shortly before eight o'clock, Central standard time, this morning, Earle Nelson, thirty-year-old "Dark Strangler," was hanged in the court yard of the Provincial Jail here.

Nelson, charged with being the slayer of a score of women and children in the United States and Canada, was executed for the murder of Mrs. Emily Paterson, 27-year-old choir singer, killed in her suburban home, June 10 last. He was also charged with the strangling to death of Lola Cowan, fourteen, here, but was never brought to trial. The trap was sprung at 7.41 a.m.

Nelson protested his innocence to the last and said he forgave all those who had testified against him. At 7.56 a.m., just fifteen minutes after Hangman Arthur Ellis had released the lever which dropped the trap, the body was cut down and Nelson was pronounced dead.

The Weather

The mild weather still continues, and there is little likelihood of any decided change for a few days at least, and perhaps not then. Yesterday's highest point 35 degrees; lowest 25. This morning the temperature was just at the freezing point. I have been told that the curlers are at present 72 games behind in their schedule, and hockey schedules have also received a body blow. An article by Mr. F. H. Dobbin in The Examiner yesterday regarding the winter of 1877-78 is well worth preserving, as there is much information there that cannot be otherwise readily obtained.—W. P.

London Interested In Snyder-Gray Case

NEW YORK, Jan. 13. — Canadian Press. — Interest in the Snyder-Gray case has reached such a pitch of excitement in Great Britain that the newspapers in London last night planned to "hold open" their presses to await the cabled flash on the executions at Sing Sing prison, it was learned yesterday.

New York representatives of Reuter's Ltd., the British news agency, revealed that the London papers attach almost as much interest to the Snyder-Gray executions as they did in the case of Sacco and Vanzetti.

It was explained that the reason for the British public's impatience to get the news of this country's sensational love-triangle is that the Bywaters-Thompson case, similar to that of Judd Gray and Mrs. Ruth Snyder, occurred in England five years ago when for the first time in twenty years, a woman was hanged there.

SIX MINERS KILLED IN BATTLE BETWEEN STRIKERS AND POLICE

Four Men Wounded in Street Clash When Officers Disperse Parade.

GIRLS TAKE PART.

Make Preparations To Force Surrender of Miners Barricaded in Building.

WALSENBURG, Col., Jan. 13 (Canadian Press)—Mounted machine guns glared from points of vantage late yesterday, while state police officers prepared to force the surrender of 600 striking I.W.W. miners barricaded in a building after a battle in which six men were reported killed.

Shots were fired from the windows of the besieged building and police returned the fire from a two-block area roped off around the battle zone.

The number of casualties could not be verified, but Louis H. Sherff, Chief of State Police, telephoned Governor Adams at Denver that six striking miners had been killed. Four men were wounded in a street clash when police dispersed a parade of 750 miners. The scene of the fighting then shifted to the I.W.W. headquarters building.

One man in the barricaded group was reported killed when a sniper's shot caught him. He slumped forward from the window and his comrades pulled him back.

School Girls Jeer Police

Forty women, of whom 25 were school girls of 18 or under, gathered at the edge of the fighting zone and joined by nearly 200 men they sung "Solidarity," the I.W.W. song. Efforts of state police to disperse them were unsuccessful, so they remained and jeered the officers.

Officers in charge of the state police said there were 26 sworn officers in Huerfano County in the section and when reinforced by mine guards, they will move against the striking miners at the I.W.W. hall.

The parade occurred while the state industrial committee was holding meetings in the court house in an endeavor to determine the cause of the present I.W.W. coal strike, which started on October 18.

At the adjournment of the state industrial committee meeting, five members of the striking miner's committee ,accompanied by Fred S. Caldwell and Ed. Delaney, their counsel, went into within half a block of the I.W.W. hall, and, believed mistaken for state officers, were greeted by gunfire from the hall. They immediately beat a retreat.

STEAMER SENDS WORD OF SAFETY

All Well Aboard Griffco, in Difficulties on Wednesday.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 13 (Canadian Press).—The MacKay Federal Telegraph Company here intercepted a message from the steamer Griffco somewhere off the Washington coast, indicating that all was well aboard the vessel, which started sending "S O S" calls on Wednesday night.

The message was signed by Capt. Martin of the Griffco, and addressed to the Inter-Island Steamship Company of Honolulu, owners of the ship. It requested that the ship be reported to the steamship company, and indicated all was well aboard. She carried a crew of 24 and a single passenger.

Baby Saved By Use Oxygen Worth $3000

CHICAGO, Jan. 13 (Canadian Press). — Snatched back from death by forty-six hours' efforts by city fireman who used nearly three thousand dollars worth of oxygen, Baby George Smith, thirteen days old, was so nearly normal in condition today that he was able to cry vigorously.

Dr. Abt, noted specialist, directed that the application of oxygen and stimulants be dis-continued.

DENIES GUILT IN STATEMENT

Nelson Declares That He Never At Any Time Committed Murder.

VICTIM OF CIRCUMSTANCES.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 13. — In an interview last night, Nelson declared his innocence to the reporter in most solemn terms and declared that "God in His own good time would disclose the guilty parties to the eyes of the world."

He asked his interviewer to proclaim to the people of Canada and the United States that he was the victim of circumstances and at no time in his life had he committed murder.

"Before God and man, I am entirely innocent. I am ready to meet my God whom I am sure will have pity on me for all I have suffered," he declared. "Please don't change a word I have told you," he pleaded. "I ask this as a favor, so that people who are bitter against me may know I have done them no injury.

"Why should I wish to tell a lie. To-morrow morning I am going to hang. There is absolutely no hope of saving my body, but I am certainly not going to do anything to hurt my soul. I swear to you I am telling the truth and that I never committed murder."

LOCAL AVIATOR MEETS MISHAP

Loses Way in Fog and Lands in Ice-Covered Field.

NO DAMAGE DONE.

COLLINGWOOD, Ont., Jan. 13.—An aviator from Peterborough named Gagne, while on his way to Camp Borden yesterday morning was compelled to make a forced landing near here owing to losing his way in a dense fog. He came down on a field belonging to Smart Brothers Limited, and the airplane broke through the ice with which the field was covered and stuck there. Word was phoned to the fire brigade, and Chief McAllister and his men were able to release the plane. Neither the aviator nor plane was any the worse for the mishap.

Communist Deputies Re-arrested At Paris

PARIS, Jan. 13. — Canadian Press. — The Communist deputies Marcel Cachin and Paul Vaillant-Couturier were arrested yesterday afternoon on orders of the government as they were leaving the Chamber of Deputies, an incident which has attracted much interest in political circles.

It is expected that the legislature elections on April 22 are likely to have some reverberations from the arrests.

The two deputies had been convicted with three others of distributing propaganda to provoke disobedience among the French soldiers and sailors and had been sentenced to several months' imprisonment. Cachin had served part of his term when the Chamber met after the summer vacation and the House voted that he be released to take part in the deliberations of the Chamber.

The Communist leader disappeared after the adjournment for the holidays ,instead of reporting to the police.

The stand of the Communists caused much annoyance in government circles and a showdown on the question came yesterday on a resolution supported by the Socialists Communists and Radicals declaring that the deputies were free during the duration of the legislative session. The government opposed this and announced that it would make the matter a question of confidence.

Pay Penalty Last Night For Murder of Woman's Husband.

GRAY WALKS FIRMLY.

SING SING PRISON, OSSINING, N.Y., Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Mrs. Ruth Snyder died in the electric chair at 11.09 o'clock last night, muttering Biblical quotations, and Henry Judd Gray followed her to death at 11.16, his lips moving in prayer, but making no audible sound.

Mrs. Snyder was lead to the death chamber by two matrons, who stayed with her until the end.

The current was turned on at 11.05 o'clock, was turned off two minutes later, and after an examination lasting another two minutes she was pronounced dead.

As soon as Mrs. Snyder's body had been taken from the room, Gray, sentenced with her for the murder of her husband, was led in. A Catholic priest had murmured a ritual as Mrs. Snyder died and Gray was accompanied by a Protestant minister.

As the minister read in a solemn voice, Gray's lips were seen to move in responsive prayer. The current was turned on for him at 11.12 o'clock, off at 11.14 o'clock, and he was pronounced dead at 11.16 o'clock.

Mrs. Snyder was given three shocks of 2,200 volts, and Gray two.

Mrs. Snyder's appearance was a surprise to persons in the death house who had not seen her since her trial last spring. She seemed to have aged many years, her face was haggard, and her once blonde hair hung limply about her face in streaky brown wisps.

Gray, on the other hand, seemed not to have changed one whit during the months of his confinement. He carried himself erect and walked with a firm step, not needing assistance even in arranging himself in the chair.

Brains Normal.

Autopsies on the bodies of Mrs. Ruth Snyder and Henry Judd Gray disclosed that the barins of both were normal, prison officials announced to-day. The autopsies were performed by Dr. James Kerney, assistant prison surgeon, and were witnessed by four visiting physicians.

Jane Gray, nine year old daughter of Henry Judd Gray, will receive a letter from her father on her birthday each year until she is twenty-one years old. Just prior to the execution last night, Gray turned over a packet of letters to his attorney, with instructions that one be delivered to his daughter each year. The letters were written by Gray at prison.

Mrs. Ruth Snyder also left a letter to be mailed to her nine year old daughter Lorraine and one for her mother, Mrs. Josephine Brown.

LEAD CHANGES IN LONG GRIND

Lands and Van Nek Are Now Ahead in Bicycle Race.

HAVE THREE LAP LEAD.

CHICAGO, Jan. 13. — (Canadian Press.)—Reggie McNamara and Charley Winter, who had set the pace since Tuesday night in Chicago's nineteenth six-day race, at six a.m. today found themselves three laps behind Dave Lands and L. Van Nek, Holland-American team.

The iron man of six-day cyclists and his team mate faltered in the "pinch." Since taking the lead, they have attempted to hold on doggedly, but game as they were, their endurance apparently could not last.

HIGHEST HONOR WILL BE GIVEN NOTED NOVELIST

Thomas Hardy To Be Interred in Westminser Abbey Next Monday.

MANY TRIBUTES.

Other Great Leaders of Literature Send Condolences to Widow.

LONDON, Jan. 13. — (Canadan Press.)— The highest honor in the gift of the British nation to a departed citizen — interment in the Westminster Abbey—has been accorded Thomas Hardy, England's noted writer, who died at his home in Dorchester Wednesday. It was announced last evening that the burial in the abbey would take place Monday afternoon.

Acceptance of the honor coincides with the universal feeling of veneration for the dead poet and novelist. It is known, however, that Thomas Hardy himself would have desired simple burial in the little Dorset village of Stinsford, where lies the remains of his parents in the quiet village churchyard. Stinford, about 1½ miles from Dorchester, is the "Mellstock" of his Wessex novels. Throughout the day, tributes were arriving at Max Gate, the Hardy home. The king, from Sandringham, sent to the widow an expression of grief and sympathy in behalf of himself and the queen, in a loss which, the Sovereign said, "will be shared by all his countrymen, in whose literature his name will live permanently."

Other messages came from the Prince of Wales and most of the great leaders in literature and art.

The author's funeral will take place at 2 p.m. Monday at the abbey, his widow said last night in telephoning her acceptance of a tomb in Westminster.

Although no announcement has been made, it is assumed that Mr. Hardy's body will be cremated and the ashes buried, as in the most recent interments at Westminster.

It was decided some time ago that in consequence of the crowded condition of the abbey and for hygienic reasons, no more bodies would be buried.

COTTAGE BURNED.

Toronto Man's Summer Residence at Pigeon River is Burned.

EAST EMILY, Jan. 13.—The summer cottage of Ormond Hayes, of Toronto, at Fee's Landing, on Pigeon River, was burned to the ground this morning by fire of unknown origin. The house was unoccupied, although furnished, and its contents were destroyed, as well.

The first dwelling house built entirely of steel has been erected at Duisberg, Germany, and contains four rooms and a narrow hall.

Heavy Guard Placed Over Prison Grounds

SING SING PRISON, N. Y., Jan. 13. — The prison grounds were closed and guarded against the curious public last night as the hour drew near for Ruth Snyder and Henry Judd Gray to die.

Even at 8 o'clock three hours before the time of the electrocution a crowd of half a hundred men and women were gathered about the main gate.

Six armed guards stood before the great stone arch and stopped all but those who passed from going further.

Inside the prison Mrs. Snyder and Gray waited as their last remaining minutes of life ticked relentlessly away.

Gray was said to be resigned, but Mrs. Snyder, at eight o'clock was still conferring with her attorneys regarding some last minute attempt to stay the executioner's hand.

In preparation for this move, whatever it might prove to be, two deputy attorneys-general waited in the prison. They were Deputy Attorneys-General Beyer and Matthews who brought Warden Lawes a copy of the vacation of the court stay secured for Mrs. Snyder last night.

"We'll stay right here until after the execution," Beyer said. "We didn't know what we'll be needed for, but if anything happens we'll be here to handle it."

COMMERCIAL TIN ORE FOUND IN NORTH, COMPANIES THINK

Seven Mining Concerns Lay Out Program to Work on Claims.

REPORT BY ENGINEER.

Discoveries Near Swastika — Expert Says Ridge Shows Signs of Valuable Metal.

TORONTO, January 12. — Five English mining companies and two United States groups are reported to have quietly acquired during recent years properties along the border between Bernhardt and Maisonville Townships, north of Swastika, in Northern Ontario, in the expectation that along five miles of a pegmatite dyke they will find commercial deposits of tin.

This most useful metal has been obtained chiefly from the Malay Peninsula, Bolivia, Dutch East Indies, Cornwall, Australia, Nigeria, and South Africa, but though occurrences have been reported from several localities in Canada there have never before been, except in one instance, such extensive plans made for development. The other case is that of Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company, which is reported to have taken up 100 claims in the Chibougamau area last summer.

If the deposits prove up to the expectations of the companies which have been quietly exploring their possibilities, this would add to Canada's growing list of another of the most important minerals of the world.

A Five-Mile Dyke.

About July, 1923, Edward Cowperthwaite, M.E., at present resident in Toronto, who has studied tin mining in various parts of the world, examined a pegmatite dyke north of Swastika, in Bernhardt and Maisonville Townships, and decided that from surface indications it was very promising. The dyke runs along for about five miles, sometimes exposed and in other places covered by drift. Assays made have shown values running from 1 to 4 per cent. of cassiterite, which is the oxide of tin. With a metal like tin, which sells at $1,200 a ton, such a proportion is very promising. Cassiterite occurs almost invariably in pegmatite dykes, which, in the words of a report made by Mr. Cowperthwaite to London, "occur in association with igneous rocks, especially the granites, and their constituent minerals are usually quartz, feldspar, mica, fluorite, tourmaline, and apatite; also frequently lithium, molybdenite, columbite, and cassiterite (tin); the latter mineral, tin, being found associated with quartz and formed through the agency of vapors which carried tin with boron and fluorine."

Believes Deposit Commercial

Mr. Copperthwaite on being interviewed yesterday said that he had been visiting Canada for 28 years and that he had examined pegmatite dykes in various parts of Canada, notably in British Columbia and in Haliburton, Ont. The dyke in the latter place showed considerable radioactivity but other and greater finds in the world made that discovery for the time being at least useless. He felt satisfied that the particular claims which he had been examining in Bernhardt and Maisonville townships would prove commercial, and he was also of the opinion that other areas of tin-bearing rocks would be found in the Pre-Cambrian area. There was no reason why it should not be so.

English Companies Concerned.

Among the English companies which have secured tin areas in the district referred to are the Rhodesian Mining Company of South Africa, the Pafu Mining Company, of West Africa, the Ontario Gold Veins, Ltd., which is a subsidiary of a London group, and has been registered in England, and the National Railway and Navigation Company of London. Two United States groups have been tying up claims to the west and south as well. The North American Development Company and the Vederman group are chiefly concerned although it is said that the Minerals Separation Corporation has also had representatives in the region looking over the prospects. None of these companies is reported as needing to apply to the public for financing.

RECORD SHOW COMES TO END

Prizes Given Out on Final Evening of Big Poultry Exhibit.

MR. X DISCLOSED.

The Peterborough Poultry Show concluded last evening with a very gratifying three-day exhibition, which was a huge success from start to finish, and made a record in the history of the organization, both in attendance and in the number of exhibits, which were of an exceptionally high quality. The success achieved is due in great part to the efforts of the president, F. H. Dawson, who looked after every detail with careful attention, and had generous assistance rendered him by officials of the society.

In the absence of Mayor Denne, the prizes were presented last evening by Alderman G. A. Macdonald. The moving pictures of the World's Poultry Congress and of the manufacture of "Full o' Pep" products, presented every evening by the Quaker Oats Company's expert, Fred Walsh, again attracted the attention last night of the large crowd present, and The Examiner's Mysterious Mr. X was another source of interest and amusement. Walter Barringer of The Examiner staff acted the part of Mr. X last night, and Mrs. Fred Walsh, Euclid Avenue, was the lucky winner of the prize of $5 or a turkey, presented to his discoverer.

THE PRIZE WINNERS:

A. C. Dorkings.

Cake plate by John Hill for the most points—R. J. Hope.

Aluminum kettle by J S. Boyd, for best hen—R. J. Hope.

New Factor Comes Up Maharajah's Wedding

BOMBAY, British India, Jan. 13 (Canadian Press).—A new obstacle to the marriage of the former Maharajah of Indore and Miss Nancy Ann Miller, of Seattle, Washington, cropped up yesterday when the secretary of the Hindu Missionary Society here declared that Miss Miller could not be converted to Hinduism merely to enable her to marry the former maharajah.

The former ruler has been in touch with the Hindu Missionary Society in an effort to arrange for the conversion of the girl.

Reports continue to come to Bombay that public opinion in Indore is strongly opposed to the idea of his taking a third wife. His second wife is taking the news hard and is prostrated with grief.

Miss Miller is reported to be besieged in Ceylon by interviewers, photographers and literary agents, but is understood to have repulsed all approaches.

Receives Much Encouragement From the Minister of Agriculture.

PICTURES HELP.

Arguments Backed Up By Movies of Peterborough Fair in Full Swing.

Hon. J. S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture in the Provincial Cabinet, was asked yesterday to give Peterborough Industrial Exhibition support to the amount of $50,000 which citizens of Peterborough believe is only part of what the Exhibition has merited in its work for the community and district.

A very representative delegation headed by Mayor Roland Denne, President of the Exhibition Board, and with Thomas McIndoo, 1st Vice-President of the Exhibition Board; ex-Mayor J. J. Duffus, George Gillespie, ex-M.P.P.; Alderman W. Stocker, Alderman H. C. Huffman, Alderman J. M. Greene, Alderman N. Phelan; Alderman S. A. Lowe, City Clerk S. R. Armstrong, Thomas Graham, William Knox, Harvey Webber, V. Eastwood, Mr. Stubbs, Mr. Potter, Wilbert Roseborough, Hugh Bertram, Jack Bertram, S. Milburn, Charles Westlake, Charles Moore, William Steinkrauss, Clayton Hanbidge, G. McBain, H. Seymour, William Savigny, Bruce Savigny, Mr. Stewart, W. R. Breyfogle, J. Gillespie, W. P. Turner, and R. H. Turner, was introduced by W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P. The spokesmen were Mayor Denne, and Messrs. McIndoo, Duffus, Gillespie, Breyfogle, Eastwood and R. Turner. A great deal of encouragement was given the deputation by the Minister.

Picture Shown

Considerable interest and strength were added to the arguments of the deputation by Fred L. Roy, who showed the Minister cinematograph pictures of the Peterborough Exhibition in full swing.

It was pointed out to the Minister that 43,000 paid admissions were recorded in 1927, and in ten years the Fair has come from the bottom of 378 Fairs to the top. In spite of the wonderful growth and the great service that is being done, Peterborough Industrial Exhibition only receives $800 from the Ontario Government. The deputation expressed willingness to accept the greater part of the provincial tax and to conduct a winter exhibition as well as the regular fall show if the requested grant is given by the Provincial Government.

Minister Favorable

Hon. J. S. Martin expressed appreciation of the points made by the delegation and appeared very favorable toward the making of a grant. He promised to take the matter up with the Cabinet and said he would give the proposition his encouragement. "I feel that the time has come to do something for the Peterborough Exhibition, but just what we can do for you I am not prepared to say at present. I think, however," he said, "it will be a fairly tangible amount.

In complimenting the delegation on its representative nature and on the work done in this community, the Minister remarked on the recognition given Peterborough Industrial Exhibition by the Dominion Government this being the only show outside of Toronto, Ottawa, and London, receiving a grant from the Dominion Government.

The members of the delegation are very hopeful that their request for this grant, which will be used to erect a new building to house the dairy products, ladies' work, art and other displays, will be granted.

HELPFUL TALK GIVEN Y'S MEN

Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe is Speaker at Weekly Meeting of Club.

MEN NEEDED

The Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe, pastor of Murray Street Baptist Church, was the speaker at the weekly luncheon of the Y's Men's Club, held last evening at the Y.M.C.A. He gave a most inspiring talk on the need of the world for men of character. Mr. Sutcliffe's points in the character of the men needed were ideals, wisdom, leadership, and faith. They should be prophets, not in the sense of fore-tellers or fortune tellers, but as forth tellers, telling the people of their own day what is needed, original thinkers, not scribes who repeat the wisdom handed down to them.

High ideals, with a reach greater than the grasp, faith in their God, their fellow men, and their own powers were stressed by the speaker.

The thanks of the club and appreciation of the thoughtful, thought provoking address was expressed by Don Lapp and Bill Giles. President Tom Dutton presided at the meeting and announced that the next meeting will be with the directors of the Association at the annual meeting of the Y.M.C.A.

Dan Hoover had his cheek cut on Tuesday while playing at school. Dr. Eagleson had to put in a stitch before dressing the wound, but he is reported to be doing well.

LABOR FACTIONS HOLD CONFERENCE

"Peace in Industry" Movement Formally Launched in England.

LONDON, Jan. 13. — (Canadian Press.) — The "peace in industry" movement was formerly launched yesterday at a conference largely attended by representatives of both employees and industrialists at Burlington House. This first conference was merely formal and devoted to speeches by Sir Alfred Mond, who originated the idea of bringing the employers and the workmen together for a closer understanding, and Ben Turner, labor leader. They outlined the objects of the conference, and there was a short general discussion.

It developed from the proceedings that one of the chief difficulties will be to get over jealousies of the trade unions on one side and the employers' organizations on the other, in any movement leaving them out of the count.

Ben Turner alluded to this difficulty when he said he hoped they were all agreed that there must be no trespassing on the sphere or functions of the existing organizations of employers and workers.

Sir Alfred Mond had previously renounced any desire to destroy the organized labor movement, and declared that it was only desired to deal with general lines of policy, and not with detailed problems of the different industries.

It was agreed that Sir Alfred and Mr Turner should alternately preside at future meetings of the conference. Sir Alfred presided yesterday.

The movement now awaits the action of the council of the trades union congress for the appointment of a committee to meet the already constituted employers' committee and arrange further steps. At the close of the meeting, Mr. Turner said it had been an extraordinary good conference, but A. J. Cook, secretary of the miners' federation, who also was present, was in an angry mood. He said: "The whole thing has been an absolute farce, and nothing will come of it."

No Foundation To Viceroy Rumor

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 13.—(Canadian Press.)—"There is no foundation for the report that the Governor-General will take the title of Viceroy, nor will the matter be discussed during the visit of Lt. Col. Amery," said Premier Mackenzie King yesterday. The Prime Minister was commenting on a newspaper report to the effect that the title of Viceroy might be taken by the representative of the King in Canada. He went on to say that there was only one viceroy in the British Empire, the Viceroy of India. India, however, was an empire and not, like Canada, a self-governing Dominion.

APSLEY RED CROSS SOCIETY PROSPERS

Treasurer's Report to Annual Meeting Shows Surplus—Will Hold Fair.

APSLEY, Jan. 13.—The annual meeting of the Apsley branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society was held in the Parish Hall on Monday evening with Rev. C. A. G. Spence presiding. The financial report was presented, which showed receipts amounting to $2,551.35, and expenditure, $2,132.33, leaving a balance in hand of $419.02. Mr. Spence reported having received the Apsley Branch Warrant, which was issued on the first day of the year by the Ontario Provincial Division. The following officers were elected unanimously for 1928. President, Rev. C. A. G. Spence; vice-President, Mr. W. Lean, Secretary, and Mrs. W. Lean, Treasurer; Mrs. J. Downing; Committee, Archie Downing, Thomas Tanner, Norman Lean, James Downing. Representative to Divisional Council, Mrs. C. S. Windsor; Auditor, Mrs. A. Downing.

A well attended and enthusiastic meeting in support of the Apsley Agricultural Society was held in the Parish Hall on Wednesday evening, with Reeve V. Windsor acting as chairman, R. H. Knox, the originator of the scheme was the first speaker, and explained that he had been approached for the last four years by different residents, who wanted to see a Fall Fair in Apsley. Accordingly, he had broached the subject on Nomination day, and seeing how well it was received he had enlisted the support of Mr. Spence, and together they had canvassed the section, securing the necessary number of members to apply for permission to form an agricultural society.

Mr. Spence followed, dealing exhaustively with the two sides of the question, its advantages and disadvantages, saying that the former outweighed the latter overwhelmingly, therefore it must be a good thing for the community to take up. He also explained in detail the Agricultural Societies' Act. Thomas Stephens, and Norman Lean also spoke supporting the scheme. All those who were present and had not signed for membership previously, did so at the close of the meeting, and a total membership of seventy-one was secured. It transpired that the last fall fair held in Apsley was twenty-nine years ago. The enthusiasm displayed is an assurance that their latest move to boost Apsley will meet with the greatest success.

Maharajah's Wedding Meets Many Delays

COLOMBO, Ceylon, Jan. 13.—(Canadian Press).—Troubles of the former Maharajah of Indore and Miss Nancy Ann Miller, of Seattle, Washn., in arranging their marriage, have been so numerous that at least one member of the Maharajah's staff is beginning to wonder if the wedding ever will take place.

"I am not in a position to say anything about the proposed wedding, which may or may not come off" this member of Indore's staff said today.

Meanwhile friends of the former Maharajah think that the wedding may occur in India and that the couple will spend their honeymoon travelling to the United States. It is believed that passport difficulties will be raised if they attempted to proceed to India, where news that the former ruler of Indore was to take a third wife has not met with any enthusiasm.

"Antique" Makers Buy Canadian Wood

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 13.—Rarity of bird's-eye and curly maple in the United States and the huge demand occasioned by the popularity of antique productions, have led United States furniture specialists to invade Montreal in search of the coveted wood.

Some of those funny hole-and-corner stores where the antique connoisseur often finds treasures, are reaping a harvest as a result. One storekeeper in this category recently sold four bureaus with solidy curly maple fronts; he got $75 apiece for them. The American buyer chopped the front away from all four bureaus and left the carcasses. Another proprietor of a wee shop had some odd strips of curly and bird's-eye maple on a shelf. An American buyer eyed them, and put down $25 for the bundle which could be carried under one arm.

The Americans say that the vogue for colonial furniture below the line shows no let up, despite predictions of experts that it was passing. Originals having gone sky-high, the reproduction manufacturers are flourishing.

Paul Kochanski, the Polish violinist, and a chorus of sixteen male voices will present the Atwater Kent Hour Sunday, January 15, through the National Broadcasting Company and twenty-three associated stations.

These Atwater Kent Singers are all members or former members of the well known New York University Glee Club who were selected, organized and directed by Reinald Werrenrath specially for radio broadcasting.

Kochanski began his musical studies early under the guidance of a father who did not believe in sparing the bow and spoiling the violinist. At nine he made his debut in Warsaw, where he studied under Mlynarski and then with Cesar Thomson in Brussels, winning the Conservatory's first prize at eighteen.

He began his solo appearances with the principal orchestra in Poland and probably no young artist has made more recital appearances in various parts of the world. He has been heard many times in the principal cities of Europe, touring France, England, Germany, Russia, Poland, Spain, Greece, Turkey and Egypt, as well as making annual visits to the United States, Canada and South America. He first came to America in 1921, at the invitation of Walter Damrosch.

"In the whole field of music there is no literature so poor as that of the violin," commented Kochanski in discussing his radio program. "With the exception of a few fine things of Beethoven, Brahms, Mozart and Bach there is no real music for the violin."

In the program, he maintains, lies the secret of an interesting concert. While he always includes several of the greatest old violin classics, there is a touch of modernity somewhere towards the end. He is planning to introduce many noveities to his American radio audience.

HUNDREDS NOW END COLDS BY HOSPITAL-TESTED METHOD

TOOK DOCTOR'S ADVICE —COLD GONE NEXT DAY

A great many Peterboro people like James H. Springer, have learned that it is no longer necessary to let a cold make a person feel miserable. For doctors at the clinic are recommending a simple home treatment that brings quick, sure relief—often in a few hours.

A severe cold had kept Mr. Springer from business several days. When nothing seemed to help him he called the clinic for advice. Doctor recommended double strength dose of Cherry Pectoral. With the first swallow he felt its soothing, comforting warmth, from his nose deep down into his bronchial tubes. Relief began immediately and in a day or so the cold was completely gone.

COUGH GREW WORSE; FEARED PNEUMONIA

Every day cases are reported which show the same quick, sure relief experienced by Mrs. C. M. Ellis and vast numbers of Peterboro people. Mrs. Ellis awoke on Tuesday with an inflamed throat, nose stopped up and eyes watery. She was unable to get relief through use of a nose spray and by the following day the cold was worse. Congestion had spread deep down into the tubes which lead into the lungs, and pneumonia was feared.

Wednesday noon her physician was called and prescribed Ayer's Cherry Pectoral—a mixture of ingredients which hospitals have found to be the most effective to end coughs and colds. That night her head began to clear up and she could sleep without coughing. The next day she was greatly improved and by Friday night was completely rid of the cough and cold.

Doctors Show Quickest Way to End Head Colds, Coughs and Bronchial Colds

Head colds and chest colds can now be ended quickly—often overnight—by the unique double action of a home remedy now recommended by doctors at the health clinic. And druggists here say that vast numbers of Peterboro people, like Mrs. Edna Case, have found that it quickly drives out a stubborn cold, even in severe cases where every known remedy used had failed.

"Is Quick Method for Home Use"

Doctors at the clinic were called for advice when Mrs. Case's cold grew worse, causing fear of pneumonia. They immediately advised Ayer's Cherry Pectoral—a concentrated mixture of ingredients which hospitals have found to be the quickest, safest and most dependable to end a cold. Almost instantly she felt the comforting, healing warmth—from her nose passages deep down into her chest. In a few hours she was greatly relieved and in another day or so was entirely rid of her cold.

See other cases—all certified by a member of the hospital clinic.

Doctors find that this hospital medicine does far more than stop coughing instantly. It goes straight to the seat of a stubborn head cold or chest cold. Absorbed through and through the whole system, it quickly checks phlegm, heals irritation and drives out the cold from the nose passages, throat and bronchial tubes.

Just a few pleasant spoonfuls of Cherry Pectoral now and you'll feel like a different person tomorrow. Even sick children love the flavor—and those who have once tried Cherry Pectoral have been delighted to find that it keeps the whole family free from colds and coughs all winter if used according to the hospital direction in each carton.

MASON ENDS COLD QUICK, NOVEL WAY

By choosing the home method recommended by doctors at the hospital clinic, E. K. Mason, like numbers of people here found how quickly one can get rid of a head cold, chronic cough, or chest cold.

He neglected his cold for a day or so after he had begun to sneeze and cough. Examination showed that one of his nasal tubes was badly congested, his throat was inflamed and the cold was spreading down into the bronchial tubes. Doctors then gave him Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Almost immediately his head and chest began to clear up and in less than two days all traces of the cold were gone.

CHILD COUGHED HARD —GRANDMA WORRIED

Mrs. Edith Cummings became worried when her seven year old granddaughter, Betty, coughed so hard Sunday night it seemed she would strangle. Her little bronchial tubes were rapidly filling up with congestion and pneumonia was feared. As soon as daylight came she called her family doctor who phoned the druggist to send up a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Little Betty liked the taste and just a swallow or two relieved the hard coughing spells. She continued taking it as the doctor ordered and in a day or so was out frolicking—as well as ever.

PROHIBIT CHILDREN FROM MOVIE SHOWS

New Law To Be Brought Under Consideration in Quebec Assembly.

QUEBEC, Que., Jan. 13 (Canadian Press). — Announcement was made yesterday in the Quebec Legislative Assembly by Premier Taschereau that a law will be brought into force to prohibit children under 16 years of age from attending the cinema, whether accompanied or not by their elders. This follows the Montreal (Laurier Palace) theatre disaster, which caused 78 deaths. As regards Sunday shows, Mr. Taschereau said the government had heard representations from both sides, and the government felt that it would be well to let the matter go to the courts.

The Workmen's Compensation Act which would be brought in would please both workmen and employers, said the Premier. There would be a commission named to replace the courts, but insurance would be left to the companies.

The Premier, while pleased with the increased revenues of the province warned against too many demands being made to the Roads Department, because of the heavy storm damages of last fall. He also said there would be a fall in revenue because of a lesser cut in the forest this winter. The mills, he said, had secured a heavy stock of wood by cutting trees in the burned-over areas, so that such wood would not be lost, hence the cut this year would be 40 per cent less, and the revenue in proportion.

Mr. Sauve, Opposition leader, said it was necessary that legislation be brought into effect to prevent fraudulent elections, and regretted that the government had not shown "a better example in political morality" than it had last elections. He expressed surprise that the Speech from the Throne had not made some reference to the attitude of Mr. Barron, the Mexican Consul-General, especially so as Mr. Taschereau was fond of speaking of the Legislature as the "only Catholic and French Legislature on the Continent."

Mr. Sauve remarked on the fact that the Hon. William Phillips, United States Minister to Canada, had been present at the opening of the Legislature, and doubted not that the distinguished visitor would feel quite at home in Quebec, and more so each year, this in connection with what Mr. Sauve termed the "invasion of foreign capital."

MANY ATTEND ART EXHIBIT

Copies of Famous Paintings Being Shown at Campbellford School.

GOOD PROGRAM GIVEN.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 13.—Many citizens are attending the Art Exhibit in the High School, held under the auspices of the Public School, to see the copies of the works of the great masters, with which the walls of several rooms of the Collegiate building are hung. Though this exhibition is open to all for a very small entrance fee, there is also the opportunity afforded for any person, so desiring, to purchase a copy of any picture on exhibition. Many lovers of fine pictures have already availed themselves of the opportunity and have given orders.

As an added attraction, there was an excellent program presented last night by the pupils and staff of the Public Schools in the High School auditorium. The program opened with an address from Dr. O. C. Watson, chairman of the Board of Education. This was followed by an instrumental number by the Reiter brothers, Selection from "Carmen," the minuet by Misses Lillian Runions and Aileen Linton. Both numbers were greatly appreciated. Jack Allan's reading was a selection from Drummond, the Habitant writer and bard. The fifth and sixth numbers were a piano number from Chopin by Miss Isabel Bygott and a monologue by Mr. Elliot. "Mascot," an instrumental number by the Reiter brothers, and a vocal duet by Messrs. Hazell and Rollo introduced the tableaux depicting several of the masterpieces which were on exhibition: "The Age of Innocence," by Joshua Reynolds, posed by Rosa Moore; "The Girl with the Apple," posed by Mamie Winstanley and painted by Jean Baptiste Greuze, and "The Song of the Lark," posed by Alta Hay and painted by Julius Briton.

The violin duet by Messrs. Ronald and Billy Richardson won considerable applause, and the reading by Miss Lillian Hay, a talented local artist, was greatly appreciated. The program was concluded by "School Life," an instrumental number by the Reiter brothers.

The exhibition will be open again this evening, and the second attraction will be a dancing party in the assembly room, where first class music will be furnished and a small additional subscription will be charged those who desire to enjoy this form of recreation.

DISTRICT LODGE HOLDS ELECTION

Fred Grills Chosen Master By Orangemen of Percy District.

HONOR ROLL PRESENTED.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 13. — The annual meeting of the Percy District Orange Association, held in the lodge rooms of L.O.L. on Tuesday was one of the largest and most successful meetings of its kind ever held in this district. The presiding officers were District Master W. J. A. Melleville and Deputy Fred Grills. Although considerable interest was taken in the general routine business, the most interesting item was the presentation of an honor roll containing the names of all the members of the district lodges who gave their lives in the Great War.

For the election of officers for the coming terms, Past District Master O. Waller, L.O.L. 108, occupied the chair and presided over the proceedings. The successful candidates were Fred Grills, 108, District Master; William Brown, 1369, District Deputy Master; J. B. Stillman, 526, Chaplain; J. I. Adams, 526, Recording Secretary; Robert A. Linn, 2322, Financial Secretary; Alfred A. Barnum, 2322, Trustee; O. Walters, 108, Lecturer; H. Hutchison, 108, Deputy Lecturer; R. J. Bibby, 526, D.V.C.

After the newly-elected officers had addressed the assembled lodges, and arrangements been made for the district meeting for 1929, the members adjourned to Elliot's Restaurant, where a banquet was tendered them. During the dinner, Brother Spencer rendered some very excellent music, and brief speeches were made by officers of the lodge. The National Anthem concluded the meeting.

Obituary

MISS SOPHIA TURNER.

MILLBROOK, Jan. 13.—An eventful career, and one whose family history was closely interwoven with that of pioneer days in a section of this province, was brought to a close on Friday, January 6, with the passing of Miss Sophia Turner, of Beaverton, at the advanced age of 95 years.

Miss Turner, who retained her faculties to a remarkable degree, was a cousin of Dr. H. A. Turner, Millbrook, her father, who was an Ensign in the British army, and fought at Waterloo, being a brother of the late Dr. Henry Turner, affectionately recalled by older residents here as having been their family physician during the many years of his active practice in this community and surrounding district.

Miss Turner's grandmother was Miss Susan Bascombe, of Vermont, U. S., a cousin of the well known family of that name who were early settlers in the Uxbridge district. Her mother also came from Vermont, her maiden name being Sophia Smalley, and her family came to Canada in 1803, with a number of other American settlers, and located at Cook's Bay, Lake Simcoe.

Miss Turner's father was born at Brabdon, County Cork, Ireland. After the battle of Waterloo the British government discharged its soldiers on half pay, and offered a large grant of land in Canada to any who would take the hazard not only of the long voyage by sailing vessel, but also the risk and hardships of settlement in a new country. Given his choice of five hundred acres of land, Ensign Turner came first to Muddy York, now Toronto, and travelled northwest over the trail which is to-day known as Yonge street, finally taking three hundred acres in Thorah township, and two hundred in the township of Mara.

All the new arrivals in this district made the Smalley home their stopping place, and it was here that the British officer met and married Miss Sophie Smalley in 1822, their first home, a log house in the virgin forest, being on what is now the boundary of Georgina and Thorah townships. The original homestead, now the property of Mr. Robert McTaggart, is in use as a summer cottage.

Of their six children two died in infancy; two sons grew to young manhood and passed away at the ages of 31 and 24 respectively, and of the two daughters, Mrs. McTaggart, the eldest of the family, was the first white child born in Thorah township; her death occurred in her ninety-second year.

Hospitality was the key-note in pioneer days, and in Ensign Turner's primitive home not only was the door always left unlocked, but a supply of firewood was laid in readiness by the fireplace, and food placed on the table, in case late travellers happened along after the family had retired. Miss Turner recalled that quite frequently the only way they knew that visitors had come during the night was by the fact that the food and fuel had been used while they slept.

In the early days when the only means of travel was by horseback, Miss Turner became expert as a horse woman, and always retained a warm friendship for these animals. Among the many interesting reminiscences which she clearly recalled was the necessity of protecting the sheep and cattle from wolves, and hunting moose and deer and other wild animals, in a region which is but sixty miles north of the city of Toronto.

To have known personally of pioneer hardships, and lived through almost a century of the most wonderful age of the world's progress, is a comparatively rare experience, and though Miss Turner outlived practically all the friends of her younger years, she possessed the happy faculty of adding new friendships to her wide circle, and was always bright and alert, taking a keen interest in the affairs of both church and community and of the world at large. The illness which preceded her death was a brief one. In politics she was a staunch Conservative, and in religion an Anglican.

After her parents' decease Miss Turner, who had been considered rather frail in health in her youth, travelled extensively in Great Britain, Ireland and the Continent for twenty-three years, and later crossed Canada to spend a twelve-month with her cousin, the late Dr. Henry Turner, who died in Vancouver, B.C., in March, 1922, aged 94.

About thirty-eight years ago deceased returned to the scenes of her childhood and settled in her own home in Beaverton; a member of her household was Margaret (Peggy) McGuire, an old nurse of her infancy, who lived to the extreme age of 103 years.

Almost all motorists in the Lake Simcoe region are familiar with the Stone Church, known as the Old Kirk, which will soon reach the century mark; Miss Turner was one of the very few who remembered when it was built, and attended its services for several years, until the Anglican church at Beaverton was erected.

In Saint Paul's church the public funeral service was held on Monday at 2.30 p.m., Rev. W. E. Kidd, of Cannington, Rural Dean, being in charge at the house, the church and the graveside. The large number of citizens who filled the church gave evidence of the esteem and respect accorded the deceased, and the family of which she was the last surviving member, by the entire community. Dr. H. A. Turner, Millbrook, and a nephew, Mr. Robert McTaggart, were the nearest surviving relatives in attendance. Interment was in the family plot in the Stone Church cemetery.

Her father's sword, which was in use at the historic battle of Waterloo, and enlarged portraits of her father and mother, in quaint, heavy frames, Miss Turner left to the community, and they will be placed either in the town hall or the public library, fittingly recalling to succeeding generations a family of pioneer fame and usefulness.

Second-hand beauty

THE world is full of women who are beginning to lose the fresh bloom of health. Eagerly, hopefully, they haunt the beauty shops. Trying this. Trying that. Buying beauty by the hour. . . . At best what an empty achievement they attain! Second-hand beauty.

Life could tell a different story if more women knew the part constipation plays in wrecking youth and beauty. If more men but realized how this terrible scourge undermines strength and health. Constipation is at the bottom of many a trouble. The cause of literally dozens of diseases.

And more's the shame when it can be so easily and quickly relieved. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is guaranteed to bring prompt relief—lasting, safe prevention.

Why "all-bran" is so effective

It is "bulk" that combats constipation. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is rich in bulk because it is 100% bran. It distributes moisture throughout the intestines—gently exercising them.

Sweeping out poisonous wastes. Part-bran products seldom contain sufficient bulk to do this effectively. That is why doctors recommend Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Because it is 100% bran.

Better than drugs

Unlike habit-forming pills and laxatives — the quantity of ALL-BRAN you require need never vary. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN works as nature works—naturally. A pleasant, healthful cereal. Isn't that much better than pills or drugs?

Eat with milk or cream—or with fruits or honey added. Use it in cooking too. Sprinkle it into soups. Mix it with other cereals. Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily—chronic cases, with every meal.

Be sure, though, you get genuine Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Don't risk part-bran substitutes. ALL-BRAN is sold by grocers everywhere. Served at hotels and restaurants. On dining-cars. Made by Kellogg in London, Ont.

Guaranteed! Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is sold with this definite guarantee: Eat it according to directions. If it does not relieve constipation safely, we will refund the purchase price.

ABOUT THE GAS PLANT.

The Council will have to consider almost at once whether or not Peterborough should purchase the local gas plant and operate it under public ownership.

In the unscrambling of those utilities other than power that were secured by the Ontario Government in the purchase of the system of the Seymour Power Company, the Hydro-Electric Commission, operating these utilities for the Government, has decided to dispose of the gas plants at Oshawa, Peterborough and elsewhere throughout the district.

The municipalities will be given an opportunity to purchase the plants, but if they decline to do so the Commission proposes to put them on the market and sell to private interests.

The matter is one that will require more than rapid-fire consideration by the local Council.

There are many angles to be considered, and the proposition should be investigated in all its aspects before any definite policy is decided upon.

Perhaps the Council could not do better than to follow the example of the Oshawa Council, which has already named a special committee to investigate every phase of the situation and to report back to the Council as soon as possible.

THE TARIFF BOARD.

While some people are calling loudly for the tariff to be taken completely out of politics by putting the matter of tariff changes in the hands of a board of economists, the present Advisory Tariff Board has come under hot fire from Thomas W. Bird, Progressive member for Nelson, Manitoba.

Far from desiring to take the tariff out of politics, Mr. Bird complains that the Government should be responsible for any tariff changes that are made, and that the present Board is merely a buffer "between the Government and public opinion and created solely as a means of shifting responsibility."

As a matter of fact, under the present system the Government is responsible for any revision of the tariff.

The Tariff Board can merely advise; it hears the evidence and makes its recommendations, but the Government is no way committed to the adoption of these recommendations.

In any case the Government has the last word, and must take the responsibility.

All in all, the plan now adopted seems to be a happy medium between the absolutely independent commission and the old method by which tariff changes were made without a great deal of investigation by the Government itself.

The Tariff Board is a means by which all data dealing with the tariff can be collected and summarized, and at the same time the responsibility of the Government is not eliminated.

GETTING TOO MUCH.

A Niagara Falls man was found to have purchased thirty-five quarts of whiskey and eighty quarts of beer from Government stores in eight weeks, and The Stratford Beacon-Herald remarks, "Ontario did not vote for this."

Undoubtedly there are many cases in which an unreasonably large quantity of liquor is being purchased, but the number of such instances should materially decrease as the staffs of Government stores profit by experience and a better knowledge of their customers.

It must be remembered that the conditions were new to the vendors and their staffs when they assumed their duties.

They did not know in many cases with whom they were dealing, and they have had to learn as they went along to single out the men who were abusing the privilege conferred on them under the Act.

Such customers are likely to find it increasingly difficult to secure large supplies.

The heavy consumers and the repeaters are being spotted, and with the Liquor Control Board eager to correct abuses and the stores staffs anxious that the spirit as well as the letter of the law shall be observed, the patrons of Mr. Hanna's chain store liquor business will find themselves obliged to toe the mark.

Wherever the Act is being abused there must be a change or public opinion, the final court in all such things, will demand a different system.

ACCIDENTS AND COMPENSATION.

The figures of the Workmen's Compensation Board of Ontario for 1927 show that $6,086,738.05 was awarded in benefits, which is an increase of $265,386.15 over the prior year.

Included in the figures was $1,062,859.64 for medical aid, this being the first year in Ontario in which medical aid costs have run over one million dollars.

There were 71,979 accidents reported to the Board in 1927, this being an increase of 6,063 over 1926, and there were 429 fatalities reported in 1927.

Last year, therefore, stands out in the history of workmen's compensation in this Province as the year in which there were more accidents reported to the Compensation Board than in any other twelve-month period.

Up to the beginning of this year, industry in Ontario has had a full thirteen years' experience of workmen's compensation. In that period the Compensation Board has handled reports of 639,909 accidents, including 5,157 death cases, and has awarded the staggering sum of $63,410,754.40.

In giving out these figures, R. B. Morley, General Manager, Industrial Accident Prevention Associations, states that the experience for 1927 calls for closer co-operation in the matter of accident prevention work.

Both employer and employee are keenly interested in industrial safety and close co-operation will prevent many accidents.

Mr. Morley states that he has reports from plants in Ontario included in the membership of the Industrial Accident Prevention Associations which operated for the whole of 1927 without a lost-time accident, showing that good accident experience is not a matter of chance, but calls for carefully planned work.

Many indutries in Ontario are now striving to make 1928 an accident-free year so far as their plants are concerned, and the experience of the past year indicates that an increasing number of plants will operate this year without any lost-time accidents.

A SCHOLAR TAKES HIS EASE.

According to the strange law of relativity which governs modern publicity, a champion pugilist is of greater importance than a President or Prime Minister; and the activities of a super-criminal, or the matrimonial entanglements of a movie actress, have a more potent appeal than the achievements of a great scientist or man of letters. Even when their course has been run, and time bids them make room for others, there is a marked difference in the popular appreciation evinced. A hockey hero quits the game, and his departure is mourned through columns of print; a University professor and historian of note retires after 35 years of service, and the fact is hardly mentioned.

Such has been the experience of Professor M. Wrong of Toronto University, whose retirement from the Chair of Modern History at that seat of learning, after directing the historical studies of two generations of students, has not received the attention that his qualities as a teacher and scholar, and his long and valuable service, would warrant. That it should be so is a circumstance not to be altogether explained by the popular conception of a university professor as a pedant nurtured in cloistered seclusion, and marked by the intellectual aloofness and academic outlook of one out of touch with the realities of life.

There may be, and probably are, professors of the type described not long ago by Stuart P. Sherman, himself a former occupant of an American university chair. "I am acquainted," wrote that critic,

> "With no more essentially sluggish, improvident, resourceless, unambitious and time-wasting creature than the ordinary professor of 40, nor anything more empty of adventure or hope than the future years of his career, daily to be occupied in matching his wits with the flat mediocrity of successive generations of adolescent C students, and patiently waiting until the death of some better man, hardy and long-lived, allows him to slip into a larger pair of old shoes."

Professor Wrong of Toronto, is long past forty, and has qualified for the slippered case of a good and faithful servant of scholarship; but it would be difficult to find in his career anything to justify the dismal picture drawn by the American ex-professor. The successor of that distinguished scholar, Sir Daniel Wilson, was called upon 35 years ago to maintain a cultural tradition not often surpassed, and to occupy a place in the academic life of Toronto is not easily filled. How admirably he did both is acknowledged by all who have watched the growth of the century-old university, and noted the influences associated with it.

But it is not only within the restricted academic sphere that Professor Wrong has performed valuable service. In promoting the study of history, and shaping the art of writing it, he has exercised an influence throughout Canada that cannot be adequately estimated. It is not too much to say that if historical study, research and exposition have attained a worthy standard in the Dominion, it is in substantial measure due to the example, direction and zeal of the retired professor of Modern History at Toronto.

It was he who first recognized, and endeavored to meet, the need for a more intensive study of Canadian history than was possible in the text-books. Thirty years ago he established and, for a full decade, conducted single-handed that valuable repository of information and scholarly comment, "The Review of Historical Publications Relating to Canada." For 15 years more he acted as joint editor of that annual, freely contributing to its pages and, by his well-informed criticism, encouraging Canadian authors in their work. And when, eight years ago, the Review was changed from an annual into a quarterly, and re-named the "Canadian Historical Review," he continued his services to Canadian literature as a member of the editorial board of the new publication.

Esteemed as a teacher, respected as a critic, and ranked high as an historian, Professor Wrong retires from active academic life with the good wishes and warm appreciation of a wide circle of students and readers. The hope will be generally entertained that, though severed from the class-room, he will, with his ripe knowledge of history, rare scholarship and gifted pen, continue to serve, in the statutory phrase, "for the general advantage of Canada."—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Aurelien Belanger, Liberal member for Russell, thinks the Ontario Legislature should follow the example of the Dominion Parliament and limit speeches to forty minutes. He'll have plenty of support in that opinion.

Glaring headlights are blamed for a motor bus carrying twenty-five passengers being ditched on the Kingston road. When are the authorities going to make the law against such lights mean something?

According to J. G. Lethbridge, the Ontario Progressive party is too tough to be swallowed by the Liberals, which will give Premier Ferguson a chance to remark that he thought the Liberal Party would swallow anything.

The weather prophets are safe in predicting plenty of wind for February with the Dominion Parliament and Ontario Legislature both in session during that month.

The Ontario Government liquor stores are apparently not being conducted according to usual business methods. They advertise no January bargains.

Premier King evidently believes the Senate is going to last for some time. He is appointing thirty-seven-year-old Senators now.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 13 (Canadian Press).—A feature of the domestic grain trade here yesterday was the good demand for scalping oats for export account and sales of quite a few loads were made at 43c per bushel, ex-track, Fort William for shipment. The trade in other grades of oats was quiet, the demand being only for odd cars and prices were unchanged.

The movement for Spring and Winter wheat grades of flour was slow, but prices were steady.

The market for millfeed was without any new feature to note, prices being maintained on account of the number of orders coming forward and the somewhat limited quantities available. A steady trade was done in standard grades of rolled oats and the undertone to the market was firm.

Owing to the liberal supplies of fresh eggs coming forward the undertone to the market continued easy, but there was no change in prices. The demand was good. The receipts were 1,149 cases.

Only a moderate amount of business was done in potatoes and prices were steady. Sales of Prince Edward Island Green Mountains were made at $1.15 per bag of 90 lbs; Prince Edward Island White potatoes at $1.05 per bag of 90 lbs; New Brunswick Green Mountains at $1.00 per bag of 90 lbs in bulk, and New Brunswick White potatoes at 95c per bag of 90 lbs in bulk, ex-track.

There was no improvement in the demand for imported beans, but the tone of the market was firm. Car lots of choice white hand-picked are selling at $2.65 per bushel, ex-track, and in broken lots at $2.75 per bushel, ex-store.

The butter trade continued extremely quiet, and prices were unchanged. The receipts were 89 packages.

Little business was done in cheese, there being practically no demand from any source. The receipts were 32 boxes.

TWO CHILDREN DIE IN FLAMES

Fire Destroys Two Houses at Delhi Early Yesterday—Father Dying.

MOTHER BADLY BURNED.

BRANTFORD, Ont., Jan. 12.—(Canadian Press.)—Grace, three, and Vernon, two, children of Mr. and Mrs. W. Jackson, Delhi, were burned to death, the father is so terribly burned that no hope is held out for him, and the mother is in a critical condition as a result of a fire which wiped out their home early yesterday. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Mrs. M. Bennett, a neighbor, discovered the blaze and, wakening her husband, brought out Mr. and Mrs. Jackson, but were unable to reach the children in time. The Bennett home also caught, but the three Bennett children and much of the furniture were taken out before that home was destroyed.

Coroner Vumstein has called an inquest and a representative of the Fire Marshal is investigating.

A.Y.P.A. ENTERTAINS LEAGUE MEMBERS

United Church Young People Guests of Omemee Anglican Society.

OMEMEE, Jan. 13.—The Anglican Young People's Association entertained the young people of Trinity United Church on Monday evening. The Leaguers met at the church and went in a body to the basement of Christ Church where they were warmly welcomed, and, after prayer by the rector, Rev. A. T. Weir, plenty of entertainment was provided. Two numbers worthy of mention were a solo by thes A.Y.P.A. President, Miss Marion Dickson, and a vocal duet by Miss Dickson and Mr. W. G. Stephenson. A promenade and two contests were the source of much pleasure.

Dainty refreshments were served at the close, and the gathering dispersed, each feeling that once again the spirit of true friendship was renewed and a pleasant evening had been spent together.

Member Charges That Political Rule Keeps Membership Down.

PORTAGE LA PRAIRIE, Jan. 13.—(Canadian Press).—Charges that political domination of the United Farmers of Manitoba by one party was undermining the organization and keeping down its membership were made at yesterday's session of the convention by H. McLeod of Shoal Lake. He charged that that party was the Progressive party. President A. J. Poole characterized statements as absolutely ridiculous.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Ills., Jan. 13 (Canadian Press).—Material upturns took place in the price of corn yesterday, largely as a result of better export demand, together with extreme smallness of country offerings. Hillsdale, Illinois, reported cash corn bringing $1.00 a bushel at a public sale near there.

Late profit taking led to something of a setback from the day's top prices for corn, the market closing unsettled, ¾ cent to ¼ cent net higher. Wheat finished unchanged to ⅝ cent net lower; oats a shade to ⅛ to ¼ cent up, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 7 cents.

Wheat prices were steadied by corn strength, with oats likewise borrowing firmness from the upward tendency of corn. Drought complaints regarding Western portions both of Kansas and Oklahoma wheat territory were also given attention. On the other hand, increasing shipments of Argentine wheat were noted, and the Canadian Growers' pool was stated to be offering lower grades of wheat more freely.

Provisions firmed up.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

ORIGINALS GIVE A.Y.P.A. PROGRAM

Charter Members Have Charge of Meeting at St. John's—Lakefield News.

LAKEFIELD, Jan. 13.—St. John's branch of the A.Y.P.A. was organized in November, 1911, by Rev. H. A. Ben-Oliel now of Collingwood, and there are four of the original members remaining on the roll and when the executive suggested an "Originals Night", these four "old timers" were automatically made the committee in charge. The committee therefore consisted of Mrs. Trude Waldon, Miss Amy Watson and Blanche Graham, and Mr. Reg. Murduff. Unfortunately Mrs. Waldon was indisposed and Mr. Murduff was out of town so that only two of the originals were able to carry on.

After the business had been disposed of the evening was turned over to "Court Whist" which was "original" in that it was the first time it had ever been played at the A.Y.P.A. Prizes were won by Mrs. Mahood, Mr. Chappell and Mr. Stenner.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Canadian Legion elected their officers at a meeting held on Tuesday evening in the Legion rooms.

These officers were elected:

President—Mrs. Marling.

Vice-presidents—Mrs. Chappell and Mrs. Lawless.

Secretary—Mrs. J. R. Robinson.

Treasurer—Mrs. W. W. Leonard.

Mrs. Mackenzie and Mrs. Wood were joint hostesses of a delightful five-table bridge on Monday afternoon at "The Grove." Prizes were won by Mrs. C. E. Strickland, Mrs. Creasar and Mrs. H. G. Fitzgerald.

Mrs. L. H. Grahame and her daughter, Mrs. Elsa May entertained five tables of bridge at "Uplands" on Wednesday afternoon. Prizes were won by Mrs. T. J. Wood, Mrs. G. J. Elmsley, Mrs. F. J. Burgess and Mrs. E. S Kelsey.

The prize-winners at the A.Y.P.A. euchre on Thursday evening last were Miss Hampton and Mr. Stenner. Consolation prizes were won by Miss Elsie Ruel and Mr. Milford Hampton. Ten tables were played.

Band at Rink.

The Band played at the Lakefield Rink on Saturday night for the first time this season and although the ice was rather soft there was a good crowd.

Better walking and better roads would have brought out a much larger number but there was a good showing under the unfavorable conditions.

The Citizens' Band rendered a good program of popular music and added a festive touch to the evening's fun.

The mild weather has made the rink season an uncertainty as there has been skating only a few nights. While the fuel consumer may rejoice the young people are not enjoying the mild season which prevents them from indulging in one of the most enjoyable winter pastimes.

Campbellford

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 13.—Miss Isabelle Armstrong, Perth, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Claude Duncalfe, during Mrs. Duncalfe's convalescence from a serious illness.

Mrs. F. S. Lazier and daughter Rose left yesterday for the Niagara district, where they will spend a few days with Mr. Lazier.

Max Watters returned to Kingston yesterday to resume his duties in the bank there, after spending his vacation with relatives and friends in Campbellford.

Since the address which the Rev. N. Clarke Wallace gave at a recent date on his impressions of England during his recent visit there, considerable interest has been aroused throughout the town when it was learned that he would deliver the same or a similar address next Monday night in the Parish Hall.

Mrs. C. W. Turner, Queen Street, was hostess last night to her Sunday School class, their husbands and mothers. The evening was spent in games, contests, and musical entertainment. For the most part, the music was provided by Mrs. Turner's accomplished daughter, Miss Cherry Turner, and Cecil Searles, violinist. The radio was also used to good advantage, to the enjoyment of the guests. Just before midnight, a very delightful and tasty lunch was served.

Presbyterian Young People Hear Papers on Calvin and Knox.

WARKWORTH, Jan. 13.—The young people of St. Andrew's church held their first devotional meeting for the year in the basement of the church on Monday evening. Gordon McCubbin, the new president, was in the chair.

The members decided to invite the Hastings Society to meet with them on January 30. The secretary also read a letter from Mrs. C. C. Armstrong asking the Society to relieve her of the duties of convener of the devotional committee. It was with much regret that her resignation was accepted. Mrs. Clara Richards was elected in her place.

Mrs. Armstrong had charge of the rest of the meeting. Mr. James Bamber gave a very interesting paper on the life and work of John Calvin and Miss Edith Richards gave a paper on the life of John Knox.

Several hymns were sung and the meeting brought to a close by all repeating the benediction.

JUDGES APPOINTED FOR COMPETITION

Premier King, Dr. Short and Dr. Skelton to Judge Essays.

Yesterday morning, in his annual speech to the shareholders of The Royal Bank of Canada, C. E. McNeill, the General Manager, announced that the Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Dr. Adam Short, and Dr. Oscar D. Skelton will be the judges in The Royal Bank Economic Fellowship competition. He said:

"In order to stimulate general interest in problems of national importance and to encourage advanced study along economic lines in Canadian universities, we have offered a $1,000 Fellowship to the student at any Canadian university who shall prepare the best 3,000-word paper covering one of the topics specified. The subjects selected for the papers which are to be submitted March 1, 1928, are as follows:

"Does Canada need a Federal Farm Loan System? A study of Dr. Tory's report and Federal Legislation.

"Canada's optimum of population and how it may be obtained. In this context the word optimum may be defined to mean the ideal number of people of the type which will be most satisfactory for the building of the nation.

"The potential development of Canadian trade in one of Canada's foreign markets.

"Economic possibilities of the Maritimes. A study of the Duncan report.

"It gives me great pleasure to announce that at the request of our President the judges who have agreed to act in this contest are, the Right Honourable W. L. Mackenzie King, Dr. Adam Short, a member of the Consultive Economic Committee of the League of Nations, and Dr. Oscar D. Skelton, Under-Secretary of State for External Affairs. We wish to express our special appreciation of their co-operation in this project. The widespread publicity which will be given to the best papers should encourage thoughtful discussion of these important subjects throughout the country."

In connection with the above announcement, it is of interest to learn that students at a number of the leading universities in Canada are preparing papers which will be submitted through the Economics Department of their college to the Economist's Department of The Royal Bank by the 1st of March, 1928. As each of these topics is of importance to the welfare of the country, it is felt that there should be widespread interest in and discussion of the best papers.

In other countries it has been found that Fellowships of this type encourage research along economic lines, and the bank teller's offer was made with this in mind. The terms of the Fellowship permit the winning student to carry on a year of graduate research at any Canadian university.

For some time the bank has taken special interest in the work carried on by the economics departments of the universities and colleges of the country. This attitude, in part, grows out of a recognition of the increasing complexity of the economic and banking relationships of Canada. It is considered essential that there should be a group of young, well-informed men in the bank's organization preparing themselves for positions of responsibility. In the past, there has been a feeling that promotion in the banks is too slow to make this work attractive to aggressive men having a good educational background. The process of acquiring experience and learning banking methods undoubtedly requires a reasonable amount of time, but the bank is prepared to give full recognition to the special abilities of those who have sufficient stamina to survive the preliminary routine. Such men are likely to find that their promotion will be more rapid than that of those who enter the bank at an earlier age without special qualifications. It is understood that the bank is looking for the highest type of men and that such students will receive some recognition for the time spent in college in the salary offered to them while occupying junior positions.

MISSION CIRCLE HOLDS MEETING

Talk on Pioneer Work in Africa Given at Millbrook.

MILLBROOK, January 12. — The Golden Links Mission Circle held its first meeting since the New Year on Wednesday evening at the home of the president, Miss Jean L. Burnham, with a very good attendance, and a most interesting and instructive program.

The president was in the chair, and the study of pioneer missionary work in Africa was taken up, preceded by a map talk on this continent presenting many of the natural difficulties which our missionaries have to contend with in carrying out their great task.

Miss Elsie Spence gave a comprehensive outline of the life of David Livingstone, and following a piano solo by Miss Hetherington, the president took up the life of Mary Slessor of Calabar, and the wonderful work which she accomplished during the thirty-nine years spent in Africa.

The auditors and the secretary and treasurer, Miss Dorothy Crossley and Lila Whyte, recently met at the home of the superintendent, Mrs. V. C. Lambert, the retiring president, Mrs. J. McKnight, being also present, and completed the report for 1927, from March to December, the figures being:

Annual members, 22.
Life members, 6.
Fees	$ 5.50
Supply work (not including donations of clothing)	1.50
Thankoffering (autumn)	14.52
Collections	10.96
Other sources	53.42
Total	$85.91

Less expenses, the amount sent the branch treasurer was $78.00, the full amount of the allocation plus the ten cent tax per head for Presbyterial expenses.

The Scripture lesson was Psalm 139 read in unison, and the devotional period was concluded with prayer.

It is expected that Rev. Joseph Wilks will continue the study of Africa at the February meeting, giving some account of the four years which he spent in active missionary work on the west coast. The meeting will be on Tuesday, February 14, at the home of Mrs. E. S. Burnham.

The service of light refreshments and a social hour brought Wednesday's gathering to a pleasant close.

OFFICERS ELECTED AT ANNUAL MEETING OF RED CROSS SOCIETY

President Speaks of Necessity of Going Forward With Peace Time Program.

REPORTS READ.

Aims at Advancement of Health, Education and Encouragement of Junior Society.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Red Cross Society was held yesterday afternoon in the Board Room of the Public Library, the president, Mrs. R. Harstone, in the chair. The reports of the recording secretary, Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner, of the treasurer, Miss E. Morrow and of the corresponding secretary, Miss L. Davidson, were given, and letters were read from those to whom the society had forwarded Christmas cheer. Officers were re-elected, as follows

President Mrs. R. Harstone; 1st vice-president, Mrs. W. H. Hill; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. J. A. Aylmer, corresponding secretary, Miss Laura Davidson; recording secretary, Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner; treasurer, Miss E. Morrow. Executive Mrs. G. Boucher, Mrs. W. R. Breyfogle, Mrs. R. Denne, Mrs. W. H. Bradburn, Mrs. G. N. Gordon, Mrs. F. C. S. Huycke, Mrs. B. Law, Mrs. G. A. Macdonald, Mrs. R. H. Turner, Miss M. Rush and Miss E. Munro.

Mrs. Harstone spoke of the necessity of the society going forward with the peace-time programme of the Red Cross Society, which has for its aims the advancement of health education, the helping of returned men and the encouragement of the Junior Red Cross Society, an organization of school children who are instructed in health matters and who are doing a great deal to further the peace of coming generations by keeping up an international correspondence with children of other lands. Mrs. Harstone, who thought that more publicity should be given to the efforts of the society, also quoted the words of Miss (Dr.) A. E. Marty, noted educationist of Toronto, who said

"The Red Cross links all the countries of the world commonwealth in a great enterprise. The remedial task of the war has been turned into a constructive force directed towards the upbuilding of the human race in time of peace. This work has touched the imagination of men and women throughout the world and by means of the Junior Red Cross has made a tremendous appeal to the youth of all lands. It is educational in the truest sense."

It was decided to donate $50 to the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Canadian Legion and $50 to the Well Babies' Clinic.

Delegates to the annual meeting of the Canadian Red Cross Society, to be held in Toronto on January 31st, were appointed, in the president, Mrs. R. Harstone, Mrs. J. A. Aylmer, Mrs. R. Denne, Mrs. R. H. Turner, Miss E. Morrow and Miss L. Davidson.

Letters Received.

The following letters were read by Miss Davidson, received from soldier settlers whose families were remembered by the local society, with Christmas cheer

Miss T. J. Davidson,
520 Dickson St.,
Peterborough.

We received the shipment of supplies sent from your branch, which we received in good condition, and in good time for Christmas for which we all thank you all.

Trusting everyone enjoyed a good Christmas. With best wishes.

Dear Madam

Just a few lines to let you know that we received the box of goods from the Peterborough Red Cross Society safely. We don't know how to express our thanks for them. It was such a surprise to get a gift like that just before Christmas and such splendid things, too, and things that we were in need of. It makes us think that the world is not such a bad place after all, when people think of others the way you have done. Everything was fine except the boots for the wife and myself. I am taking the liberty of sending them back again and hope the stores will change them for us. We will gladly pay the charges on them. The wife and myself both take a very wide shoe. If you could adjust this for us we would be very thankful. I will close now, hoping you will accept our heartiest thanks for your kindness and wishing you a Very Happy Christmas and a Prosperous New Year.

Following are annual reports submitted by the treasurer, Miss E. Morrow and the recording secretary, Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner, also a review of activities of the Ontario Division of the Red Cross Society, made by the director, F. W. Routley

I hereby certify that I have examined the books and records of the Peterborough Branch of the Red Cross Society, furnished me by the Treasurer, and find them to be correctly kept and in accordance with the above statement.

F. J. A. HALL,
Auditor.

Peterborough, Ontario,
January 10th, 1928.

Annual Report of Peterborough Branch of Ontario Red Cross Society for 927.

Madam President and members of the Peterborough Branch of the Ontario Red Cross Society—I beg to submit the following report of our activities during the year 1927.

The members of our local society have always been especially interested in the Peace time Health Policy of the Red Cross and accordingly the successful opening up of the Apsley Outpost Hospital has been a source of real gratification.

Several members of the Executive were pr ileged to be present at the formal opening of the building and saw with pleasure the excellent arrangements that had been made for caring for patients and for housing the nurses.

Naturally, to help in buying the equipment and in furnishing comforts for this Hospital has been perhaps the most important part of our work during the year that is past. Linoleum was purchased and put down in the sitting-room, at a cost of $117.00 while Apsley's indebtedness to Headquarters for the equipment provided for the Hospital to the amount of $386.00 was assumed and paid off by our Branch. Through the generosity of the Misses Dickson, members of this local Branch, the Hospital was furnished with a complete bathroom outfit—while from the Society's funds, weather stripping has been put on all the doors and windows of the building, and blankets and webs of towelling have been sent.

Interest in the welfare of the returned men and their dependents has not abated. To the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Canadian Legion, a donation of $50.00, in addition to materials, was given to aid in the excellent work being done by that Society for the families of ex-soldiers. This Christmas, as for several years past, large well-packed boxes containing not only groceries and Christmas cheer, but complete outfits of clothing for each member, were sent to two large families of returned men living on the land in the remote districts of Ontario. On these Christmas boxes more than two hundred dollars was spent.

At the request of the Secretary for the Overseas' Settlement of British women, visits have been paid to newcomers from Overseas who have settled in our city. Early in the year too, a returned man suffering from trench feet, was outfitted with suitable boots.

It was the privilege of our local Branch to participate actively in the local Diamond Jubilee Celebration. Two very beautiful floats, symbolic of Red Cross ideals, the one for the Junior Red Cross arranged by some of the Public School teachers, who are responsible for much of the success of Junior Red Cross work in our local schools, and the other for the Senior Red Cross, planned and carried out by the members of the local Executive, appeared in the Peterborough Dominion Day Procession. Enthusiastic praise of the appropriateness and beauty of these floats was heard on all sides and the extent of the interest created thereby in the peacetime work of the Red Cross is difficult to estimate.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

MARY I. KENNER,
Recording Secretary.

Comments on Activities of Ontario Division, Canadian Red Cross Society.

Over $1,000,000 has been spent during the past seven years in excess of funds in possession of the Provincial Division at the end of the war. This money has come from various sources in connection with our work. The various communities served by Outposts contributing to date a total of over $300,000.

The total expenditures of Red Cross money in Ontario from 1920 to 1926, may be divided as follows:

Soldiers' Work	$ 462,136.31
Public Health	278,205.07
Emergencies	261,610.32
Outpost Service	345,820.39
Total	$1,416,605.00

The above item does not include approximately $1,000,000 raised and expended in relief at the time of the Haileybury fire, or a similar amount spent on supplies distributed.

During 1926, the expenditure for Red Cross work in Ontario totalled $285.86 l.47, and in 1927 will amount to over $300,000.00.

There are 40,000 children enrolled in Junior Red Cross, Over 1,000 crippled children have been treated by monies raised by Juniors themselves since 1921.

There are 19 outposts in operation, showing a total of 20,397 hospital days during 1926, 2,984 home visits made, 4,805 children examined in schools. Two more outposts will be opened shortly.

Funds raised during 1927 campaign, approximately—$205,000.00

Needed for 1928—$300,000.00.

The Red Cross is doing its mos valuable work in New Ontario.

The need of development of the Outpost Service is great. The activities of the Red Cross do not overlap with other organizations and receive the continuous counsel and financial assistance of the Ontario Government.

F. W. ROUTLEY.
Director, Ontario Division.

PARENTS AWAIT WORD OF KILLER

Police Following Clues Left By Man Who Killed Girl.

SEDAN SEEN IN DITCH.

FLINT, Mich., Jan. 13 (Canadian Press)—Mr. and Mrs. Levie Schneider, grief-stricken parents of five-year-old Dorothy Schneider, kidnapped, brutally slain, and her body dissected yesterday, spent a sleepless night at their home on the outskirts of Mount Norris, anxiously awaiting word from the searchers who kept up an all-night hunt for the fiend slayer.

One clue being followed was a report to the police by a Battle Creek, Mich., truck driver that he saw a sedan, answering the description of the car in which it is thought the child's slayer escaped, in a ditch near Williamston last night.

ST. JAMES' W.M.S. RAISED ITS QUOTA

Ladies Had Good Year Financially—Group System Retained.

The regular monthly meeting of St. James' W.M.S. Auxiliary was held in the ladies' parlors, Wesley Hall, on Tuesday afternoon, with an attendance of twenty-four members.

Business took up the major part of the hour, when reports from the various secretaries were given, showing that the Auxiliary had reached its allocation financially, as well as having advanced all along the line in every department.

The Bible reading given by Mrs. M. Copson was appropriate to the entering of the new year, as also was the devotional story told by Mrs. T. Church.

Mrs. Elliott delighted the members with her sweetly sung solo, "Abiding," all joining in the chorus.

The group system was again accepted for this year, and the leaders appointed as follows: Mrs. T. E. Curvin, Mrs. Wesley Rose, Mrs. F. Armstrong, and Mrs. F. B. Elliott. They are already planning their meetings.

Mrs. H. A. Bonney will have charge of the study book for the February meeting, to be held on the second Tuesday.

UNION SESSIONS OPEN ON MONDAY

President Coolidge Will Attend Pan-American Meetings in Cuba.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13 (Canadian Press).—The centre of interest in United States politics shifts today to Havana. There, on Monday, President Coolidge and a score of the most prominent men in the United States will convey to the other republics of this continent assurances of the friendship and fraternity of the United States. The occasion is the sixth meeting of the Pan American Union, founded more than a quarter of a century ago to foster trade between the republics of this continent and to increase friendly intercourse.

SPANISH BUNGALOW TYPE

(Parkinson & Halley, Architects.)

Those whose favor leans toward the color and romance of the Spanish styles but also, and possibly more strongly, toward modern convenience, may find here a charming little bungalow boasting both of these very desirable characteristics. The exterior abounds in effective but not unduly expensive details which convey the charm of the style to perfection. Among these may be mentioned the interesting chimney cap, the semi-circular headed entrance door with its electric lantern on each side, and the grill in the front gable.

None will dispute that the square plan house is the most economical to heat, and therefore correspondingly desirable in Canada, but this Spanish style does not lend itself to a simple square exterior effect. This situation has been met by simply designing in a very skilful manner an exterior giving the effect of the favored L-shaped house, to a plan which closely approaches the square. The individual treatment of the corner entrance sun porch and the resulting separate front and side roof gables are the chief factors in this scheme.

The plan is a simple convenient one, containing a minimum of hall space. Inclusion of the pleasant little sun porch has obviated the necessity for a vestibule by having it occupy the position itself.

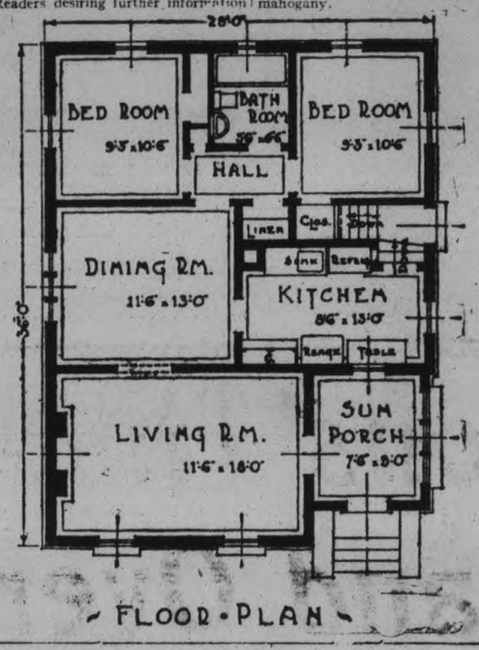
Passing to the living room we find a fine bright room lighted by the two well proportioned windows shown in the perspective. It contains an electric mantel, and an arched doorway giving access to the attractive dining room.

Five articles may be regarded as comprising the equipment of a modern kitchen. They are cabinet, table, sink, range, and refrigerator, and when arranged as efficiently as in this cheerful kitchen present absolutely the utmost in convenient accommodation. Above the two steps from the side grade entrance door up to the kitchen, an icing door is provided to the refrigerator, thus avoiding the necessity of having the iceman enter the kitchen.

From the dining room the typical bungalow inner hall may also be entered. This, as usual, gives admittance to the two bedrooms, the bathroom, and, in this particular case, to an exceptionally large linen closet besides the expected smaller one.

Exclusive of lot the cost of this home would be approximately $6,000.

Readers desiring further information regarding a house of this design should communicate with MacLean Builders' Guide, 345 Adelaide St. West, Toronto, Ont., who will see that it is supplied. When writing please mention design number 106. Copyright, 1928.



What are the open grain woods that need a paste filler in finishing?

MANY PUPILS OPEN ACCOUNTS

Penny Bank System Makes Successful Start in Public Schools.

PERCENTAGE IS HIGH.

The school savings work got away to a good start in the Peterborough Public Schools this week. Fifteen hundred and sixty-six pupils opened Penny Bank accounts last Tuesday morning, according to a report issued today by J. R. Littleproud, provincial inspector of the Penny Bank. This means that about 69 per cent of the pupils at school on Tuesday opened accounts. This is considered a splendid beginning. Two classes, one at Central and one at Queen Mary, each had 96.5 per cent. of the attendance as depositors.

Each child who made a deposit will be issued a pass book. The child brings the pass book on Tuesday morning, together with his deposit, to his class room teacher. The teacher takes the deposit, records it in the pass book, and forwards it to the Royal Bank of Canada, where the records are kept.

The purpose of the scheme is to foster habits of thrift. Thrift is like writing; it can only be learned by practice. When the practice is regular, a habit is formed. A habit formed in youth remains for life. It is thus hoped that the boys and girls of Peterborough will acquire the thrift habit and thus become better citizens.

There are now 344 schools in Ontario operating the Penny Bank system. The accumulated savings amount to nearly one million dollars. To provide absolute security for the children's savings, the Penny Bank Act requires these funds to be deposited with the Receiver-General of the Dominion of Canada, at Ottawa.

The report for Peterborough, this week, follows:

School	Depositors.	Attendance.	Total Deposited.
Central	293	421	$122.20
King Edward	270	386	96.42
King George	232	306	67.27
Prince of Wales	305	453	116.03
Queen Alexandra	217	339	82.73
Queen Mary	249	369	113.94

Inspector Littleproud speaks very highly of the co-operation given by the local school authorities in putting the work into operation. He is also enthusiastic over the arrangements made at the Royal Bank of Canada, where a special department has been opened to handle the school savings work.

CHOIR OFFICERS ARE ELECTED

W. H. Cunningham is Again President of George Street Choristers.

PRESENTATIONS MADE.

After practice last evening, the choir of George Street United Church held its annual meeting. The president, W. H. Cunningham, occupied the chair, and made a few remarks, thanking the choir for their co-operation. Reports of social activities and the financial report were given by Miss Elma Coon, secretary-treasurer, and adopted. Mr. Cunningham moved a vote of thanks to Miss Coon for her valuable services, and Arnold Lillow moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Cunningham. Each responded briefly. Rev. J. E. Todd then took the chair for the election of officers, and in his usual happy manner congratulated the choir on their excellent music and their great contribution to the church services. The following officers were elected.

Hon. president, Rev. J. E. Todd; president, W. H. Cunningham; vice-president, Miss E. McKay; secy.-treasurer. Miss Elma Coon; chairman of Membership, A. V. Lillow; chairman of Social, Miss Greta McCall; chairman of Flower, Miss Pearl Carruthers; gowns, ladies, Miss B. Elcome, men, S. Ivey.

After the election of officers, Mr. and Mrs. Vaughn Walker and Miss Hazel Tretheway were asked to come forward, and Miss Elma Coon read the following address:

"Dear Friends,—We, the members of George Street choir, have learned with deep regret that you are soon to take your departure from us, and would like to take this opportunity of expressing to you in some measure the very high esteem in which you are held.

"The great interest you have shown in everything has tended to the success of the choir as well as the church at large. We shall greatly miss you from our choir, but wish you every success and happiness in your new relationships.

"Signed on behalf of the choir,

"W. H. Cunningham, President.

"Elma Coon, Secretary."

Mr. and Mrs. Walker were then presented with a beautiful club bag by Miss McKay, and Miss Tretheway with a pair of snowshoes by Miss McCall. They replied, thanking the choir for their words of appreciation and gifts, expressing sorrow at severing their connection with the choir. All joined in singing "For they are jolly good fellows," after which dainty refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed by all. Before their departure, Mr. Douglas Carlisle moved a vote of thanks to Miss McCall and her Social Committee.

FOUR CARD FLUSH BEATS FOUR ACES

Stupendous Bluff was Really Expert Poker, Player Explains.

The most stupendous bluff ever played in a poker game was brought to notice here recently.

The game was for exceptionally high stakes, and all passed around to the player at the right of the dealer, who opened the pot. All dropped out but the third player on the dealer's left, who drew one card. The opener drew two cards. The opener made a huge bet which his opponent covered, then pushing in his entire stack of chips representing many thousands of dollars. The opener dropped out and showed his openers—three aces—and another which he picked up to fill in his hand after discarding two. Although not compelled to do so, the winner displayed his hand. He held the 5, 6, 7, and 8 of Clubs and the Jack of Hearts, and to the amazement of the other players who were tremendously excited by the hand, he pointed out why his play had been scientifically correct.

This story is fully told in "The Canary Murder Case," which starts in The Examiner on Monday.

FLIERS STAY UP DESPITE LEAKS

Oil and Gasoline Leaking and Food Bad, Chamberlin Reports.

ON ENDURANCE FLIGHT.

ROOSEVELT FIELD, Jan. 13 (Canadian Press).—Gasoline and oil leaks, trouble with flying instruments, and sickeness from bad food were reported in a note dropped to the ground to-day by Clarence Chamberlin, trans-Atlantic flier, who yesterday began an endurance flight with Roger Williams.

Chamberlin, however, said nothing about abandoning the flight, but asked about weather reports, indicating that he planned to keep flying. Referring to their plight as "our tale of woe," Chamberlin wrote that he and Williams had "a lot of fun last night when he had our first gas leak in the cockpit.' He had discovered "a big leak in the left wing tank at three a.m., he said. Whether the leak was repaired was not stated.

The coffee they had carried along with them in Thermos bottles "was the most terrible I ever tasted," Chamberlin wrote, and it had made both fliers sick. Most of their sandwiches had gotten soaked with ethyl gasoline, which is poisonous. They had plenty of water left.

Despite oil and gasoline leaks, which, as far as an observer on the ground could state, were continuing, Chamberlin indicated his determination to continue the flight for a world endurance record.

"See you in 30 or 35 hours," he write, "unless delayed by detours or we get too hungry."

PERILOUS VOYAGE DOWN RIVER ENDS

Runaway Barge With Two Men Brought Ashore By Workman.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo., Jan. 13—A perilous seventy-mile all night ride down the ice-clogged Mississippi River on a runaway barge ended here shortly before dawn today for John Lanbs and Cecil Hawk, St. Louis, who were carried away on the barge near Chester, Illinois. Manning a flimsy motor boat, which he piloted among the ice floes with difficulty, F. G. Bryant, employe of a bridge construction company, carried a line to the runaway barge and after a two hour battle with ice succeeded in bringing it to the safety of a cove near here.

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

Faith lapsed again into unconsciousness in the ambulance that took her to the hospital. The last thing she remembered was the feeling of Cherry's hot tears dripping steadily upon her hand. Poor Cherry! She must never know that the sister she had unwillingly wronged had overheard that terrible, all-revealing conversation—

Gradually sick-room-muted voices penetrated the fog in which her mind was wandering.

"Don't worry, Miss Lane. She may know you all when she wakes up. Temporary amnesia is not uncommon in cases of nervous collapse—"

"But she was so well just day before yesterday!" she heard Cherry protest.

Faith drifted again, was aroused by the almost noiseless opening of a door, and by a new voice. "Mr. Hathaway on the phone, Miss Lane."

With her eyes still closed, but consciousness becoming more acute, Faith was aware of Cherry's rushing from the room.

"I'll refill this ice bag, Mr. Pruitt. You'll stay with her?" Faith heard Miss Sutton's crisp voice.

The door closed softly upon the starchy rustle. Then a squeak of shoes as George tiptoed to the bed.

"Faith? It's George. Can you speak to me?"

By an immense effort of will Faith forced her eyelids to open. She nodded, and though the gesture was of the slightest, she felt as if she had extended a terrific amount of energy.

"Don't try to talk, honey," George's voice came soothingly. "I understand—everything. You don't want Bob or Cherry to know that you ran away intentionally. I'll tell Bob that you must have been delirious with fever yesterday when I drove you to Darrow, but that I didn't realize it."

Tears welled hotly in Faith's wide-staring eyes. She nodded again, whispered faintly. "Thank you, George."

"It will give you time to think things out. I don't know what's wrong between you and Bob, but whatever it is, it can't be as bad as you think now."

"Worse!" she protested in her almost inaudible whisper. "Does the doctor think I'm going to die, George?"

"Of course not!" George denied.

"I want to die," she interrupted him, then closed her eyes and was drifting off into oblivion when Cherry's voice brought her back sharply.

"Bob's coming right over! The poor darling was almost crazy when I told him she didn't recognize us, George. Oh, was she talking to you?"

"Delirium," George answered. "I couldn't make out what she was saying. She still doesn't know me from Adam. We'd better clear out and leave her alone with the nurse. I doubt whether she ought to see Bob yet."

"You couldn't keep him out of here with machine guns!" Cherry cried, bursting into fresh tears.

Lyrics of Life - By Douglas Malloch

TALK OF GETTING OLD

We talk of getting older, friend;
I wonder, though, if that's the word?
Who thinks about the Summer's end
Will miss the song of many a bird.
I, too, the Autumn days behold,
But I am getting more than old.

For I am getting richer, yet
Not richer in the wealth I own,
But richer in the love I've met
And richer in the friends I've known.
Youth only strangers seems to see,
But every neighbor nods to me.

And I am getting wiser, too,
Not wise in wisdom taught in books,
But wiser in the false, the true,
For now I know how virtue looks.
Though rags the youngster greets with mirth,
Beneath the rags I see the worth.

And I am getting stronger, strong
In faith, where youth inclines to doubt
Can bear my sorrow, suffer wrong,
And find them less to grieve about.
Youth stumbles upward toward the dawn,
Age has a staff to lean upon.

We talk of getting older, friend.
Youth may have much, but age has these:
Faith that grows firmer toward the end,
Experience, and memories.
And, as the eternal years unfold,
Why need we talk of getting old?

Hints on Etiquette

1. If a girl has been entertained at a college house-party, should she write a "bread and butter" note?

2. Is it best to write a thank-you note, to phone or to wait until you see a friend to thank him for a gift?

3. Is it proper to write "thank you" notes on the typewriter?

The Answers.

1. Yes.

2. The main consideration is to show your appreciation immediately. The method is immaterial, nowadays.

3. Many people do but the handwritten note is still the proper one.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

SATURDAY, JANUARY 4, 1928.

Friendly stars rule until late today, according to astrology, which finds certain benefic aspects strongly dominant.

The rule is fortunate for all who travel by air and presages increase of commercial uses for aviation.

Under this sway the mind should be uplifted and the senses buoyant, and for that reason it is favorable to recreation.

A turning to spiritual and intellectual interests is foretold by the seers who persist in announcing the coming to America of teachers and leaders of thought.

Education continues subject to the most helpful influences and universities will greatly benefit in 1928, it is prophesied.

Although late in the weeks this should be an auspicious day for new endeavors, especially those that belong to the sphere of the intellects.

Lawyers are well directed by the stars at this time which inclines to important litigation.

Courts are to be the scenes of extraordinary trials in which persons of high caste are defendants, astrologers predict.

If there are any homely girls in the world they may take heart from the prognostication that men will appreciate the virtues of women more than their charms in the coming decade.

Higher standards of life are to be demanded by men, it is foretold, although women will promote many reform movements.

Windstorms are to be more prevalent than in the past this winter, and will do great damage, the seers foretell.

Persons whose birthdate it is should be very circumspect in the coming year, which should be prosperous.

Children born on this day probably will find it difficult to take orders and will succeed best in independent fields of work.

Who Wrote This?

1—"Nothing now is left
But a majestic memory."

2—"If the world will be gulled, let it be gulled."

3—"Soft-heartedness, in times like these,
Show softness in the upper story."

4—"Let our object be our country, our whole country, and nothing but our country."

5—"I watched the little circles die;
They passed into the level flood."

6—"There is such a choice of difficulties that I own myself at a loss how to determine."

7—"The miller sees not all the water that goes by his mill."

8—"And care, whom not the gayest can outbrave, Pursues its feeble victim to the grave."

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

Callot combines plain white crepe with printed crepe in this way for frocks designed for late winter resort wear.

A very new frock that gives good promise of being widely copied within the next few months is the model shown in today's sketch. The sleeveless blouse of plain white silk is combined with a skirt of figured crepe—simple, smart and most effective. It is a good model to copy if you are making clothes for a sojourn at one of the Southern resorts—and just as good to copy if you are making some little frocks for indoor wear now which will be useful in your spring and summer wardrobe later on.

I have spoken before I think, of the fact that this season so many smart women wear only dark, neutral tones on the street—grays, browns, blacks and beiges—giving expression to their love of color only in the choice of evening or more formal afternoon clothes.

I was interested to learn the other day that Mme. Claudel, wife of M. Paul Claudel, the French ambassador at Washington, wears nothing but black, gray, brown—and occasionally dull green—for daytime. Yet for evening wear she has a lovely red velvet gown from Worth of Paris, another of violet chiffon with a glint of red beads on the shoulder straps and a velvet gown of Nile green. For informal dinner and formal afternoon Mme. Claudel has a gown of dark blue lace draped over flesh color.

Mme. Claudel also wears black evening frocks on occasions. She would not be a true French woman if she did not. One of these is of black velvet with side drapery held with a gleaming buckle and another of satin with a skirt flare and a long train at the back—and a deep back decolletage which is filled in with diamante in basket weave.

DIET, A POTENT FACTOR IN EVERY DISEASE.

This is the last of a series of four articles in which I have covered an alphabetically arranged list of common disorders in their relation to food. The closing paragraph of the last article concerned heart troubles.

Insomnia or Sleeplessness: The next time you cannot go to sleep, tap quickly on your abdomen with the ends of your fingers, as you would on a drum, and see if it does not sound just like one. "Counting sheep" will not help a great deal if you are so bloated that you can use your abdomen for a drum.

Kidney stones are made out of practically the same material as gallstones.

Obesity! Are you too fat? If so, you are using too much food in proportion to your physical exercise. Many who have followed my reducing menus have reduced their weight from ten to forty pounds simply by decreasing their food quantity and increasing their daily exercise.

Rectal troubles are always caused by constipation and the irritation from poisonous bowel elimination.

Rheumatism is developed mainly from hyperacidity of the stomach from inharmonious food mixtures, and can be avoided and cured by a sensible diet.

Tonsilitis (chronic) is curable in a hundred per cent of all cases by dietetic measures alone! This is a strong statement, but can be demonstrated quite easily, as all cases respond quickly to fasting and diet.

Tuberculosis is a disease which requires the most careful dietetic regime. Stuffing with such foods as milk and eggs has probably killed more sufferers from this malady than would have died on an ordinary diet. No more food should be given than the body can appropriate to its uses, and only those foods of the finest cell-building quality should be used. Any amount above above this regulated quantity only enervates the body all the more, an creates more catarrhal mucus which must be eliminated.

I promised to run through an alphabetical list of the common disorders, and the list would not be complete if I did not mention:

Zymosis, which really means the same thing as our old enemy, autotoxemia, and I guess you know by this time what relation food has to this condition.

I undertook a big task to try to show you what an important factor food plays in the cause and cure of all diseases! I have not mentioned other contributing causes which should be understood, but have emphasized only the dietetic causes which I hope will give you material for new thought on this subject. If I have succeeded in inspiring you to study dietetics more seriously, I will be well satisfied, as I truly believe that the essential foundation of all reform lies in the kitchen and dining room!

Questions and Answers.

Question.—A Seeker of Health writes: "My girl, 16, has a very rapid heart, and I have been told that her tonsils were decayed and sending poisons through her body causing her heart to beat faster than it should. Do you advise removing the tonsils? You have spoken of another method of getting rid of them. Would you kindly explain this through the columns of The Examiner as soon as possible. I have received a great deal of good from your department, and I think it is very wonderful to have a department like this to read every day."

Answer.—It is doubtless true that heart trouble often develops from diseased tonsils, but the tonsils can be cured without removing them. A short fast followed by the proper diet will create a condition in both the blood and lymphatic system so the tonsils can cure themselves of any pusy condition which may have developed. Send for detailed information, asking for the article called "Save the Tonsils."

Question—Mrs. R. S. C. writes: "Please advise in your column if a tablespoonful or two of olive oil can be used on lettuce and tomatoes, etc., when meats or nuts or cheese are used at the same meal."

Answer: It is perfectly safe to use olive oil with any other kind of food as it is a wholesome hydrocarbon, and unless used in excess does not interfere with the digestion of other foods.

Question—Martin B. writes: 'I am suffering from a very severe pain in my face. My lips become very swollen and my gums are like paralyzed."

Answer: Go to your dentist and see if he cannot find the cause of your trouble in abscessed teeth or pyrorrhea. If your dentist does not think the trouble is with your teeth he can send you to a physician who can properly diagnose your case.

If You Need A Tonic Get The Best!

Guelph, Ont.—"There is nothing better as a building tonic than Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Several times when I was rundown, suffered from weak stomach, thin and impoverished blood, I took it and always obtained good results. SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

JESUS' POWER OVER SIN

JESUS' POWER OVER SIN

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Jan. 15. Jesus' Power Over Sin. Mark 2: 3-12, 15-17.

BY WM. E. GILROY, D.D.
Editor of The Congregationalist.

Text: Mark 2:3-12, 15-17

And they come unto him, bringing one sick of the palsy, which was borne of four.

And when they could not come nigh unto him for the press, they uncovered the roof where he was: and when they had broken it up, they let down the bed wherein the sick of the palsy lay.

When Jesus saw their faith, he said unto the sick of the palsy, Son, thy sins be forgiven thee.

But there were certain of the scribes sitting there, and reasoning in their hearts,

Why doth this man thus speak blasphemies? who can forgive this but God only?

And immediately, when Jesus perceived in his spirit that they so reasoned within themselves, he said unto them, Why reason ye these things in your hearts?

Whether is it easier to say to the sick of the palsy, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Arise, and take up thy bed, and walk?

But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins (he saith to the sick of the palsy),

I say unto thee, Arise, and take up thy bed, and go thy way into thine house.

And immediately he arose, took up the bed, and went forth before them all; insomuch that they were all amazed and glorified God, saying, We never saw it on this fashion.

And it came to pass that, as Jesus sat at meat in his house, many publicans and sinners sat also together with Jesus and his disciples: for there were many, and they followed him.

And when the scribes and Pharisees saw him eat with publicans and sinners, they said unto his disciples, How is it that he eateth and drinketh with publicans and sinners?

When Jesus heard it, he saith unto them, They that are whole have no need of the physician, but they that are sick: I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance.

* * *

As we have already suggested, whatever healing of the body Jesus brought to men in his earthly mission was symbolic of that deeper and greater healing that he had brought for the souls of men.

Here in our lesson these two healings are beautifully blended in the story of the healing of the man sick of the palsy and the questions that arise in connection with the power of Jesus as manifested.

There is this vivid picture of the faith and the determination of those faith and the determination of those

There is this vivid picture of the who brought this sick man to Jesus. He was borne by four, and when they could not get him to Jesus because the pressure of the crowd was so great, they let him down through a hole in the roof.

We can feebly sense the dramatic nature of the incident in the few plain bold words in which it is recorded. It must have produced a real sensation, but upon the Master it produced a strong impression of their faith.

He did not, however, say to the sick of the palsy first of all words of healing. He said rather, "Son, thy sins are forgiven."

Stirring Suspicion.

The theology-mongers and the heresy-hunters were stirred up at once. Why is it that all the devilish suspiciousness of men, the intolerable bigotry, and the narrow and hostile attitude of criticism and fault-finding take to themselves the sacred field of religion? It is the unexplained tragedy of spiritual life.

Is not the Almighty able to vindicate himself against those who speak untruth or blasphemy even in his name? How prone we are to feel that the Ark of God cannot stand without our stretching out our hands to steady it, and that the prerogatives of God himself are in danger unless we are forever championing his cause!

Is it not almost inevitable that this attitude becomes very quickly not one of our upholding God but an effort to make God uphold our ideas and faults, small though they may be?

But Jesus perceived the thought of his critics. "Which is easier to say to the sick of the palsy," he asked, "'Thy sins be forgiven,' or to say, 'Arise, take up thy bed and walk'?"

So there came the outward manifestation of his power. The record says that they were all amazed when the man with the palsy arose and took up his bed and walked, and that they glorified God saying, "We never saw it on this fashion."

We wonder if that applies to the Pharisees who criticized Jesus or to the unsophisticated people who listened and witnessed. We know that other of the bigoted and narrow minds, even when the wonderful works of Jesus were so plain as to make their questions ridiculous, instead of being convinced, sought to explain these wonderful works by attributing the power of Jesus to his association with Beelzebub, the prince of the devils. It is thus that bigotry can always justify itself even where the facts and evidences seem most clear.

Their Question.

Apparently some at least of these critics of Jesus were not convinced; for when they found Jesus eating with those whom they regarded as the unworthy, they criticized him afresh. "How is it," they asked, "that he eateth and drinketh with publicans and sinners?"

They had no conception of that large love in humanity that might make even the Savior of Men tender and sympathetic in his contacts, willing to meet with all, and especially ready to associate himself with the sick and needful and sinful just because, as he said, these were they whom he came to bless and to save.

"They that are whole have no need of a physician, but they that are sick. I came not to call the righteous, but sinners."

How difficult it is for us to appreciate the simplest and deepest lessons of the Son of Man. Even after centuries of meditation upon these things it is so often the spirit of the scribes rather than the spirit of the Master that prevails in our thought of our fellow men and in our attitude toward life.

LADIES DISCUSS INDIAN MISSIONS

Gilmour Mission Circle Hears Papers on Various Reserves.

The regular meeting of the Ladies' Mission Circle of the Gilmour Memorial Church was held on Tuesday in the basement of the church. The president, Mrs. J. Gordon Mann, presided.

Mrs. John Archer gave a paper on Ohsweken Indians; she also read a letter from the pastor, the Rev. John S. Rough. "This Ohsweken church is better known to some as the Tuscarera Baptist Church. The Indians on the Reserve are known as Six Nations Indians. There are eleven schools on the Reserve, under the Ontario School System; the teachers are all qualified Indians.

"There are two other Baptist churches on the Reserve. One is at Johnsfield, where one of the deacons from the Ohsweken church has carried on a regular service and Sunday school for the past six years. The other is at Medina and has as its pastor an Indian, a graduate of the Toronto Bible College."

Mrs. Alex. McGregor gave a paper on Brantford Indians. She stated there were 4,500 Indians on the Reserve, 900 of whom are still pagans. Many of them refused to attend the church as they regard the white people as having robbed them of their land. The white plague takes off a good many of them every year, owing to the unsanitary conditions in which they live. Doctors are gradually combatting this dread disease. The churches are slowly but surely winning them over.

Extracts from the "Link and Visitor," dealing with Baptist work among Indians in other parts were read by Mrs. Blewett, Mrs. Hammond, and Mrs. Proudlove.

Mrs. Metcalfe sang a solo and the Rev. W. S. Edgar closed with prayer.

The world war cost 50,000,000 lives and $350,000,000,000.

Uncle Wiggily

To-day's Bedtime Story

By HOWARD R. GARIS

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

UNCLE WIGGILY'S BUMPITY BUMP

"What did you say your name was?" asked Uncle Wiggily who was hurrying into his hollow stump bungalow, after having poured water on the Weasel. The rabbit gentleman had heard some one speak to him as he was about to open the door.

"I am Frozen Turnip" was the answer. "Please take me in to get warm!"

"Oh, you are Frozen Turnip; are you?" asked the rabbit. "Well, I don't see any little boy or girl who might be called that. I think you are only the wind talking."

"No, really, I am Frozen Turnip!" went on the voice. "I know that, very often, boys and girls who like to sit by the warm fire are called 'frozen turnips' in fun. But I really am one. Look on your doormat!"

"What do you want, Turnip?" kindly asked the rabbit.

Looking there Uncle Wiggily saw a large purple and white Turnip snuggled down in a corner on the mat. The Turnip had a sort of face on one side and its roots were in two parts, as if they had once been legs. While on top was what was left of the leaves, making a sort of cap.

"What do you want, Turnip?" kindly asked the rabbit.

"I want to come in your bungalow and get warm," was the reply. "I am, just what I said I was, Frozen Turnip. The farmer left me out in the field after he dug me up, with many other brother and sister Turnips. He forgot me, Jack Frost found me and now I am so cold and frozen I don't know what to do. I heard you say you would take the cold icicle in and warm him, so I ran here to wait for you. Please take me in!".

"I shall be glad to let you come in my bungalow and get warm, Frozen Turnip," said Uncle Wiggily, as he opened the door. "But do you know what happened to the icicle?"

"No, but I should say he was sitting by the fire getting warm."

"He tried to do that," said the rabbit, "but he melted into a puddle of water."

"Oh, that couldn't happen to me," spoke Frozen Turnip. "An icicle you know, is nothing but water made into ice by Jack Frost. And there is some water in me—that's why I freeze so easily. But I am not like an icicle. I will not melt if you let me sit by your warm fire."

"Very well, then, come in," invited the rabbit gentleman, and soon Frozen Turnip was in the bungalow, sitting in the chimney corner where the icicle had stood. Around Frozen Turnip gathered the forty 'leven bunny children—or forty twelve, if you count Baby Bunty and I suppose she should be counted.

"What are you going to do with Frozen Turnip?" asked Jingle.

"Is he going to live with us always?" asked Jangle.

"I wish I could live here always," sighed Frozen Turnip. "It is very jolly here and so cozy and warm. If you let me stay, Unkie Wig, as Baby Bunty calls you, I will try to do you a favor."

"Pooh! As if a Frozen Turnip could ever do a favor!" laughed Bunty.

"Just you wait and see," said the cold vegetable.

That night, when Mr. and Mrs. Longears, Nurse Jane and the little bunnies went to bed, they were going to leave the Turnip down by the fireplace.

"Oh, but I'll be lonesome here alone," said the vegetable. "Let me come upstairs and sleep in the hall."

So they let him do that. And in the middle of the night the Wolf got into the bungalow and was creeping up stairs to get Uncle Wiggily when the Turnip, who was still too cold to sleep, saw the Bad Chap.

"Ha! Bite Uncle Wiggily; would you!" whispered the Turnip. "I'll scare you!" So the Turnip rolled down the stairs, making a great racket and frightening the Wolf so that he howled:

"Who is it, the Police Dog?"

"No, I am Bumpity Bump!" answered the Turnip, bouncing and bumping on the last step. And then he bounced against the Wolf's nose and hurt the Bad Chap so much that away he ran.

"So you see, Baby Bunty," said Uncle Wiggily when he learned what had happened, "Frozen Turnip did us a favor after all."

"So he did! I'm so glad!" sleepily murmured Baby Bunty. Then the Turnip went to sleep, for falling bumpity bump down stairs had warmed him, and the Wolf was left out in the cold, which served him right.

Rails Take Lead In Wall Street

NEW YORK, Jan. 13 (Canadian Press).—The rails superseded the industrials as leaders of the upward price movements in to-day's stock market. Operators for the rise succeeded in marking up a number of industrial specialties three to six points in the early trading, but they made little headway among the standard issues, whereupon speculative attention was diverted to the rails, which moved forward in impressive fashion. Trading, which had been rather dull during the morning, picked up measurably in the early afternoon.

Banks called about $5,000,000 in loans, but there was a plentiful supply of call funds available at the renewal figure of 4 per cent. The further increase in brokers' loans reported by New York Federal Reserve Bank apparently was disregarded as a market influence. The weekly mercantile reviews characterized business as fair, stressing the improvement shown in some the country's major industries.

Canadian Pacific was leader in the railroad group, quickly moving up five points. "Nickel Plate" Common recorded a similar gain and Chesapeake and Ohio, Pere Marquette, Pittsburgh and West Virginia, New York Central, Delaware and Hudson, 'Frisco Common and Lehigh Valley moved up two to four points. Others advanced a point or two.

Toronto Market Active With Leaders Gaining

TORONTO, Jan. 13 (Canadian Press).—Massey Harris and International Nickel set an upward mark in hectic trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange this morning, both climbing substantially. Massey gained 2⅝ at 44½, and Nickel was up 2½ at 94½. Brompton, in heavy trading, sold up four at 58, and Western Canada Flour and Winnipeg also came into the limelight, each gaining about two points. Page Hersey Preferred jumped four at 194 while the Common, in heavy dealings, was firming fractionally at 97. Canadian Oil on a big turnover effected a fractional advance at 61½. Building Products and Canners also firmed. The oils sold up in heavy trading, Imperial gaining three at 63, Petroleum two at 42, and British American ⅝ at 39¾.

Strength At Liverpool Send Wheat Higher

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 13 (Canadian Press).—Helped by upturns in Liverpool quotations and by evidence of good export business from North America, the Chicago wheat market scored an early advance today. The advance was in the face of an increased estimate of the Agentine exportable wheat surplus. Opening at ¼ to ⅜ cent gain, Chicago wheat continued to mount. Corn, oats, and provisions also developed strength, corn starting ⅛ to ½ cent higher and then reacting a little but afterward rising higher than before.

Opening prices were: Wheat, March 129⅛, May 130. Corn, March 89⅝, May 92⅜. Oats, March 54½, May 55½.

Changes Very Small On Standard Exchange

TORONTO, Jan. 13. Canadian Press. — General trend was uncertain in the heavier trading on the standard mining exchange this morning, with a large number of issues showing little or no change from yesterday. Bidgood and Howey gold were firm features of the dull list, Bidgood gaining 4 at 102 and Howey 3 at 171. Kirkland Lake firmed 2 at 247 and Area and Barry Hollinger were a point better. Beaver Argonaut and Amulet softened one to two points while Jackson, Manion and Crown Reserve eased fractionally. Tough Oakes, very active, suffered a point loss at 67½.

1928 To Be Mineral Year In Canada, Prophets Say

Everyone is saying that 1928 is going to be a mineral year in Canada. This may be suggested by the fact that everyone is talking mining. Bank presidents who a few years ago had not a word to say for this growing industry, are devoting a good portion of their annual addresses to the rapid rise in the industry and the excellent future which it seems to have. President E. W. Beatty of the C.P.R. has just pointed out that statistics compiled by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics showed that during eight or nine months of the past year, mining and its allied industries led in the production of railway freight. Mr. Beity's comment was that this "opens up a vista of possibilities fascinating in scope."

With the leaders showing the way and with the market for mining shares boiling, it is not surprising that the mining fever is spreading out from the mining centres and not only dominating the every day discussion in the large cities, but in the towns and villages as well.

The writer met a farmer a few days ago in a broker's office. He was buying mining stocks. He had done pretty well on his farm in 1927. He said that he thought he would have a little diversification and proposed to put some of his farm profits into mine shares.

This is just another sign of the times. It will mean much to the country if it is not carried too far.

One fact that should perhaps be emphasized for those who are as interested in seeing their money aid in the development of the country's resources as they are in making a nice profitable turn in some stock, is that buying of stocks on the mining market for speculative turns, does not always aid the mining industry. It is possible to buy stocks where the purchase will aid the industry and at the same time give the speculator good chance to profit, but there are not many of these issues listed on the exchange. Only a few of the mining companies are securing their finances through the open market. The great bulk of the sales on the mining exchange do not net any return to any company. This is of small moment to the majority of speculators, but new hands at the mining market, if they sustain a loss, show a tendency to blame it on the mining industry.

Five provinces of the Dominion are facing big development programs in mining for 1928: Nova Scota, Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba, and British Columbia.

The Maritime provinces is looking to its gypsum and gold mining industries for big things. The gypsum output is moving up rapidly and faces an excellent year. Gold mining in Nova Scotia has just about set the stage for an excellent comeback and under modern mining methods it is believed that a flourishing industry will be set up.

Rouyn is the centre of attraction in Quebec. It now has its first producer in Noranda and it is believed that there will be several more properties producing by the end of the year. A good deal of interest will centre around the properties that may be proven during the year. This will provide the opportunity for much speculation.

The gold area of Quebec and the asbestos area may also look for bigger things.

Kirkland Lake, Red Lake and Sudbury are three Ontario camps that are going to battle for the high spot in the sun during the year and in the final analysis the honors will likely be evenly divided.

Red Lake is in for a large expansion. There are a number of the original properties in this camp that will come along well this year, and Howey should about reach the production stage. Woman Lake and Narrow Lake will be prominent.

Kirkland Like by the middle of the year, will have close to a dozen more operations going than it had at the close of 1927. There are a number of important concerns about to get under way.

Sudbury looms big. Several new companies are entering the camp and this is bound to command attention.

Manitoba has two areas that stand out: Central Manitoba, where there are a number of good-looking gold properties coming along and Northern Manitoba, the home of Flin Flon, Sherritt-Gordon, Callinan Flin Flon and others.

British Columbia is looking for better results in the base metal markets this year and is certain, whether prices improve or not, to set up a new mark for quantity production.

There is a great deal of activity throughout the province with Portland Canal, the boundary and Kootenay country, and the lower coast section standing out.

OWNER OF DOG IS RESPONSIBLE

Will Be Sentenced For Death of Terrier Killed By Police Dog.

BREED CONDEMNED.

ST. THOMAS, Ont., Jan. 13.—James Holloway, who "sicced" his police dog on a little fox terrier, was yesterday convicted of wilfully killing the terrier. Sentence was reserved till Friday, Magistrate Maxwell suggesting that Holloway endeavor to settle with R. McCully for the death of his animal, valued at $50.

The magistrate ruled that in releasing the police dog, and telling him to "go to it," Holloway was an accessory to the killing. His Worship also condemned police dogs generally as dangerous, stating that "anyone who owns a dog like that in St. Thomas is placing many people in danger."

TALK ON IDEALS GIVEN KIWANIS

Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe Gives Inspirational Address at Luncheon.

BUSINESS MAKES MEN.

"Business Ideals" was the subject, and Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe, of Murray Street Baptist Church, was the speaker who presented the manner of their application to the life of the business man, in a truly impressive manner at the weekly luncheon of the Peterborough Kiwanis Club in the Empress Hotel to-day. Removed as it was from the usual plane of after-dinner addresses, the reverend gentleman's twenty-minute talk to the members seemed a direct appeal to the same qualities that had given them appreciation of what "Kiwanis" should mean, and as a result, it was listened to with rapt attention.

President Joe John presided, and announced Roy Taylor as the booster for the day. He afterward announced that John Turner, Ernie Smith, Charlie Lacheur, and Harry Huffman had been successful in winning the booster's prizes. Along with Joe Wearing and several others, he was foremost in the collection of a "benefit fund" for Art. Reynolds' operation.

Guests Present.

There were several guests at the luncheon to-day, included among which were Mrs. T. H. Glover and Mrs. R. H. Parsons, of the Women's Ashburnham Patriotic League, who, through the courtesy of J. J. Turner, asked the support and co-operation of the Kiwanians for their play, "Leave It To Gloria," which will be presented in the Grand Opera House, January 27 and 28.

The two splendid vocal numbers contributed by Mrs. G. F. Liddle, contralto soloist of George Street United Church, constituted the musical part of the program. Mr. Liddle was accompanist, while Martin B. Chenhall was assisted by Vern. Morphet in leading community singing.

Speaker Introduced.

To Walter Kidd fell the pleasure of introducing Rev. Mr. Sutcliffe to the club. He referred to his ability and admirable qualities so manifest during his ministry at Murray Street Church, and expressed confidence that his message would exceed expectation. Mr. Kidd's prediction was soon justified.

Prefacing his address with a couple of humorous stories, Mr. Sutcliffe said in part:

"Looking at the advertisements of practically every industry the reader of to-day is informed that "service" is the main plank of its platform from which it seeks selection among its competitors, all of which calls to mind the epigram—"If any man would be first among you, let him be your servant."

The business world is taking cognizance of the importance of service and is making that the keyword in its advertising.

But "service" is becoming an advertising word, played upon for business reasons, because it has a magnetic force to attract the public. Though not always conscious of the fact, the business man has been distorting and perverting the word, generally. He has been taking hold of a word that meant something and using it for private benefits.

The ideal service which is yet to come must be given, not outside but inside, and through business, and if business is to be beneficial to society it must be brought up to the level of the professional man as he should be. Prophets, not profits are needed to tell the world what is necessary if business is to reach that level and these prophets are to be sought among the service clubs of the country. Profits are the basic part of business, but men should not employ unmoral and unsocial methods.

The true conception of business should be the making of men—it must be moralized, civilized, and elevated, else it will destroy society. Values must be reversed. At the same time, it should be remembered that it is not money that is the root of all evil, but love of money. A man should determine to serve society through his business and have that thought first and foremost in his mind. That is an ideal that cannot be put into effect in a day, a year or even a single lifetime—no ideal that is worth while, can be. But by its practice business will be edified, dignified and cultured, and will be a factor in the world's progress.

The vote of thanks was ably moved by Dr. Ray Scott who, as a professional man, felt that the address well applied to the professions as well as to business. He also expressed the club's appreciation of Mrs. Liddle's solos, wishing her success as a teacher in the city.

TOO MANY CLUES IN MURDER CASE

Five Men Under Suspicion For Slaying of Margaret Odelle.

The investigators of the death of Margaret Odell confess themselves baffled in the hunt for her slayer.

The authorities usually wander through a dearth of clues, but in this most astounding case there are so many clues that at least five men are under suspicion. At the same time every line of investigation only tends to prove that Margaret Odell cannot possibly have been murdered, and yet her body was found huddled on the great silken davenport in her dining-room, giving the lie to so grotesque a conclusion.

Philo Vance has been called in to give his expert services, and the story of how he goes about solving the mystery is told in the "Canary Murder Case," starting in The Examiner on Monday.

Sharkey-Heeney Clash Tonight in Elimination Bout

ARE PRINCIPALS IN NEW SERIES

Sharkey-Heeney Clash Tonight to Decide Opponent for Tunney.

BOSTONIAN FAVORITE

(By Henry R. Farrell.)

One of the two leading big boys of Tex Rickard's herd of heavyweights will be put on the block in the Garden to-night when Jack Sharkey, one of the eliminated of last year's eliminations, and Tom Heeney, a new member of the challenger pack, meet in the first of a new series to find another opponent for Gene Tunney.

Although there have been whispers that the elimination tournament will be for entertainment and profit only and that Jack Dempsey will be Rickard's choice for a third bout with the champion, Rickard insists to-day that the winner of the contest would be within a few steps of the ring for 1928's big shot.

Sharkey, because of his experience and the record he has made against bigger men, probably will be a favorite in the betting although Heeney, a big, strong, courageous fellow, will have some backing.

Sharkey has a reputation for being weak in the stomach, but Heeney is not a natural body puncher, and he is much slower than some of the big men that Sharkey has beaten, and he can't hit as hard as Dempsey.

It was said after Sharkey had been dropped to the floor by Dempsey last year that he lacked courage, but it is not a fair indictment. Sharkey had to have courage when he fought Harry Wills when every other heavyweight was dodging the big negro. He also fought and whipped George Godfrey, who is being bally-hooed now as the greatest heavyweight in the class.

And he did everything that was asked of him to prove that he had a right to be considered as a challenger.

If Sharkey is in the same condition he was before he fought Dempsey, there would be no hesitancy in picking him to win, but Sharkey was hurt badly in the Dempsey fight and Dempsey usually leaves a permanent disability in the victims he can reach. He was able to reach Tunney only once.

Sharkey, however, has had a long rest, and there are reasons to believe that the injured hand which caused him to ask for a postponement of the fight last year was inspired by the box office.

In considering Sharkey's chances, it can be remembered that he, like Dempsey, always has done his most effective fighting against bigger and heavier men and he is unusually fast and effective against a fast big man, as he showed in his fight against Jim Maloney.

Heeney has done well in his few appearances in this country. He was made the victim of a raw decision fighting Paulino, but his form against a clown fighter like the Spaniard cannot be taken as heavy evidence.

Heeney is a rugged, big fellow with plenty of courage and fighting equipment above the ordinary run of the challengers.

Although the Dempsey fight may have hurt Sharkey physically, it should have been a moral lesson to him. When he was training for Dempsey he scorned even the suggestions of William Muldoon, and, in the ring, he ridiculed the suggestions of his manager and seconds.

Confidence is a valuable asset, but the inordinate vanity of Sharkey before and in the fight with Dempsey cost him perhaps half a million dollars and a chance at the title. Perhaps he will listen to good advice this time.

SHARKEY DECLARED FIT

JACK SHARKEY

NEW YORK, January 13 (Canadian Press). — Banishing suspicion in high fistic circles that all was not well with Jack Sharkey's much-discussed left "maulie" and that the drubbing administered by Jack Dempsey last summer had left a tenderness about the stomach, physicians of the New York State Athletic Commission yesterday placed their stamp of approval on the Boston battler's physical condition.

To-night in Madison Square Garden, Tom Heeney, powerful heavyweight invader from New Zealand, will conduct an examination at his own 12-round melee that may produce the first 1928 opponent for Gene Tunney.

After the examination, by the Commission doctors, Sharkey, who scaled 193 pounds on Wednesday, took a long walk as final preparation for the match. Heeney rested after winding up gym work on Wednesday, weighing 198 pounds.

Athletic Commission's Doctors Pass Him For Bout With Heeney.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—(Canadian Press).—Jack Sharkey is in excellent condition for his twelve round battle with Tom Heeney of New Zealand and shows no further trace of injury to his left hand, two physicians of the State Athletic Commission announced today after a special examination of the Boston heavyweight.

EXPERTS STILL IN DEEP MUDDLE

Are Unable to Find Satisfactory Explanation for Hornsby Trade.

BOSTON, Jan. 13. — (Canadian Press.) — The Boston Braves, from President to groundkeeper, last night stood pat on previous announcements and let the rest of the world carry on any desired speculation over the acquisition of Rogers Hornsby from the New York Giants.

President Fuchs had nothing more to say to bewildered newspaper experts who continued to demand bigger and better explanations for the deal which brought Hornsby to Boston to captain the Braves in exchange for Catcher Francis Hogan and Outfielder Jimmy Welsh.

The rest of the office force backed him up and only odd facts were brought to light. The Braves do not own the Giants, the Giants do not own the Braves. They said: Hornsby has told President Fuchs that he will be glad to play in Boston; there is no truth in the statement that he will oust Jack Slattery as manager and the Braves anticipate no trouble with the stellar second-sacker in regard to his contract.

Closed Incident.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Jan. 13.—(Canadian Press.)—The Hornsby trade is a closed incident so far as Charles A. Stoneham, president of the New York Giants, is concerned. Stoneham's view that he had explained fully the most surprising player deal in recent years was revealed yesterday by Jim Tierney, the Giants' secretary.

"There will be no more statements from Mr. Stoneham," he said. "The club feels that it has presented the real reason for the trade. If some people are not satisfied with the explanation and want to do some investigating that's their privilege.

The "experts" still were taking advantage of that privilege. The majority of them, however, had settled upon the theory that the Giants' field captain and the spark of their offensive, had been sent to Boston because of some personal differences with President Stoneham.

VON ELM WILL NOT TURN PROFESSIONAL

Would Sooner Defeat Bobby Jones for Amateur Title.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Jan. 13.—George Von Elm, former national amateur golf champion "would rather defeat Bobby Jones for the title than receive a million dollars as a professional."

That was Von Elm's answer yesterday to a report that he would accept an offer to enter the professional ranks under the wing of Jack Kearns, former manager of Jack Dempsey.

The golfer admitted that Kearns had made such an offer but declared it had been made "kiddingly" and had not been considered as a serious business proposition.

If Von Elm took the offer as a joke, the manager of leather pushers apparently took seriously his proposal to enter into the management of golf professionals.

Kearns declared he believed there was plenty of money to be made out of golf if it were given "the proper habbyhoo."

A report that Von Elm had accepted Kearns' offer to embark on a professional tour was followed by Von Elm's denial. Last night a close business associate of Kearns said the agreement had been entered into by golfer and manager but that Von Elm desired to withhold the announcement temporarily. Von Elm denied that this was the case and despatched a telegram to the president of the United States Golf Association declaring he had not intention of becoming a professional.

SKI CHAMPIONSHIPS WILL BE AT OTTAWA

Canadian Competitions to be Held Some Time in February.

The Canadian Ski Championships have been awarded to Ottawa this year and will likely be held in the Capital on February 18th or 25th. There will be unusual interests in the contest this year owing to the controversy that has developed as a result of the selections made by the Olympic committee.

Skiing is now recognized as one of the major sports of Canada and with the possible exception of tennis there are more people in Eastern Canada taking part in skiing than in any other sport. It is estimated that 20,000 people ski in Ottawa alone, and th Ottawa Ski Club with 2,500 members is the largest of its kind in the world. It actually owns some $20,000 worth of property, lodges and equipment.

In preparation for the ski championship events the tower at Rockcliffe has been heightened and a new landing made. Some new records are expected as a result.

On the Saturday of the meet the jumping will take place at Rockcliffe and on Sunday the running events will be held from one of the lodges in Gatineau Hills. All contestants and guests will be transported there by busses or special trains. These lodges can accomodate 500 to 1000 people.

Declines To Comment On Franchise Rumor

NEW YORK, January 13 (Canadian Press). — John Conway Toole, president of the International League, declined to comment yesterday on reports, emanating from Syracuse, that several shifts in league franchise were about to be effected.

The Syracuse Herald had published a story saying the Syracuse franchise would be sold to Jersey City within the next two weeks, and that the St. Louis Cardinals would purchase the Rochester franchise. Then the Syracuse franchise and the Rochester players would go to make up the Jersey City club, the newspaper said.

Asked for a specific denial or confirmation, Toole contented himself with saying he "wouldn't deny anything after the Hornsby trade."

Expert On Angling Figures Out Cost Of 3-Pound Bass To Tourist Fisherman

MONTREAL, January 13. — The cost of a three-pound bass to the tourist fisherman coming to the Province of Ontario has been worked out by expert calculation at the sum of $83.30, according to Morris Ackerman, author of Ackerman's Sportsman's Guide and president of the Outdoor Writers' Association of America, who was interviewed in the tourist department of the Canadian Pacific Railway here. This astonishing figure was used by Mr. Ackerman in support of his plea for conservation and replacement of fish, both in that province and Quebec, if the vast sums expended by tourists yearly were to be maintained and increased.

Mr. Ackerman spends three months of every year in Ontario and Quebec, and is acknowledged to be one of the leading fishing and hunting authorities on the continent. He has leased 75 square miles of hunting and fishing territory in the Gatineau Valley from the Quebec Government for some years and has welcomed as guests there such well known people as Rex Beach, the novelist, Tris Speaker and Ty Cobb, baseball stars, and prominent business executives from the United States.

"The greatest magnet in the way of sport that Canada possesses is fishing," said Mr. Ackerman.

Continuing, he urged that great northern pike, grey trout, and dore should be put on the game fishing list and protected during the spawning season in the same way as is done for speckled trout, maskinonge, and bass. Commercial fishing with nets of the first three species should be prohibited by law, and the present number allowed of four maskinonge a day should be greatly reduced. Finally, both in Quebec and Ontario, there should be installed active working fish hatcheries.

TORONTO WINS FROM DETROIT

Cougars Drop From Leadership of Section—Tie Game at New York.

PITTSBURGH WINS.

DETROIT, Jan. 13.—Detroit was pushed out of first place in the National Professional Hockey League last night when the Toronto Maple Leafs, tied for third place in the Canadian section, outskated the Detroit Cougars for a 2 to 1 victory in the Olympic Arena here. The defeat automatically pushes Detroit into a tie for second place in the American section of the National League.

Danny Cox, Toronto forward, scored the first goal for the Maple Leafs early in the first period. The Toronto score was followed by a tally by Frank Foyston, former Detroit Olympic star, who made his first appearance with the Cougars. The score remained a tie until the last minutes of the third period, when "Bill" Carson, fast Toronto forward, skated through the Cougar defence and put a bullet shot past Holmes at the net.

Although the Detroit team seemed able to penetrate the Toronto defence, they failed to co-ordinate on passes, and repeatedly lost the puck with a goal in sight. The Maple Leafs were speedy, and their drives into Cougar territory were hard to stop. The game was speedy throughout and was marked by ten penalties, with one major being counted against Day.

Rangers, 2; Boston, 2.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—The New York Rangers and Boston battled to a 2-all tie last night in an N.H.L. contest. Goals by Eddie Shore and Harry Oliver in the closing minutes of the regular play forced the game into overtime, which ended without breaking the deadlock.

Murdock and Boucher were responsible for the Rangers' score.

Pittsburgh, 2; Chicago, 0.

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 13.—The Pittsburgh hockey sextet defeated Chicago 2 to 0 in a National Hockey League game here last night.

Bert McCaffrey, Pirate defence ace, led the victors' attack, assisting Darragh to tally the first goal in the first period and making a wild dash through the entire Chicago defence to score the second counter in the second period.

LEAFS NEED NEW FIELDERS

O'Hara Will Have Plenty of Promising Recruits at Augusta Camp.

MAY TRADE JACOBSON

TORONTO, Jan. 13. — Manager Bill O'Hara, of the Leafs, does not think that there is any cause for worry regarding the prospects of the Toronto club for next season. "We'll have as good a team if not better than any other in the league," he said to-day, "and if we don't win the championship we will be right in the neighborhood." O'Hara plans leaving for Detroit to talk over matters with owner Navin of the Tigers in a few days and he has every hope of returning with the release of a good right hand hitting outfielder in his pocket. He is also sanguine that he will get the pitcher that he wants from the boss of the Bengals.

That he has secured a prize package in Cote the shortstop, who was with Toledo last year, the local pilot is convinced. The player who was landed from New York in the deal which took Faulkner to the Giants, led the American association in fielding last season and in the little world series with Buffalo had a big edge every way over Cohen of Buffalo, who is being boosted for Hornsby's position with the Giants. Cap Neal of the Louisville club recently offered $10,000 in cold cash for the infielder, which is twice the amount that he was valued at in the trade with New York.

Good Prospects.

There will be no dearth of young and promising infielders at the Leaf's Augusta camp judging from the list of recruits under contract. Bedore, a Chicago semi-pro., who played with Buck Weaver's team, will get a trial, Peterson, another smooth youngster who starred with the famous Paterson Silk Hose team, will also be on hand. He is a shortstop.

Whitehouse, the six footer, who filled acceptably in a couple of games last summer before being shipped away to the sticks, will be back for another try out. It is likely that he will be sent to Bridgeport of the Eastern League for further seasoning.

At present Manager O'Hara is counting upon Alexander Burke, Cote and Billy Webb as regulars. Whether Burke is retained or not largely depends upon circumstances. If he attends strictly to business he will be given every consideration but otherwise he will be passed up in a hurry. Most of the time last summer he was not in first class condition and his play suffered as a consequence.

May Trade "Jake."

Another athlete who may have trouble making the club is "Jake" Jacobson. The veteran was inclined to be apathetic after he came here from Brooklyn and he will have to show a great deal more than he did last fall to make his retention a certainty. It is more than likely that he will be traded or sold. The Newark club is ready to make a deal for him and there is a possibility that Johnny Conlan will figure in the transaction. This fly chaser is a hustler and a fighter and the kind of a ball player that O'Hara likes. Conlan who was with Rochester for several seasons has always been close to the top both in the batting and fielding averages.

Also "Lena" Styles.

"Lena" Styles is another Toronto club veteran who is booked to make his departure provided a suitable offer is received. In that event Phillips who is coming here from Detroit via Nashville where he played last season and Rensa will be relied upon to do the bulk of the backstopping. Phillips led the Southern league in batting and is rated as one of the most promising catchers in the game. He is only a youngster, last season being his first in organized ball.

O'Hara confidently counts upon having a fast aggressive club and he doesn't see any reason why he should not have. The fact that Walter Johnson is with the Bears along with a few old timers is not causing him any anxiety and getting down to issues he is the one that should do the worrying not anyone else.

Curling

CURLERS HELD UP.

LAKEFIELD, Jan. 13.—To have almost reached the middle of January and only had two nights curling is the unhappy position of the Lakefield Curling Club, and a more melancholy set of men than the curlers is hard to find. The club is united in a fervent hope of another cold wave which will remain for at least a couple of weeks. The schedule games are getting far behind and while there is a fair chance that the Douro cup has already been won, there are many competitors for the Fitzgerald Cup.

ENTERS RACING GAME

The ex-champ, of the boxing ring enters the racing game with a horse named after himself. He is seen here with the other "Jack" and its trainer, Johnny Coburn, of Tiajuana, Mexico. The horse is prophesied to be another "Man o' War."

ANNUAL CONCERT HELD AT ST. LUKE'S

Cantata Composed By the Rev. G. Bousfield is Given.

The parish hall of St. Luke's Anglican Church in Ashburnham was packed to capacity last evening for the annual entertainment of the Senior Sunday school of the church, which included a miscallaneous program, the presentation of prizes for proficiency in Sunday school work and the production of a sacred cantata entiled "The Bethlehem Cantata," an original composition by the Rev. G. Bousfield of Ottawa, father of the rector of St. Luke's church.

This cantata formed the most interesting portion of the evening's entertainment, and was beautifully presented. The scene at the crib at Bethlehem was the basis of a very lovely arangement of the wonderful scene which took place at the cradle of Christianity and the eloquent words and musical setting harmonized in graceful fashion with the story of the Nativity of the Christ Child. The lighting, stage setting and costumes were all in keeping with the occasion, and the cast was chosen with especial care. The entire cantata was charming and infused with the spirit of true religion.

The cantata, presented in two scenes, with a realistic setting that included a manger, shepherds' fire and background of cedar trees, with a lovely electrically illuminated star provided by Mr Simpson opened with the arrival of the shepherds and progressed to the presentation of gifts by the Mago, with appropriate choruses and musical setting throughout, for which Miss Margaret Whittaker officated the sung by the Magi, on entrance, "We Three Kings of Orient are."

Joseph Grierson acted as a very efficient stage manager.

Those taking part were Eleanor Bothwell, as the Virgin Mary; Keith Wills as Saint Joseph, and Eulah Simpson as the Leading Angel. Those taking part in the Angel Chorus were Grace Hawkes, Gwendoline Brand, Muriel Krant, Helen Star, Jean McAuley, Edith Wills, Phyllis Davies, Roma Reid, Genevieve Playford, Jean Black, Kate Joyes, Dorothy Lipsett, Audrey Whittaker, Hilda Storey, Phyllis Star and Laura Charlton. Leading Shepherds were William Davies, George Bousfield, Reginald Perks, and Frank Pammett. The Shepherd Chorus was composed of Jack Gemmell, Arnold Worboy, John Langley, Stanley Clarke and Frank Earle. The Magi were William Hepburn, Gerald Perks and Andrew Charlton.

The entertainment of the evening opened with tea served at half six o'clock, with Miss E. Stewart in charge, and also included a program for which J. J. Turner acted as chairman, and the presentation of prizes to the first and second winners in each of the Sunday school classes. Bags of candies and nuts and Alaska pies were given to each child present.

Those receiving prizes were as follows:

Bible Class—(Boys), Henry Nokes, Keith Wills. (Girls), Eleanor Bothwell, Eulah Simpson.

NEW MINISTER IS WELCOMED

Rev. Frank C. Harper Meets Members of Cobourg Congregation.

RECEPTION HELD.

COBOURG, Jan. 13.—The congregation of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church gathered together last night to welcome their new minister, Rev. Frank C. Harper, B.A., B.D., and his wife.

Mr. Harper was inducted into this pastorate on January 5th, coming here from Preston, Ont. He went overseas during the war as an army chaplain and on his return spent some time in South America, engaged as a missionary under the auspices of the Imperial Oil Company, so he is a man of wide experience, and Cobourg people are very fortunate in securing his services.

The program for the evening consisted of speeches of welcome and music. Mrs. W. McKee-Bingham, formerly of Peterborough, with her delightful voice adding greatly to the entertainment.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

KEN MAYNARD IN 'GUN GOSPEL'

A good-looking and hard-riding hero is starred in "Gun Gospel," one of the Western films which always have a popular appeal and which forms the feature picture at the Capitol Theatre for this week-end. It has a great deal of spectacular riding in it, with the star doing a lot of trick stunts, like riding underneath a galloping wagon, changing his mount while in full flight, and riding six horses. There is a wonderful white horse in this picture, one of the super-intelligent beasts that are found often in the movies and seem to have an attraction all their own, by reason of the fact that they are not aware of acting, while doing it so well. The story is the usual one of stirring episodes filmed against a background of Western scenic graudeur and there is a pretty heroine for the hard-riding young man who promises his dad to refrain from hasty gun play and suffers a great deal thereafter, in trying to keep this promise.

An exceptionally funny comedy kept its audience in peals of laughter last night, and another very interesting portion of the program is the scenic film entitled "Niagara—the Glorious," depicting in detail the beauties of the mighty waterfall, in one of a series of special films being presented by the Famous Players' Canadian Corporation, and called, "Know Your Own Country." Besides its beauty, this type of film is distinctively educational and is aimed to arouse a spirit of pride in national scenic grandeurs. It includes close up and panoramic views of the Falls on the Canadian and American sides, the Gorge and the Whirlpool Rapids.

AT THE REGENT.

SILLS SCORES IN SEASON'S MOST COLORFUL DRAMA.

A background of unusual color combines with tense drama, thrills and romance to make "Framed," Milton Sills' latest First National vehicle, one of the most entertaining pictures of the season.

The picture, which is now showing at the Regent Theatre, begins with French army life, moves its sweeping romance across the Atlantic to the colorful city of Rio de Janeiro, the Brazilian diamond mines and the Amazon penal colony. Sills has a rugged and powerfully dramatic role as the court martialed French army officer who first renounces his country, and then women, as each in turn proves fickle.

Plunged into the picturesque and stirring atmosphere of diamond mining, with its dangers, and its intrigues, resulting from the lure of the precious gems, he finds love again. This time he fights his way through all the misfortunes Fate has in store, even to that of imprisonment in a noisesome and deadly tropical penal colony.

Sills was never better than in this, his most heroic and human role to date. Opposite him is Natalie Kingston, more beautiful than ever as a blonde—just for the occasion, Charles Gerrard, E. H. Radcliffe, Edward Peil and other excellent actors have colorful, well-played parts.

Charles Brabin directed the picture, which was adapted from George W. Sutton's magazine story.

AT THE GRAND.

"ALADDIN" HEE TO-MORROW.

A strong feature of the Old Country pantomime, "Aladdin", which will be seen here tomorrow at the Grand Opera House, is the excellent dancing, good singing and quickfire comedy dialogue and scenes. Up-to-date quips, topical songs, charming lyrics and an abundance of humor, mark the show from start to finish. The costumes are numerous and colorful, and there are as many changes as there are different scenic sets—eleven in all, with over sixty drops and many outstanding spectacular effects.

The entire company has been brought direct from London with scenery, effects, principals, specialties and costumes intact. Dave Lee, the leading comedian, who will of course play the role of the Widow Twankey, is one of the best-known pantomime comedians in the Old Country. Bertha Russell enjoys a high reputation as a principal "boy" and possesses a piquant and engaging personality. Lillian Barnes, who will play Pekoe, is a singer of note with a splendid contralto voice, and experience both in England and the Antipodes in revue, musical comedy and pantomime.

Florence Cameron as the Princess So-Shi, Harry Gilmore as the Widow Twankey's Cat, Molly Molteno, Fred Wolgast and Phyliss Retford, all well known, will complete as strong a cast of principals as any pantomime needs. The dances will be one of the best features of the show, for the Twelve English Rosebuds are a team of spirited steppers whose work is marked by absolute co-ordination and precision.

The Brothers Loren, two artists who have won for themselves an enviable reputation in England, and the Four Wards, a vocal quartette of distinction, complete the specialty features. There is a good chorus, and the scenic equipment will be found fully equal to the best metropolitan standards.

CHILDREN ENJOY ANNUAL CONCERTS

Downeyville and Otonabee Pupils Put on Good Programs.

A very pleasant evening was spent at the Downeyville Parish Hall, it being the occasion of the annual concert given by the four schools of the district.

Rev. Father Galvin acted as the chairman and shortly after eight o'clock, the hall was filled to the doors. A splendid program was rendered by the children, consisting of songs, choruses, dialogues, recitations and drills. One number in particular is worthy of note, being an Irish jig dance by Marguerite Winn, and a Highland Fling by the Duffy Sisters. The rounds of applause with which each number was received showed the appreciation by those present of the excellent program.

After the last number was rendered the curtain was raised, bringing into view a giant Christmas tree loaded with gifts and at the same time Santa Claus appeared amid the jingling of bells, and he spent a busy half hour distributing the various gifts. A great deal of credit is due the four teachers, Miss Perdue, Miss Duffy, Miss O'Connell and Miss Costello, for the very efficient training given the pupils as was manifest in the carrying out of the concert.

S. S. No. 14, Otonabee

A very pleasant time was spent at the annual concert of S. S. No. 14, Otonabee, by parents and friends of the pupils. W. G. Henderson occupied the chair. The school was prettily decorated with streamers of red and green, wreaths, and Christmas bells. The pupils were ably assisted by the young people of the section. The program consisted of the following items:

Chairman's Speech.
Speeches of Welcome—Thelma Henderson and Jimmie Stark.
Reading—Jean Stark.
Dialogue—Visitors from the City.
Recitations — Margaret Henderson and Derwyn Manley.
Chorus—"Jolly Old St. Nicholas."
Recitations—Gordon Stark and Ernie Fairbairn.
Dialogue—"Miss Dorothy Entertains the Minister."
Reading—Helen Stark.
Recitations—Pearl Manley, Jack Stark, and Norma Stark.
Chorus—"Jingle Bells."
Reciations—Hazel Manley, George Manley and David Henderson.
Chorus—"Silent Night!"
Dialogue—"Aunt Betsy's Beaux."
Recitation.—Gladys Stark.
Reading—Lillian Henderson.
Chorus—"It Came Upon the Midnight Clear."
Recitation—Cecil Manley.
Dialogue—"Jelly for the Minister."
Chorus—"Old Santa Claus."

The arrival of Santa Claus caused much excitement among the children who enjoyed greatly the distribution of gifts between pupils, and pupils and teacher. The singing of the National Anthem brought the happy evening to a close.

NATURE'S HERBAL BALM

Springville

SPRINGVILLE, Jan. 13.—Mrs. Charles Curtain and family, of New Liskeard, are visiting at the home of the former's mother, Mrs. Mary Murgey, Springville.

Mrs. J. Brown is visiting with friends in Peterborough.

Mr. and Mrs. Grandy were the guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. William Whitfield.

Miss Vera Whitfield, R.N., has returned to Detroit, where she is supervisor of the children's ward in Providence Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Finnie and daughter, of S. Monaghan, were the guests on Sunday of Mrs. Finnie's parents, Rev. A. H. and Mrs. McConnachie.

The debating evening of the Springville-Fairmount Literary society promises to be a very interesting meeting. The program will consist of the debate and other numbers as well as the usual games and sport. The debaters on the Affirmative as chosen, were unavoidably unable to act, and their places were filled by Miss Sybyl Robertson and Miss Helen Whittington. The Negative remains as at first, having as its supporters, Mr. C. Seymore and Mr. Bruce Herron. The subject has also been changed and now reads "Resolved that girls should have a career." Great interest is being shown in these weekly meetings the membership rising from 38 to over 50 during the past week. The attendance at the meetings up to date has always been much greater than the membership, showing promise of more members, and still better meetings. All, however, are invited to come and share in the education and sport, whether enrolled as members or not.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Robertson and Mr. Oren Robertson spent New Year's with friends in Cavan.

Mr. and Mrs. George Patton, Crawfords' Grove, were the guests on New Year's of friends in Peterborough.

Mrs. V. Kennedy and little son, Ralph, of Dunsford, were the guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. A. Hunter.

The Social evening of the Springville-Fairmount Literary Society was held in the basement of Springville church, Friday, Jan. 6th, with an attendance of over fifty. The meeting being social, no formal program was followed. As the different parties arrived they were made to feel at home by the chattering, laughing groups who were early arrivals. In fact one could not very well feel otherwise than at home where there was so much to be seen and so much to be done. Games were in progress on almost every available space of floor, so that a new-comer on entering the door would be tempted to start right there and work around the room from game to game until he had at least tried all in sight.

The game of Darts was directly to the left as one entered the door, a group of young men drawing him into their circle and persuading him to try his luck at throwing horse-shoe nails in such a way that they will hit the target point foremost and stay there in a standing position. Points were scored by the nearness of the nails to the centre of the target. At first it seemed impossible to throw the nails so that they would land properly and not fall uselessly to the floor, but practise makes perfect, and although one evening at this game is only a beginning; the fun is almost spoiled when perfection is reached.

Indoor Tennis or Ping Pong presented itself as very attractive. The balls persisted in bouncing on the floor or some near-by person's head instead of the table where they are supposed to stay. The net is near and care must be taken to hit the balls very easily or the fellow player could not return them.

Bagatelle was one of the favourite games, offering a chance to show skill and win a game within a short space of time.

Carpet Bowling looks interesting. The visitors continued to find pleasure in bowling until a Bean Contest was announced. Each person received five beans. The object of the contest was to win a bean as a forfeit from friends by asking questions that they could answer by yes, no or aye. If any of these words are used, the forfeit must be paid, but if a careful answer is given without the use of aye, yes, or no, nothing need be forfeited. The person securing the most beans in half an hour would be proclaimed the winner.

This game created a "barrel of fun" and friendliness for all who were present. Miss Mary Staples was the winner of the prize, having secured over 30 beans.

Other games such as school, draughts, dominoes, etc., added variety to the evening's pleasure.

Miss C. McConnachie, president of the society, announced the beginning of a contest for securing memberships. The captains were announced, and names of those on each of the two teams were read. The losers in this contest must provide a banquet for the winners.

At about 10.30 lunch was served, consisting of sandwiches, pie and tea, after which the gathering slowly dispersed.

U. S. NAVY PLANS FOR 20 YEARS

Would Spend Three Billion in New Warships in That Time.

NEEDS CRUISERS NOW.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12 (Canadian Press).—Curtis D. Wilbur, Secretary of the Navy, disclosed today before the House naval committee that the Navy Department has drafted a comprehensive twenty-year building program of which the $725,000,000 program already announced is only part.

The Secretary said, under questioning that the larger program provided for the replacement of battleships as soon as this is possible under the Washington Arms Treaty. The annual expenditures would be about 153 millions, or a total cost of approximately three thousand millions. "We need cruisers," he said in answer to a question whether the navy could be considered a first class fighting force. "That is an absolute need." He said to make it a first class navy it would be necessary to have the seventy-one ships proposed in the 725 million dollar program, pointing out that this was designed to cover the needs for several years.

FAMOUS LOVE ROMANCES — POCAHONTAS AND CAPTAIN JOHN SMITH (IV) — By Nicholas Afonsky

Pocahontas, prisoner of Captain Argall, was taken to Jamestown and kept in captivity for many months. But she enjoyed her captivity, for all the colonists were kind to her. She learned English and the white man's ways. John Rolfe, "an honest gentleman of good behavior," undertook to instruct her in the Christian religion.

Studying together under the trees along the river bank at Jamestown, instructor and pupil fell in love. John Rolfe wrote to the governor, asking his consent to the marriage. Pocahontas sent word to her father, and Powhatan sent his consent by three Indians, who were to represent him at the marriage.

Pocahontas, after her marriage with Rolfe was decided on, was christened Rebecca—and as a king's daughter was thereafter to be designated as the Lady Rebecca. And on a lovely day in April, 1614, she was married before the whole colony in the little James town church to her happy young English husband.

The next year a son was born to Rebecca and John Rolfe, and a little later they moved to a plantation at Bermuda Hundred, where Rolfe raised the first tobacco grown in Virginia. In her strange new home did Pocahontas sometimes think longingly of her old friend, John Smith, who, she had been told, was dead?

X. L. MISSION CIRCLE BEGINS YEAR'S WORK

Plans Discussed at Opening Meeting at St. James' Church.

Mrs. Edwin Rowe and Miss May Ritchie were hostesses at the January meeting of the X. L. Mission Circle of St. James' Church, held at the former's home on Chamberlain Street this week.

The president, Miss Marion Wagar, presided. New Year greetings were given and the routine business and devotional program followed.

Plans for the New Year were discussed and decided, the weekly envelope system being adopted for the raising of the society's funds.

The second chapter of the study book, "New Paths for old Purposes," in charge of Mrs. E. Kitney, was very interesting. A duet sung by Misses Annie and Nellie Payne was enjoyed by all. Twenty-four members were present, and several visitors, making the meeting a most successful beginning for the year.

Delicious refreshments were served by the joint hostesses and a very enjoyable social hour was spent.

MELLOR'S LAWYER MAKES PLEA TO-DAY

Trial of Former Picton Clergyman Resumed This Afternoon.

PICTON, Ont., Jan. 13 (Canadian Press).—The trial of the Rev. J. J. Mellor, former United Church pastor, charged with serious offenses against a girl under 16 years of age, was resumed at two p.m. today, with the special plea of Fred L. Ward, defence counsel, to be heard.

Mr. Ward, at the opening of the trial yesterday, called no defence witnesses but confined himself to strong cross examination of the girl, now 19 years of age, whose charges he will argue this afternoon have been unsubstantiated.

The story told by the girl in a three-hour tenure of the witness stand is the basis of the Crown's case. Harry Millman, janitor of the church where Mellor was pastor and the complainant a choir girl, testified he had seen familiarity between Mellor and the girl, such as holding of hands and walking arm in arm.

Ghost Story Puzzles East Northumberland

NAVAL DEBATE IS CONTINUED AT WASHINGTON

Members Demand To Know Why Specific Date For Construction Not Made.

WILBUR CALLED.

Estimated That the Original Costs May Be Exceeded By $15,000,000.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Jan. 14 (Canadian Press).—The question of whether the 71 new warships requested by the navy department were to constitute only a "paper fleet" or a squadron of real iron and steel fighting craft yesterday occupied the attention of the House naval committee.

The issue was raised by half a dozen members, who demanded to know why the department in submitting its program to Congress had failed to set a specific date for construction of the vessels.

During this discussion, Assistant Secretary Robinson, of the navy, said that the program, originally estimated at $725,000,000, probably would cost $740,000,000 at presetn construction costs.

He insisted, under close questioning by Representatives Britton of Illinois and Vinson of Georgia, respectively, the ranking Republican and Democratic committee members, that the navy actually wanted the new ships and that, if Congress approved the programme, a request for $55,000,000 would be made at once to start some of the vessels immediately. This amount would be in addition to the $362,000,000 already requested for maintenace of the navy during the next fiscal year.

Had Given Reasons

Robinson said that Secretary Wilbur in testimony Thursday had given the navy's reasons for not asking the completion of the ships by a certain date, and that he had nothing further to say. He replied, however, to further questioning that, although he could not say positively, he believed the secretary had omitted a specific completion date after conferring with President Coolidge.

Admiral Charles F. Hughes, chief of naval operations, told the committee he hoped to have the new ships as soon as possible, and did not know enough about the workings of Congress to say whether specific completion dates would be advisable.

After the committee meeting, adjourned, Vinson said that Secretary Wilbur would be recalled for further questioning, as he was determined to ascertain the exact reasons for the navy not putting a time limit on the construction. He declared that the secretary had described the building program as a five-year plan, but that there was nothing to assure its completion within that time.

Anglican Association Holds Meeting To Discuss Plans.

SECRETARY APPOINTED.

The Anglican Laymen's Association of Peterborough held a successful business meeting in the Chamber of Commerce Council Room at 5.15 on Friday, President Charles Lacheur being in the chair.

The main business was the mapping out a program for the coming year. This program will be presented at the luncheon meeting in Hooper's Palm Gardens on February 10th, it having been decided to hold association meetings on the second Friday of each month.

R. J. Bolton, principal of King Edward school, was appointed secretary treasurer during the meeting.

Trent River

TRENT RIVER, Jan. 14.—Mr. Isaac Lawzon and daughter, Rosie, and Mr. Rufus Redden motored from Oshawa Monday after spending three days in that city having been called there owing to the fatal illness of the former's son-in-law, the late Fred McGovern, who passed away at the hospital early Friday evening. The funeral was held Monday morning in Oshawa. Mrs. Lawson will remain in Oshawa with her daughter for an indefinite time.

The Quarterly Official Board meeting of the United Church for the new year was held on Tuesday afternoon at Havelock with a large gathering of officials of the entire circuit.

Quebec Assembly May Increase Gas Tax

QUEBEC, Que., Jan. 14.—(Canadian Press.)— Probabilities are that the Quebec Legislature in the course of the present session will increase the gasoline tax from three cents to four cents a gallon or even five cents a gallon. The government is seriously studying the matter.

Legislation is also expected whereby the indemnity of the members will be increased from $2,000 to $2,500 and the salaries of ministers with portfolio, from $6,000 to $8,000.

PICTURE ANNOYS WARDEN LAWES

In Future Only One Reporter Will Be Admitted To Death Chamber.

CONFIDENCE ABUSED.

NEW YORK, January 14 (Canadian Press). — Warden Lewis Lawes, of Sing Sing Prison, was on his way to Palm Beach to-day for a ten-day rest, his nerves shattered by the ordeal of the execution of Mrs. Ruth Snyder and Henry Judd Gray on Thursday night. His friends said he was exercised because some one in the execution chamber took a photograph of Mrs. Snyder as she was in the electric chair. The photograph was prominently displayed in a New York tabloid newspaper.

He was quoted as saying: "In the future there will be only one man from the press in the death chamber during electrocutions, and he'll be a man I know. I trusted the reporters that night, and one of them was unworthy of the trust. Naturally, I did not search the men for cameras." It was said the camera was strapped to the leg of one of the witnesses, and the bulb was pressed from a coat pocket.

STOCK PASSED FOR BIG SALE

Inspector Visits Farms of Shorthorn Breeders of County.

SALE NEXT MONTH.

On Thursday, C. F. McKenzie of the Dominion Livestock Branch, Woodstock, was in the county inspecting the stock which is being entered in the Peterborough County Shorthorn Breeders' Sale on February 28th. Mr. McKenzie expressed himself as being satisfied with the stock which is being offered. There are a few head of exceptionally good ones and the animals which he did not consider good enough either because of breeding type or finish, he did not pass for the sale.

The officers of the Shorthorn Breeders' Association, Walter Bowles, President, and Beecher Matchett, Secretary, accompanied Mr. McKenzie on his tour of inspection. They believe that they will have the best sale this year that has been held in Peterborough for some time. Catalogues are now in the process of preparation.

PREMIER WILL ADDRESS ROTARY

Weekly Luncheon of Local Club Will Be Held Tuesday.

Next week's luncheon of the Peterborough Rotary Club will be held at noon on Tuesday instead of on Monday as usual. The speaker for the Tuesday luncheon is to be Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Premier of Ontario.

The Weather

With little change, the abnormal weather still continues. Highest temperature yesterday, 40 degrees; lowest 25 degrees. The low point last night was also 25 degrees. The mild conditions this winter apparently include the whole eastern half of the continent. The western half has been colder than usual. The Canadian Weather Bureau now receives twice a day by short wave radio reports from four stations in Greenland and several stations on Hudson Straits, and more irregularly from several stations still farther north. All these places report mild conditions this year compared with the average winter.—W. P.

NEW MACHINES ARE INSTALLED IN AUBURN MILL

More Efficient Equipment Has Been Placed in Local Plant.

WORKS MORE QUICKLY.

Factory Will Be Able To Turn Out New Material, Manager States.

Another local industry whose management looks optimistically to the future is the Auburn Mills, a branch of the Canadian Woollens Company. Though in operation for many years, the industry here felt the effect of foreign competition and to the recently appointed manager, J. J. Southern, it was obvious that this plant must be modernized. Accordingly, he has begun the work of changing certain parts of the system, replacing old machinery with new and has prepared to enter several new fields of manufacture.

A visit to the Auburn Mills to-day afforded The Examiner representative a most interesting and enlightening half hour in company with Mr. Southern. Devoting most of the time to an inspection of the plant where new machinery has been, or is in the course of, installation, there were to be seen, on one hand a number of idle weavers—the old type which required a man for each individual machine—and on the other hand an equal number of new weavers, four of which were in charge of one employee. Their operation and description of their products is a story in itself.

Passing to another part of the plant inspection of a new drier was made. Operated by a large electric motor, this machine was doing the work just twelve times as quickly as its predecessor. It was more compact and did the work more satisfactorily. There were other machines, for dying, spinning and finishing which, to the uninated, provided a source of wonderment — to their operators, merely a more efficient and speedier means of doing the work. Their installation represents an expenditure well over the one hundred thousand dollar mark.

Though rather reluctant to give out information pertaining to the new products, Mr. Southern stated that new woollen goods would be manufactured and that, as in the past, material would be sold to manufacturers of automobiles. Contracts from Ford, General Motors, Chrysler, Dodge and Studebaker companies have been filled in the past, but the new machines will make possible the production of a new cotton velour material which is in great demand, a demand which the local firm could not even assist in meeting up to this time.

Asked if these changes would make it possible for the company to meet foreign competition, Mr. Southern expressed the belief that with slight changes in the tariff, his firm would be able to make a bid for its share of the market. Representations for these changes are being made to the Federal government by the Canadian Woollen and Knit Goods Association with which the Auburn Mills is associated.

TRIBUTE PAID TO LATE JUDGE

Judge Huycke and Lawyers Express Regret at Death of Judge McGlade.

FAMILY LEAVING.

COBOURG, Jan. 14. — In the police court room yesterday under Judge E. C. S. Huycke, a final tribute was paid to the memory of the late Judge McGlade, whose death occurred here on December 27th.

Judge Huycke, in his eloquent and sympathetic manner, voiced the great loss the bench had sustained in the death of his friend and colleague, Judge McGlade, a man whose genial personality, courtesy and temperate judgment would be greatly missed by all with whom he had come in contact. He extended to his bereaved wife and family the heartfelt sympathy of himself and his associates.

All the Cobourg lawyers were present and in speeches suitable to the occasion expressed their respect and love for Judge McGlade their deep regret at his untimely death when in the prime of life and usefulness, and the sympathy of the legal profession, and all the citizens of the town with his wife and family.

Mrs. McGlade and her two sons, James and Hugh, who are returning to their former home in Brockville will be much missed in the community.

Newlyweds Mistake City Hall For Hotel

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 14 (Canadian Press.—A newly married couple came honey-mooning in Montreal yesterday but were very indignant when they could not secure a room at the Hotel de Ville (City Hall).

"Room, please," demanded the groom, when asked by City Hall Guide, Sergeant Lepine, what was wanted.

"What!" Sergeant Lepine declared, at a loss.

"This is a hotel, isn't it," the couple wanted to know.

The sergeant then explained that although the City Hall was really "L'Hotel de Ville (French for City Hall) he could not accommodate them, all the rooms being occupied. "We have no rooms to let, they are all taken," the guide told the visitors.

Mr. and Mrs. were finally induced to leave the building, and apply to a hotel for accommodation, but departed looking just a little suspicions that their informant did not want to put them up.

NEW PONTIAC IS OUT TO-DAY

More Car at the Same Price, Says Company, Listing Changes.

MORE POWER.

The second "birthday anniversary" of the Pontiac Six is being marked to-day by the first public display in dealers' showrooms of the New Series Pontiac Six which is said to surpass in beauty, power and performance all previous Pontiac models.

The new Pontiac Six chassis with four-wheel brakes, Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers, gasoline pump, an entirely new type of radiator which prevents evaporation, semi-coincidental lock, improved caburetion, crankcase ventilation, new cylinder head, higher compression, new clutch and steering gear, heavier frame and other mechanical advances, appears to justify the statement of the manufacturer that it is "new from radiator to tail light." Briefly stated, the company is offering infinitely "more car" at the same base price.

Although the new series has the same number of cars that comprised the 1927 line, two of the new models carry new types of bodies representing the latest advances in Fisher design. The two new body types are the Sport Landau Sedan and Four-Door Sedan, which supersede the former Landau and De Luxe Landau Sedans. The Two-Door Sedan, the Coupe, the Sport Cabriolet and the Sport Roadster again are included among the six body choices but all have been completely re-designed and closed models carry the latest Fisher body creations, new Duco colors, new fenders, headlamps and many other refinements.

But the beauty of the New Series Pontiac Six is not "skin deep." Under that sleek new hood is an engine which develops 43 horsepower at 2600 r.p.m., a substantial increase over the power of the previous Pontiac.

This greater power gives even better acceleration, while the new equalized and mechanically operated four wheel brakes provide correspondingly sure and rapid deceleration. The front brakes are internal and the rear are external. If the brakes are applied while the car is making a turn the outside front wheel automatically rolls free, a safety factor which enables the driver to retain full control under all conditions. A separate internal park-

Changes Announced In London Ministry

LONDON, Jan. 14 (Canadian Press).—Minor changes in the ministry were announced last night, arising from the creation of new peers at New Year's, and some resignations. The changes have no political significance, except to bring some of the younger members of the Conservative party notable for their brilliant talents and debating power into the ministerial ranks for the first time.

The government thus responds to many demands for new blood in the ministry, which is deemed necessary, especially now that general elections are almost certain, about a year hence.

The most important change politically is the resignation of Colonel George Lane-Fox, Secretary for Mines, who is appointed to the India Commission. He is succeeded by Captain Henry Douglas King, Financial Secretary of the War Office.

Alfred Duff Cooper, one of the most brilliant of the younger Conservatives, succeeds Captain King at the War Office.

POLICE SCOUR WHOLE COUNTRY FOR KIDNAPPER

Search Spreads Like Network Over Michigan and Border States.

SLAYER UNIDENTIFIED.

Number of Suspects Taken Into Custody, Later Released After Questioning.

FLINT, Mich., January 14 (Associated Press). — With the slayer of five-year-old Dorothy Schneider still at large, the search for her assailant last night spread like a network over Michigan and border states. The unidentified man who kidnapped the child, drove her to a lonely spot, killed her, and mutilated the body, was sought by the entire law enforcement body of the State, assisted by citizen posses.

The reaction of citizens of Mount Morris, near here, the scene of the crime, last night was that of fear that the man still is in the neighborhood. Children were closely guarded on orders of Chief of Police Scavarda in charge of the investigation.

Suspects Released.

A number of suspects were taken into custody yesterday but in most instances were released after questioning.

A report that a man who corresponds to the description given of the murderer had been seen, sent every available man scurrying to a wooded city park on the outskirts of Flint. A long line of officers and volunteers combed the woods without result.

State police arested a suspect near Tawss City. He was rushed to Bay City. There his identity could not be established. Although he was held, Flint officers believed he was not the man.

Another report came from Harlette. A man who acted queerly and who tallied in some details with the description, drove into an oil station here. He had not been apprehended.

CONVENT PUPILS GIVE CONCERT

Pleasing Recital in St. Alphonsus' Lyceum Well Attended.

DIPLOMAS PRESENTED.

The music pupils of St. Mary's Convent gave a very successful and well attended recital on Friday evening in the auditorium of St. Alphonsus' Lyceum. The program was not too lengthy and displayed a high degree of proficiency in the training of the young people, ranging in years from little tots of five and six to members of the higher classes in St. Peter's High school. Those taking part were trained by the Sisters of St. Joseph, and their instrumental numbers, along with a brief one-act sacred play, entitled, "The Nations at His Feet," displayed the exceptional attention given to every phase of study in perfecting their different selections and roles. At a recital of this type is always heard the attractive sort of music which might be labelled "convent" music, where the works of the more sensational moderns are not emphasized, and where the audience can hear some of the older compositions, like "Il Trovatore" and the "Tannhauser" pieces, or airs from "Pinafore," played with appreciation of their melodious character.

The stage was effectively arranged with a quantity of palms and ferns, and the majority of the pupils wore white gowns or dresses of light shades. The program opened with a selection by the orchestra from St. Peter's High School, which also rendered some very fine, snappy music later in the evening. A chorus of young girls sang, in excellent, tuneful fashion, a light melody, "'Tis the Hour For Music," and a number of instrumental numbers followed, displaying the high degrees of training in technical detail, tone and rhythm imparted to the pupils.

These numbers included a violin quartet, "Barcarolle," played by the Misses Mary Reynolds, Noreen McPherson, Helen Archambault and Mildred Kennedy; a piano trio, "Dance of the Shadows," by the Misses Margaret Hurley, Ann Donoghue and Marie Doris; a piano duet, "If I Were King" by the Misses Mary Reynolds and Agnes Grant; a piano duet, "Yellow Jonquils" by the Misses Olive O'Connell and Marjorie McNulty; a piano solo, selections from "Il Trovatore," played by Miss Eleanor Grisdale; a piano trio, selections from "Tannhauser," by the Misses Hilda Sullivan, Clotilde Collins and Mildred Kennedy; a piano duet, "Canzone," by the Misses Margaret and Catherine Carroll; a piano duet, "Extrava-

KILLS HIS SON; INJURES OTHERS

Toronto Man Surrenders After Attack on Wife and Children.

TWO IN HOSPITAL.

TORONTO Jan. 14 (Canadian Press)—One chld is dead while his sister and mother lie in serious condition in a local hospital, and the father, Charles F. H. Deighton, 34, is held by local police.

Encountering a policeman on the street near his home early today, he stated that he wanted to surrender himself as he had murdered his wife and two children, Billie, aged 4, and Jean, aged 7. Deighton was taken to the police station and an immediate investigation made. Billie was found dead in bed with his skull shattered by blows from an axe. Jean was discovered in the basement of the house unconscious with serious head injuries, while Mrs. Deighton was found on the floor of her bedroom also unconscious and suffering from serious head injuries. All three were in their night attire. From a rambling, incoherent statement, the only intelligible sentence picked out by the police was "I was poverty stricken." Deighton, confined in his cell here, was very cool under questioning, but his answers to questions were very vague.

Deighton had been doing part time work translating foreign letters for a local bank. He is an interpreter and also taught languages at home. The young couple came from England some time ago and the man receives a pension for war service. A married brother lives in the city.

CHURCH REPORTS SHOW GOOD YEAR

Park Street Congregation Has Reduced Mortgage During 1927.

The annual tea and business meeting of Park Street Baptist Church was held on Wednesday evening, January 11, with a really good attendance. The ladies of the church provided a sumptuous repast, which was thoroughly enjoyed by all. The business session commenced at eight o'clock. Splendid reports were submitted by the various organizations of the church, which were very gratifying and encouraging.

The church proper and other organizations contributed $538 to missions and paid $500 on account of mortgages on church property. These items were over and above the general maintenance fund, which also showed a balance on the right side on December 31, 1927.

The congregation was presented with very concise printed reports of the year's activities. The front page of this booklet depicts the good ship of 1928 ploughing its way through troubled waters to peaceful waters. It contains a message from the pastor, Rev. James L. Harton, entitled, Dreams, as follows.

"It is the dreams we have—the longings we experience, the faith that these longings will some day come true that keep us keeping on. The heart that does not reach out for greater experience may be pulsating, but it is not in time with the great unseen forces that control our destiny. There is a way to launch forth into the coming year 1928 with the assurance of success and realization of our highest ideals.

"We must do something better than we have done before, putting first things first, or as one has said, 'the first thing to do is the right thing at the right time and in the right way.'

"Be zealous, be courageous, be ambitious—but be kind, learn to act by the dictates of love and respect for others, rather than from rules, and be satisfied with nothing short of perfection."

There prevailed a fine spirit of optimism and brotherly love throughout the meeting. Miss Helen Barrie and Mrs. McDougall contributed several vocal selections, adding much to the pleasure of the evening.

In conclusion the pastor gave thanks for all these tokens of the Master's favor, looking to the coming days of 1928 as days of opportunity and service.

MYSTERIOUS BEING HAUNTS FARM HOUSE IN SEYMOUR; KNOCKINGS FRIGHTEN OWNER

Strange Barrel-Shaped Apparition Has Been Seen Passing From Cellar.

DOORS OPENED SUDDENLY.

Bed Clothing Lifted When Thing Passes Bed—Family Badly Frightened.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 14.—Man, beast or demon of the unknown! What one of these three or combination of any two or all three is able to penetrate solid brick walls, pass unopened doors, lift covers from bed with an unseen hand and shake them like a banner floating on a stiff breeze? Can this mysterious phantom see, hear or speak and how does it create the violent wind which accompanies its every appearance? What connection has it with the violent knockings which are heard underneath the floor where there is no cellar as well as where there is an excavation?

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Keating and their four small children have been trying in vain to solve this series of questions ever since they purchased the farm on the eighth concession of Seymour where they now reside. The Keating family came to the farm on the twentieth day of April, 1927, from the district near Havelock, and have been hearing the knocking sounds at various irregular intervals since that time. The ghost itself has only appeared to them twice, once on a windy night in December and a second time on a calm night since the New Year. On each visit it has followed the same path and disappeared in the same place. Its visits are usually accompanied by a violent knocking as of a heavy man shod with steel who jumped instead of walked. It comes up from the cellar, passes along the hall to the bedroom on the ground floor on the east side of the house and disappears through the solid brick wall. It has never been seen outside the house.

On the walls of the house, about a foot above the surface of the ground, are queer looking holes in the brick which go right through to the inside. There are others in the door. From one of these an Ontario motor license marker for 1918, number 34372 was taken and the date on the newspaper used as a base for the wallpaper bears the date, 1914, with the word "Fleet" visible in headline type. It apparently is an item of war news.

On one occasion when the knockings were heard in the cellar, Keating went to investigate. As soon as he opened the door the thing swept past him and was away on its usual round. As it passed one of the children's beds, the coverlet was lifted vertically and shaken with a sound like the crackling of heavy wrapping paper. When the mother instinctively stretched out her hand to protect her child, her hand went right into the thing and seemed to be magnified to the size of about a foot long and the same wide, but Mrs. Keating says she did not feel anything.

For a long time the Keatings did not see fit to divulge what was troubling them but made inquiries in a discreet manner regarding the experiences of former occupants of the house. What they were told did not greatly subdue their concern. Some of the former owners and tenants did say, however, that they had never been so bothered. But two returned soldiers who claimed they were not in the least nervous, could not be persuaded to return to the house under any conditions. Another man has

Girl Takes Own Life After Shooting Fray

BELGRADE, Jan. 14 (Canadian Press). — An assassination having a political bearing is reported from Skeplje (Uskub). A Macedonian woman, Hora Buljeff, attacked Velimir Prelitch, legal adviser to the Skoplje prefect, firing several shots from a revolver at him, and then shot herself.

Prelitch was mortally wounded and both he and the woman were removed to a hospital, where it is said she has since died, after stating that she was a native of Jugo-Slavia and married to a Bulgarian living in Sofia.

Prelitch conducted the police investigation in connection with the Macedonian students arrested and sentenced to prison for furthering the aims of the Macedonian revolutionary committee last November. It is thought that the attack on him was due to the part he played in the prosecution.

LONDON PAPERS ISSUE 24 PAGES

Striking Workmen Get Out Emergency Sheet—Both Sides Set Out Claims.

SITUATION UNCHANGED.

LONDON, Ont., January 14 (Canadian Press). — Despite the strike by the printers at seven o'clock last evening, both the London Advertiser and the London Free Press published twenty-four page issues this morning and both will publish an edition of similar size this afternoon. An emergency staff was employed, and the paper was published jointly, although each bore its own title and contained its own editorial.

There have been no new developments in the situation to-day. No requests for conferences between the employers and the men have been asked or granted, nor is there any indication of the strike being extended to include stereotypers and press room workers, who are still on duty.

Both papers issued a statement to their readers on the front pages of the morning editions in which they stated that if the increase demanded by the printers had gone into effect, it would have meant also an increase in rates to advertisers, which it was felt they could not be asked to pay at the present time. The statement also contained the payroll figures for 1927 of both printing staffs.

The printers have issued an emergency sheet headed "Fair Play," setting forth their side of the question.

BIG SISTERS NEEDS HEAVY

Several Families in Great Distress, Association Finds.

FURNITURE NEEDED.

The Big Sisters are asking for a little assistance in helping several mainly through illness and misfortune.

In one home, where the father and pricipal bread-winner is sick, there are two little girls, ten and twelve years of age, who have been unable to go to school for several weeks because they lack clothing. Shoes and stockings underwear, dresses and coats, for these children, would be welcome. There is a great deal of need in this house, on account of lack of money and the father's sickness, and an unpaid rent bill. Any work, even if it meant only his keep, would also be welcomed by the sixteen-year-old son of the house.

In five homes, there is much necessity owing to sickness, which spreads its devastating hand over young and old alike, and in one house, where fire took most of the family's possessions before they removed to the city, and where the head of the house is without work, there is urgent need of a bed and springs to go with it. Some chairs would help a lot, too. There are four children here, the youngest five years of age.

Anyone interested is asked to telephone to any of the following numbers: 1607J, 788W, 2452W or 2856J.

GUARD AGAINST REPETITION OF STREET FIGHTS

Mining Region in Colorado Heavily Patrolled By Officers.

SHOT STARTED MELEE.

State Authorities Claim That Sniper Was at Work.

WALSENBURG, Colo., Jan. 14 (United Press).—Reinforced details of state police, together with county and city officers, were massed yesterday to prevent a repetition of the rioting which late Thursday resulted in the death of a striking coal miner and the wounding of three other persons, one of them a state policeman.

Different Accounts

State police and I.W.W. sympathizers presented different accounts of the clash, which followed at attempt of the state and Walsenburg officers to break up a strikers' parade.

State authorities insisted that Klemento Chavez, 42, the Mexican striker killed, had been sniping at them from an upper floor of the I.W.W. hall. R. W. Henderson, I.W.W. attorney, denied that any shots were fired from the second-storey window of the hall.

Shot Started Melee

The general street melee started after one of the paraders, identified as Salistino Martinez, 16, had been wounded by a bullet fired by a state officer. The police said Martinez had provoked the shot by shooting and wounding Max Lordeman, 30, a state policeman, while the officers were engaged in breaking up the parade of several hundred strikers and strike sympathizers.

DANDURAND MAY BE ENVOY

Commission General May Be New Canadian Minister at France.

NO DECISION MADE.

PARIS, January 14 (Canadian Press Cable via Reuter's). — While Hon. Phillippe Roy, Commissioner-General for Canada in Paris was the only one mentioned here in the first place in connection with the appointment of a Canadian Minister to France, the suggestion is now being discussed that Hon. Raoul Dandurand, Canadian representative on the Council of the League of Nations, may occupy the new post.

Interviewed here yesterday, Mr. Roy said he was the last person to be able to give any information on the subject, but in any case the Canadian Parliament must first formally confirm the creation of a legation. Meanwhile, he believed no decision had been made at Ottawa in regard to the choice of a minister, and he disclaimed the possession to any inside information.

MOVIE-USHER IDEA ON THE GOLF LINKS

Uniformed Caddies Introduced To World By Surrey Golf Club.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14. — Returning from England, a golfing friend brings word of a contemplated innovation in the royal and ancient game which when put into effect is likely to sweep the world. At any rate one fancies that it will take a firm hold upon the imagination of golf and country club authorities throughout the United States.

It relates to the caddie. Why, asks a group of imaginative geniuses comprising the greens committee of a Surrey golf club, should caddies be the ill-favored tatterdemalions that they are?

Why is it not possible that they beautify rather than blot the flawless greens and the sweet turf of the fairway? Answering their own questions the Surrey golfers say that it is entirely possible and a movement is on foot to devise well fitting club uniforms for the caddies something in gray and gold with vizored caps and white Sam Browne belts.

The charm of this idea cannot it would seem fail to appeal to any golf club anywhere. As a matter of fact a club in Versailles already has a rule that no boy may be a caddie who is not a boy scout appropriately uniformed and smartly trained. They have a scout master in addition to a caddie master and military drill is expected of them.

Americans who patronize the great movie palaces must be fully aware what can be done with youngsters when they are brightly uniformed, instructed in polite conversation and general good manners and inspired by a pride of calling.

Now comes the chance to carry the movie usher idea to the golf links, nothing more alluring has been devised since the abandonment of the old gutty ball.

On all American links rags will be replaced by garb of military smartness. Snappy efficiency in all details of caddying will supplant indifferent demeanor and the habit of louchiness.

The whole spirit of golf will change—who will say this will not be for the best. For when the new era has dawned and you mistake someone else's ball for your own you will not get a snicker coupled with the contemptuous information that you are wrong. Instead, preceded by a snappy salute it will be, "Beg pardon, sir, but this is not your ball. I'm sorry. If you will move to the rough, a bit to the left, near that oak tree, I am sure that with the assistance of your caddie the ball will be discovered. I thank you."

Service, dulcetly rendered, will be the new cry.

NEW YORK, January 14. Thespis In Celluloid

Some Observations on the Motion Picture.

THOUGHTFUL PEOPLE can no longer dismiss the motion picture with a shrug. The day of "nickledom" is past. From San Francisco to Singapore, from Boston to Buenos Ayres breathless millions sit with eyes glued to a flickering screen. On the Champs Elysees, where once the mighty Talma thundered, brilliant facades have arisen to house the celluloid drama. Drury Lane, home of the most cherished traditions of the English stage for two centuries, has finally had to bow to the inevitable onrush of the cinema. On the milling canyons of Broadway are now to be found temples of the most imposing grandeur, dedicated to the worship of the goddess of the silver sheet.

When families steeped in the best traditions of the legitimate stage for generations desert the stage for the screen, as the Barrymores have done; when names such as George Arliss and Otis Skinner do not hesitate to associate themselves with the motion picture, surely one must give pause before speaking of the "movies" as something inconsequential.

A Force.

Least of all should religious people and those interested in the moral life of the community permit themselves to adopt an attitude either disdainful or intolerant toward this new force which is influencing the lives of millions all over the world. That it is a force the intelligent observer cannot deny; and as for its influence an, English critic has remarked that the only surprising thing is that that influence is not even greater than it appears. For the motion picture comes home to men's business and men's bosoms; it is the nightly recreation of such a hetrogeneous mass of people that the imagination refuses to classify them. The legitimate drama may have achieved a greater dignity in its day, but never could it boast an audience so vast nor one even in a remote degree so nearly approaching universality.

Yet it is from that very fact that a sense of discouragement is apt to overtake one interested in the cinema from an artistic point of view and stir up in his mind serious doubts at the oft-repeated assertion that the motion picture has now taken its place among the arts.

Censorship and Art.

By one of those curious, ironic twists of which history affords us so many examples, the drama, which had its inception as a highly moral force and was utilized as such by the church of the middle ages, came to be an anathema in the eyes of the Puritans of the modern period. By no means, unfortunately, have we got away from this attitude today. Of course, there are direct historical causes and perfectly valid grounds for such an attitude, and we must take with a grain of salt Macaulay's facetious statement that "the Puritans forbade bear-bating, not because it gave pain to the bear, but because it gave pleasure to the spectator." Yet, although the stage may have suffered much at the hands of well-meaning reformers, nothing can destroy the supreme art of the theatre, which is as enduring as the beauty of the Parthenon or the smile of the Mona Lisa.

With the motion picture it is quite different. For several years now—in fact, dating almost from the moment when it began to be taken seriously—the screen has been subject to as bigoted and blundering a censorship as was ever imposed upon the stage. The stage has survived, and its art has been preserved and assured. Will the same be true of the screen?

Just as the feet of the Chinese baby girl are bound and their growth effectually checked, so the binding restrictions of an unnatural censorship applied to the motion picture in its infancy may well result in a stunted and deformed product which one could scarcely be induced to admit as an art.

Allow, on the other hand, a sufficient time to elapse for free and natural development. Whatever artificial restrictions may subsequently be imposed shall be snapped at the proper moment as Lilliputian cords are broken by an awakening Gulliver.

This period of freedom was allowed the stage. It is not being allowed the screen.

Discouraging Circumstances.

Censorship seems to arise from a tacit admission of the truth of the theory that human beings in the mass are not capable of looking after themselves. This theory, which is scarcely compatible with the sublime concept of the democratic ideal, may have good ground—although whether censorship is either a logical or sufficient means of solving the difficulty is open to serious debate.

Whether or not the public requires coercion in matters of what it shall see, hear or read, is a question best left alone for the present. But one phase of the question is beyond dispute, and is especially pertinent to a discussion of the motion picture: and it is that the taste for caviar is still a thing to be acquired by the general.

If the screen, by virtue of the sheer merit of its offerings, is ever able to raise itself above the mundane level of a mere medium of entertainment, it will have done so despite this and a whole host of attendant circumstances.

Great Pictures.

Let us consider. It is undeniable that the cinema has produced some pictures of genuine artistic value, and from this it may be argued that the motion picture can already claim a place among the arts. But of the countless number of productions which have appeared from the beginning of the film industry to the present moment, and particularly of those which have had indisputable artistic merit, the arresting fact is that no more than a handful may accurately be called great pictures.

A picture is not great merely because it is an artistic success any more than it is great merely because it is a box-office success. The plays of Shakespeare were great from the first, not only because they contained a divine spark but because in addition they appealed to the audience which beheld them.

Taking into consideration the relative number of productions and the relative sizes of the aggregate audiences, the amazing dearth of photoplays which are great because they are a financial success at the same time as they are an artistic success shows the screen to be in as bad a state today as the English stage was when it was at its lowest ebb.

And the fault rests almost entirely with that huge and far-flung audience, of which mention has already been made—if one may be permitted to employ the somewhat erroneous word "audience" out of deference to popular usage.

The appalling number of photoplays which have been artistically good and upon which the people have turned their thumbs down is one of the unhealthiest signs in the motion picture industry and one of the reasons why the cinema is unable now to take its place permanently and beyond dispute as one of the arts. For, say what you will, the gentlemen who control the destinies of the silver sheet are interested in it primarily as a business, and, if they can help it, they are not going to give the public anything but what that public wants and for which it is willing to pay.

The Millstone.

"The Golden Book" records the following extract from a conversation in which two movie title writers discuss the subtleties of their art. "I don't think it will get across," says one. "All right," replies the other, "let's dumb it up a little." The implied contempt is infinite.

In the larger and more sophisticated centres the audience is intelligent enough. It is aware of what is going on; is appreciative of genuine effort in the right direction; and is able to recognize and usually to evaluate quite shrewdly a work of art when it sees one, no matter how humble the guise. This is the audience to which the legitimate stage has been able to appeal almost exclusively, a fact which has possibly been the largest contributing factor in the maturing of the spoken drama.

But the audience of the provinces is the one to which the screen must appeal; in fact, it is peculiarly the motion picture's happy hunting ground. It is, unfortunately, an audience which "knows what it likes" and views with a bored and apathetic eye, if not with open antagonism or ridicule, what it conceives that it does not like.

A veritable millstone, it is weighted about the neck of the hapless motion picture, holding it down to the uninspired level of purveyor of pallid fare fit for the innocent entertainment of morons.

If the motion picture is to mature into an art, the motion picture audience must first of all outgrow its childishness. —A. E. F. A.

EVERY MEMBER URGED TO ATTEND

It Pays To Be Confident!

IBSEN says, "So to conduct one's life as to realize oneself—this seems to me the highest attainment possible to a human being. It is the task of one and all of us, but most of us bungle it." But why do we bungle it? Is it because we are stupid, ignorant, incorrigible, or incompetent? In most cases I think the failure is due to a lack of confidence. Our achievement can never rise higher than our confidence.

Every time we acknowledge weakness, deficiency or lack of ability or of opportunity, or harbor doubt, we weaken our self-confidence, and that is to weaken the very foundation, the very possibility of achievement.

We might as well expect to get over the Rockies by sitting down, declaring the undertaking too great for us, that we can never accomplish it, that we are afraid of the difficulties and of getting lost, as to hope to attain success in life while holding to doubts and fears of our ability to do what we undertake. To allow ourselves to admit that we are inferior to any emergency confronting us is to invite defeat. The moment we harbor a doubt of our ability, that moment we capitulate.

The positive man may have some unpleasant qualities, but he is the man wanted everywhere. He who is fearless, with conviction born of the confidence of strength, is the one trusted to achieve in every line of endeavor. The world has always stood aside for the man who has had a fixed purpose, a mission, a calling to do that which he feels a throbbing compulsion to do.

The trouble with too many of us is that we have our wish-bone where our back-bone ought to be.

I want to hear the preaching of a confident man despite the fact that many ecclesiastical high-brows decry his so-called dogmatism. When I want medical advice or surgical skill let me get to the men who are confident of their own knowledge and skill and I shall face the most trying ordeal with a confidence that is begotten of their confidence. If I have to appear before the courts give me a lawyer whose mind hasn't got the shadow of a doubt regarding his ability to influence a verdict in my favor.

A little group of men are standing in the street of a city. Look at them! Their dress and general appearance show that they are strangers; there is something Oriental about their look that arrests our notice, and by casting a glance around we can see that this is a European town. One of the party is quite young, the others are all his elders. They had been walking together as if going somewhere, but now you see them standing, not irresolutely, but as if some new and fixed purpose animated them. Suddenly one of them—not the young man, but one of his companions—turns round and addresses a person walking behind, who had been making remarks upon them. He speaks plain and decidedly, and the effect of his words is manifest. Others, too, have heard the words! What business had he to speak thus? Can this be allowed? Clearly this opinion is being freely expressed by some of the bystanders. Cries are uttered, blows are struck; some of the party are hustled about and separated from their companions, and now, as they are disappearing from view in the midst of a howling mob, one can only hope that their lives may not be forfeited for what seems to have been a kindly act.

The key to the previous Pen Picture of Bible History is to be found in Jeremiah 38 and 39.

His Own Kingdom

NEVER yet was the religious work of any city or any place done except by the men labouring there. Great impulses have been given by visiting miniseters and by evangelists, but if those who have taken up a ministry in a place do not adequately discharge it, nothing will arrest the decay of the church.

Have You Felt It?

WE are from time to time made to realize that the ground beneath us which seems so solid and substantial is as unstable as any gossamer. In a moment of time death may lay its cold hand upon us and cause our beating heart to stop. What then? Let us show our wisdom by looking for a city which hath foundations, the Maker and Builder of which is God.—A. F.

Children's Corner — TELL US A STORY

A lovely little story is told about some swans in the moat of the palace of the Bishop of Wells, England. The old gatehouse, with its grey, ivy-grown walls, still stands, and the swans sail up and down the dark waters of the moat, which centuries ago was a defense of the castle.

The peculiar thing about these swans is that they ring a dinner bell whenever they are hungry, and expect to have it answered at once. A long string hangs out of the gatehouse window and, as the story is told, when the swans are hungry, the leader swims gravely up to the bell rope, pulls at it, and then waits quietly for the lodge-keeper's wife to bring out her basket of bread.

It is said that fifty years ago the daughter of the Bishop who lived there then taught the swans this trick with great patience and care. The swans that have come since then have apparently in turn learned the secret of the bell rope so that one who is able to perceive the connection between the pulling of the string and the appearing of the bread-basket has always been among them. That the swans communicated their desire for bread to their leader, who was always the one to ring the bell, is evident from the fact that after the black swans were introduced into the moat the ringing became so frequent that the housekeeper had to take the string in to secure herself a little peace. Evidently the newcomers were hearty eaters.

We all have a right to pray, "Give us this day our daily bread." We are taught, "Ask and ye shall receive." Let the story of the swans teach us this lesson—the lesson of prayer.

Element of Surprise

IF you think of it, everybody becomes wearisome when you always know just what they will say and do in all circumstances. Many people listen without hope to their preachers. Experienced hearers can often tell you, when a text is announced, practically all that will be said upon it. I lay stress upon the element of surprise, surprise in diction, surprise in thought.—W. R. N.

How Differently

IS not the coming of the soul to Christ a meeting of souls? The sinful soul rises; the sinless descends. Thus does the Son of Man become the Saviour. And is it not by a movement of faith that we enter the door? Faith, we have sometimes thought, is the door-latch; and how many have believed, and how differently they have believed, and how sweetly they have entered into rest!—W. R. N.

Nothing seems to worry a girl more than taking on flesh while she's the victim of unrequited love.

Help me to bear my burden, but let me speak my mind.

LET US TRY IT!

GOD will never expect from any one of us more than He has given us the power to perform, and, in the nature of things, He can never be satisfied with less. Our usefulness depends very little, if at all, upon natural gifts. It depends almost entirely upon our surrender to that supernatural power which is our heritage as Christians. When this power gets a chance to operate through a human life the humblest individual will so speak, so look, so grasp your hand, so do the commonest things of life, that strange and everlasting forces will spring from the act and touch hearts on every side. If church members could be brought to believe this so as to put it to the test the church of today would bear a stronger resemblance to the church of the first century.

BONAR'S HYMNS

THE late W. Robertson Nicoll once wrote that the literary productions Dr. Horatius Bonar thought least of were by far the most popular. These hymns were ushered into the world in the most unpretending manner. Some of them were printed as leaflets, to be sung by the Sunday School scholars in Kelso; others were used to fill up vacant spaces in The Quarterly Journal of Prophecy. He wrote some of the best known in railway carriages, and some when sitting for a brief rest by the fireside after a day's work. They have gone round the world, have been sung in churches of all communions, have been learned by little children, and hung as lights over the thickly closing waters of death.—A. F.

THE VALUE OF FAIRS.

Hon. John S. Martin, Provincial Minister of Agriculture took advantage of the visit of a Peterborough Exhibition deputation to the Parliament buildings on Thursday to pay a tribute to the work done by fall fairs in general.

"I think", said Mr. Martin, "that a good many people do not realize how valuable the fairs are."

Undoubtedly that is the case.

The importance of exhibitions is often questioned by critics who declare them to be of little real value either to the farmers or to the community in which they are held.

Ontario's Minister of Agriculture has a personal reason for believing that there is nothing to such complaints.

He gives fall fairs most of the credit for his own unique success as a poultry man, a success that places him as one of the most successful and best known members of that branch of agriculture in the world.

"I have not the slightest hesitation in saying", he informed the deputation, "that the fairs have made me."

Furthermore Hon. Mr. Martin points out that no better medium exists for bringing the country and city people together.

THE PENNY BANKS.

The success attending the launching of the Penny Bank system into Peterborough's public schools this week is gratifying to those who feel that these banks should do much to foster habits of thrift among the youngsters of the city.

To have 69 per cent of all the pupils in the schools open accounts on the first day the scheme was in operation was a rather surprising showing.

Already 1,566 pupils have started to save and the total sum to their credit is approximately $600.

The start has been excellent and there is no doubt that if the pupils are encouraged by their parents to save regularly that the result will be thoroughly desirable.

The whole thing, of course, hinges upon the theory that thrift can be made a habit and that cannot be successfully carried out unless there is a consistent and regular saving on the part of the pupils.

If children expect to have as much spending money as usual and still be able to make periodic deposits in the Penny Banks the scheme will fall far short of what has been claimed for it.

They must be taught the desirability of their saving each week a portion at least of the money they have been frittering away—otherwise the plan will fail.

A GREATER EXHIBITION.

The Peterborough Industrial Exhibition has taken a long stride forward as a result of the visit of the big deputation, headed by Mayor Denne, President of the Exhibition, which waited upon Hon. John S. Martin, Provincial Minister of Agriculture, on Tuesday and requested a Government grant of $50,000 toward the cost of erecting modern exhibition buildings.

The members of the deputation are to be congratulated upon the success of their mission, and the impression made upon the Minister of Agriculture.

Hon. Mr. Martin left no doubt as to his accordance with the request made, nor as to the high standard of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition.

"I have no hesitation," declared the Minister, "in saying that you are entitled to a place with London and Ottawa. You are doing just as good work. It is only a matter of degree. I shall be very glad to give my encouragement to your proposition when it comes before my colleagues. I feel that the time has come when we ought to do something for the Peterborough Exhibition. I think that you will realize that you are going to have my support, and I hope that something very tangible is going to be done for you."

The endorsation of Peterborough Exhibition by the Minister of Agriculture as occupying the same class as the Ottawa and London Exhibitions is almost as gratifying as his promise of support.

This tribute stamps the local Exhibition as one of the outstanding fairs in Ontario, and will advertise it as such throughout the Province.

With the assistance of the City and County Councils and of subscriptions from many public-spirited citizens of the city and district, the Directors of the Peterborough Exhibition have succeeded in building the Exhibition up to its present standard, giving it a ranking that places it in the major class.

But there is a limit to what can be done with local resources, and that limit has about been reached, leaving further expansion dependent upon the measure of assistance that is given by the Government.

Fortunately, Hon. Mr. Martin is well aware of that fact, and is convinced that the Provincial Government must come to the assistance of a fair that practically on its own account has been doing remarkable work in Eastern Ontario.

The heartiness with which he declared that Peterborough's Exhibition is doing as good work as the Ottawa and London fairs and the frankness with which he avowed his intention of supporting the deputation's request, leaves no doubt of the fact that the Exhibition will receive very substantial assistance from the Government.

The Exhibition, in short, is to enter upon a new era of expansion, surpassing the rapid growth of the last ten years.

A large Government grant will mean larger and more substantial buildings for a number of departments that require better accommodation, and the erection of these will be part of the year's programme of activities.

Peterborough's Exhibition has in a single decade advanced its status so emphatically that it is now regarded as one of Ontario's most notable fairs, and with the new ranking given it by the approval of the Minister of Agriculture 1928 sees it launching out on broader and big lines. The deputation which visited Toronto this week did a great day's work for Peterborough and the whole district, and the fruits of their successful presentation of their case will be seen in the greater Exhibition than has been that will open its gates next September.

"PIGS IS PIGS."

Canada is well to the front amongst the nations of the world as a producer of bacon hogs. Prices fluctuate, of course, according to the market demands, and there are occasional periods of depression and discouragement. On the whole the industry progresses despite the few lapses. The status the country has attained in this respect is a credit alike to the breeders in general and to the Provincial and Dominion associations and departments of agriculture. This position has been gained by a prolonged period of concentrated effort to produce a superior breed of bacon hog, with results that are beginning to be reflected most creditably, and it may be hoped with increasing profit. Canadian bacon of fine quality is known on the breakfast and dining tables of the world, and its fame is spreading.

New Zealand has paid an added tribute to the quality of Canadian bacon hogs, in the recent buying of six bacon type pure-bred swine. They are for the agricultural department of that Dominion. Three of these were taken from a Ridgetown breeder, the others from others parts of Ontario and Quebec. Other shipments are to follow. The importations are for breeding purposes, and the improvement of bacon hog type in New Zealand is the aim. These shipments are said to be the first that New Zealand has imported from North America since 1916. It is stated that other overseas Dominions and British colonies will shortly be in the field for somewhat similar purchases. Most Canadians who are interested in such matters, know that there was a time when little attention was paid to type. As a rule a healthy fat hog was regarded as being desirable and good enough for marketing. Now the producers of hogs, like the breeders of other stock, have to adapt themselves to the needs of a market which has grown more discriminating, and so far as Canada is concerned it is being done with the same success that has been achieved in other directions.—Brantford Expositor.

REV. BEN H. SPENCE ON THE FUTURE.

Rev. Ben H. Spence, Managing Director of the Canadian Prohibition Bureau, was quick to issue a letter from his office controverting the prediction made at Atlantic City by Premier Ferguson that Ontario would never go back to prohibition now that Government control had been established. Mr. Spence is certain that prohibition is coming back, and the following exerpt from his letter is of interest:

"Mr. Ferguson as a professional politician does not think prohibition will come back. I, as a professional prohibitionist, am absolutely certain it will. I firmly believe that not only will we have prohibition to the extent of Provincial powers, but that, profiting by experience, we will go further and strike at the very root by securing the enactment of a Dominion law that will prohibit manufacture, importation, exportation, and inter-Provincial shipment and sale of liquor. The present may be with the booze business, the future is with the prohibition cause.

It is the latter part of Mr. Spence's prohibition objective which offers a great field for speculation. Will we ever have a Volstead law in Canada? The times are far from hopeful, but the Managing Director of the Canadian Prohibition Bureau is no doubt looking far ahead. We will have Federal prohibition in Canada when the people want it, and not before. Eight out of nine Provinces now have a liberal dispensation of liquor. Until all these laws are weighed in the balance and found wanting, and when the Provinces can afford to disregard the revenue from the traffic, then in the Federal Parliament there might be an avalanche of public opinion aroused because of economic waste and abuses which will put through a Dominion-wide measure abolishing even manufacture. When that happens in Canada, it will be a veritable Prohibition Utopia, but a good many people sympathetic with the cause will believe that Mr. Spence could spend his time and energies better in conducting an educational campaign everywhere possible against the evils of alcoholism. There is a great work in this direction, and it will bring about better conditions far more effectively than mere controversy.—St. Catharines Standard.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

So we'll take the $50,000 and—

It is understood that most of the curlers have grown so irritable over the soft weather that it is dangerous to speak to them.

Hon. Mr. Dunning's pride in the C.N.R. is shared by Canadians generally, who are delighted with the manner in which the system is being operated and at the progress that has been made.

Mayor Martin of Montreal thinks that it is economy to dispense with the services of many of the school nurses and doctors. An epidemic will probably convince His Worship that he is wrong.

Peterborough's Exhibition Board deputation used the movies effectively in presenting their claims before the Minister of Agriculture. Just another demonstration of the fact that the Peterborough Industrial is abreast of the time.

George H. Barr, Provincial Director of Dairying, has added to the good things that have been said about Eastern Ontario cheese by declaring that this section pulled the Provincial average up when Western Ontario fell down and Northern Ontario was slightly under average.

Hon. Robert Forke may summon a conference on immigration. It is a question upon which there are many opinions and probably there would be much gained by a get-together session.

LOCAL HOG MARKETS

Live hogs, thick, smooth, $8.00 cwt; select graded, $8.50; dressed hogs, head on, $14.00; head off, $15.00 cwt.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, January 14. — Market closed firm over the week-end, at a general advance of from 25c to 75c on all grades of cattle. With comparatively light runs, the demand for the choicest quality butchers stock was stimulated to the highest point, and the $12.00 mark was bettered in several instances in the heavy weight class. Choice handy butchers were equally in demand.

Hogs are the weakest feature of the market, and many complaints are heard during those interested in the hog raising industry that prices are being forced down below a profitable level for the breeder. Many farmers are evidently clearing out all their hogs, and are not renewing their stock.

Choice butcher lots at $11.00 to $12.00; fancy heavy steers sold up to $12.25.

Choice fat cows and bulls firm, $7.50 to $8.50.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Jan. 14 (Canadian Press).—The export trade in Canadian grain here yesterday was moderately active. The demand from local and country buyers for oats was also fair and values were unchanged. ....

Only a limited amount of business was done in Spring and Winter wheat grades of flour but the prices ruled firm.

Prices for all lines of millfeed were well maintained under an active inquiry from all sources. The undertone to the market for standard grades of rolled oats was firm with a fair trade passing.

A farly active business was transacted in all grades of eggs and prices were unchanged. The receipts were 894 cases.

The trade in potatoes continued quiet and prices were about steady. Sales of car lots of Prince Edward Island Green Mountains were made at $1.15 per bag of 90 lbs; Prince Edward Island White potatoes at $1.05 per bag of 90 lbs; New Brunswick Green Mountains at $1 per bag of 90 lbs in bulk, and New Brunswick White potatoes at 95c per bag of 90 lbs in bulk, ex-track.

Extreme dullness marked the trade in butter, but prices remained unchanged. The receipts were 133 packages.

There was little demand for cheese and prices ruled steady. The receipts were 57 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 14 (Canadian Press).—With Argentine and Australian shipments showing less volume than had been looked for, activity in the wheat market here became broad yesterday, and prices went upgrade. Undoing of spreads between wheat and corn tended further to lift wheat values and to check advances in corn.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled ½ to ⅝ to ¾ cent net advance, with corn unchanged to ⅝ cent up; oats unchanged to ¼ cent advance, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 15 cents.

From the outset, wheat prices here displayed an advancing trend, helped by strength of the Liverpool market and by indications of good export demand for wheat from North America.

Some advices current suggested that improved inquiry from consumers abroad was developing. On the other hand, a final authoritative but unofficial estimate of the Argentine new crop wheat exportable surplus, made the total 171,000,000 bushels, an increase of 6,000,000 bushels over the latest previous figures.

Reports of need of moisture for the Winter wheat crop in Central Nebraska, as well as in parts of Kansas and Oklahoma were also of some effect as a stimulus toward higher prices. Meanwhile, the seaboard figured that 500,000 bushels of wheat from North America were purchased yesterday for trans-Atlantic shipment, and that considerable Canadian wheat had been sold at Buffalo to mills in the United States, presumably to take care of export flour needs. Toward the last, the market reacted somewhat, however, owing to realizing of profits for holders.

Advances in corn values met with heavy selling, which included considerable profit taking as well as speculative pressure through commission houses.

Provisions moved forward.

A Thought

MORNING, NOON AND NIGHT

There are three opportunities during the day for a fight, provided you do not lunch downtown—morning, noon, and night.

What a glorious life it must be to live in a house with a husband or a wife who insists on quarreling every time they eat together.

Personally, I would rather shovel soft coal into the fiery furnace below than live on a nasty tongue two or three times a day.

Why should a man come home to his castle, when he knows that it is sure to be stormed from within? Why should a wife want her husband to come home, when she knows that he would prefer to use his knife rather than his fork.

Arguing at breakfast table, quarreling at lunch time, and fighting during the dinner hour ruins digestion, dispels all respect of the children, and raises the devil all day.

There is no living man who can do his best work when fed up on family fights, neither can a wife be expected to do the right thing while living on discord.

Altercation breakfasts, wrangly luncheons, and dagger dinners—bringing the battle to the family board—is a miserable existence for even a cat and a dog.

Why not dine together like human beings, then, if you want to "have it out," wait until the dishes are washed, and the old pipe gets to working, then the rumpus or riot will have lost a lot of its racket.

DEPUTATIONS VISIT OTONABEE COUNCIL

Hiawatha Roads to be Taken Over—Township Officers Appointed.

Otonabee Council met on January 9th, with all the members present, and after they had taken necessary qualifications, the Reeve took the chair.

A deputation from Hiawatha was present, asking the Council to take over the road through the Reserve as it was previous to 1927. The Council were unanimous in taking over the roads in the Reserve, providing the Highways Department would be agreeable to paying the grant on work done, the same as in the rest of the Township. The Reeve and road overseer, together with the Chief of the Reserve, were appointed to visit the Highways Department in reference to getting their sanction to this agreement.

A deputation from the Seventh Line was present, asking the Council to open the road around the hill on the Eighth Line across Lot 27 and connect with the road west to the Locks Bridge.

Moved by Mr. Reid, seconded by Mr. Davidson, that the road around the hill be left the way it is at the present time, until such times as satisfactory arrangements can be made with Gilbert Thompson for a right-of-way from Shumach Corner, around the hill across part Lot 27 connecting with the Eighth Line, north of the hill. Carried.

HARDY LEAVES HOME FOREVER

Heart Will Be Kept in Wessex—Body Goes To Westminster Abbey.

WILL BE CREMATED.

DORCHESTER, Eng., Jan. 14 (Canadian Press).—In the early morning moonlight on Dorset's windswept Downs, the body of Thomas Hardy, except his heart, which Wessex keeps for ever, was taken away to-day for cremation preparatory to burial in Westminster Abbey on Monday.

Only a small group of people were gathered on the roadside outside the main gate. As the hearse rolled through sleepy Wessex villages, one pictured in imagination most of the ghostly figures, characters from his novels, that rose to bid farewell to the genius who created them. A handful of narcissi was sprinkled beneath the coffin and one beautiful wreath of arum lilies and lilies of the valley accompanied it. The wreath bore a little card inscribed, "To my darling from his wife."

Latest Comment on Grain and Industrial Markets. — Closing Quotations on the Principal Active Stocks.

Some market impressions by Mr. A. C. Hawley, of Stobie, Furlong Office:

We believe that the New York market has not yet reached the peak, although we do not look for a general advance during the next few weeks.

The oils at the present look to be favorite, especially Pan-American B, Marland, and Phillips Pete.

Yellow Cab, which has advanced 5 points within the last few weeks, appears strong, and we look for a further advance in this stock.

General Motors also should go higher.

New York Central continues strong and should go higher, as well as Rubber, Steel, and Stromberg.

Radio, which has been very active the last few days, is over 104, and should still be bought around 100.

The substantial reaction in the mining market during the last while appears to be over, and we would recommend the purchase of the following:

Teck Hughes, Wright Hargreaves, Lake Shore, McIntyre, Amulet, Jackson Manion, Sheritt Gordon.

The Toronto and Montreal markets still are very strong and active, and some stocks have made very substantial gains.

With minor temporary reactions, we look for an advance in price for Massey-Harris, International Nickel, and F. N. Burt, also International Petroleum and Hiram Walker.

(Quotations over Stobie-Forlong & Co. Wire).

Mine Market Firmer With Moderate Gains

TORONTO, Jan. 14. — Canadian Press. — A firmer tone was shown in the heavy trading on the Standard mining exchange this morning, with quiet gains being recorded in a number of active leaders. Teck Hughes recovered 30 at 10.10 and Sudbury Basin firmed 5 at 13.50. Amity Copper sold up 2 at 39 and Tough Oakes was 2½ higher at 72. Argonaut, Kirkland, Hunton and Crown Reserve had similar gains while 3 point advances were checked up in Potter Doal Bidgood and Beaver. Barry Hollinger showed a further point gain. Few issues showed recessions of any extent.

Forecasts Of Cold Wave Strengthens Price Of Wheat

CHICAGO, Jan. 14 (Canadian Press).—Forecasts of a cold wave led to early higher prices to-day for wheat. The general absenec of snow protection over the domestic winter wheat. The general absence of snow as to the probable crop damage. Starting at ¾ to ½ to ⅝ cent advance wheat subsequently scored further gains. Corn and oats were also firmer, corn opening at ¼ cent to ⅜ cents up, and later holding near to the initial range. Provisions tended to sag.

Substantial Gains Recorded; Nickel Undergoes Reaction

TORONTO, Jan. 14 (Canadian Press).—Some substantial gains were recorded in a feverishly active session of the Toronto Stock Exchange this morning, despite weakness of the leader, International Nickel. Nickel, after making record high of 95½ underwent the expected reaction, closing just below 93 for a net loss of around two points. Massey Harris, in heavy trading, closed steady at 43½. But Shredded Wheat, the newly prominent issue, F. N. Burt and Christie Brown each scored clear three point gains. In addition, Pacific Grain gained a point and Maple Leaf was marked up more than seven at 128⅝. Seagram and Brompton firmed fractionally. Canadian Oil weakened 2½ at 58 from its recent advance and Page Hersey softened fractionally. Of the oils, British American firmed an eighth while Petroleum and Imperial were losing fractionally. Carling Brewing gained a point and Malting firmed slightly as did Northern Bakeries.

Early Period Of Strength Fails To Hold Market

NEW YORK, January 14 (Canadian Press).—Stock prices turned reactionary to-day after an early period of strength. The re-action was not associated with any development in the day's news, but probably represented a combination of week-end profit-taking and "bear" selling inspired by the general uneasiness over credit situation as it applies to stock market conditions.

Greene Cananea Copper broke six points; Case Threshing Machine 4½, and a number of other pool specialties sold down two points or more, including International Nickel, Warren Bros., Borden and Snider Packing Preferred. U.S. Steel Common and General Motors sold off about a point and Radio cancelled its initial gain of 1¾. The closing was heavy.

CONGREGATION HEARS REPORTS

St. James' Church Annual Meeting Held—Past Year Successful.

BUDGET PRESENTED.

The annual congregational meeting of St. James' United Church on Wednesday evening was a very representative gathering, filling Wesley Hall to capacity.

The pastor of the church Rev. J. H. Dudgeon, conducted the devotional exercises, which opened with the singing of several hymns, the Scripture lesson, and prayer by A. E. Prest.

Rev. Mr. Dudgeon was unanimously chosen as chairman for the evening, and very ably despatched the many items of interesting business on the necessarily lengthy program, and A. E. Prest was appointed secretary.

Reports of the past year's work from each of the many societies and committees connected with the church, were read by their respective chairmen or secretaries, and adopted, as follows:

Property Committee—Wesley Rose.
Pew Stewards—Wesley Rose.
Ushers — W. McLaren and J. H. Spence.
Sunday School—A. E. Prest, Superintendent.
Cognawaga Club—A. Davis, Pres.
Ladies' Aid—Mrs. F. B. Elliott, Secretary.
W.M.S. Auxiliary—Mrs. J. G Plunkett, secretary.
X.L. Mission Circle—Miss Aileen Rose.
Mission Band—Miss Dorothy Drysdale, secretary.

The Board of Stewards was represented by the following gentlemen: George Cuffe for treasurer, John Sanderson, Ernest Kitney, Elmer R. Frost, J. Arthur and J. H. Spence M. and E. Fund, R. Ritchie.

Each report received the closest attention of the audience and most of them were heartily applauded, especially the report of the Ladies' Aid Society, which has done such excellent work throughout the year under the capable management of its president, Mrs. W. Wilson.

The Budget System for 1928, to meet all the financial requirements for local church work, as well as the maintenance and extension fund was presented by Messrs. Ernest Kitney and Elmer Frost, who had taken much time and care in preparing the budget, and plans for its successful development. Every step was carefully explained and received the unqualified approval of the congregation, as the vote for the adoption of the budget carried unanimously.

Many high tributes were paid by the chairman of the several committees, to the incalculable aid and inspiration given them in all their work by their pastor, Rev. Mr. Dudgeon.

A hearty vote of thanks was accorded the Board of Stewards for the efficient way in which they had successfully carried out their work for the year just ended, and especially for the plans submitted for the New Year, which will simplify the responsibilities of all interested.

The meeting was adjourned to a later date at the call of the chair, for the election of officers and other important business.

The pastor closed with benediction one of the most successful congregational meetings held in St. James' United Church.

SUPPER CLUB MEETS.

Rev. J. E. Todd Addresses the Young Men at the Y.M.C.A.

The Friday night Supper Club of the Y.M.C.A. held a most enjoyable meeting starting at 6.15 last night. "Just what we Wanted," was the verdict of the fellows in passing judgment on the supper which followed by an inspiring talk by the Rev. J. E. Todd. He advised the fellows against branching from the main road through life, against fault finding, against failure to develop either mentally, physically, socially or religiously.

Several new members were introduced during the meeting and the decision to hold a club dance was reached. The gathering dispersed with the singing of O Canada.

-a New ESSEX SUPER SIX

New Bodies-Larger and Roomier—
New Appearance from Radiator to Tail Light-
Finer Fittings-Four Wheel Brakes-
High Compression-Long Life Motor &
An Amazing Price

One look at the new Essex Super-Six will convince you that it will excel in popularity the Essex which has just completed the most successful year ever achieved by a six-cylinder car.

From radiator to tail light it is a smarter, more beautiful car than even the Essex which preceded it. And in performance it surpasses in smoothness, reliability, speed and ease of handling, the standard Essex owners are so proud to acclaim.

You get an impression of completeness and fine quality in the design of every detail. From the new pattern Colonial lights—the higher, narrower radiator with vertical shutters—the heavy sweeping fenders—the rubber-covered running boards—the new improved steering mechanism and the steering wheel similar in design and construction to that now used on the very latest and very highest priced cars—there is outstanding reason for pride.

The bodies are not only new and roomier but are so designed as to give a lasting, solid, rigid service. The roof is flatter—the car is bigger in fact and in appearance. Door fittings, hinges and locks are impressively substantial and lastingly beautiful.

The world's largest sale of six-cylinder cars became an Essex achievement solely because of merit.

But with all these advantages, there is also an amazing price reduction. The Sedan at $960 f. o. b. Windsor is $50 below the Sedan price of last year.

These remittances must be made direct to the Contest Department with your solution. Otherwise it cannot be registered. Each ticket is valued at 15c and will be redeemed from the carrier boy at that price.
6. Readers who give their subscription to some other contestant and later want to send in an answer themselves, may do so providing they fill in the coupon, giving the name of the person they paid their subscription to and the amount paid. No further payment is necessary.
7. The contest will close on March 15, 1928, but send in your solution as soon as possible as we are offering special prizes for the first correct solutions. (See full details under "Special Prizes.") There is nothing gained by holding back your answer once you have solved the puzzle, as a contestant may make several remittances on any answer sent in while the contest lasts up to a total amount of $15.00.
8. Contestants may send in a different answer to the puzzle with each remittance, but if one of your answers is correct the money sent in on your other answers will not increase the total value of your prize, and not more than one regular prize will be paid to one family.
9. Everyone has an equal chance. You can win the first prize and extra cash for only a six months' subscription, but note how the value of the first five prizes increases if you send in more money. Aim to win the maximum Grand Prize. The Evening Examiner is now recognized as the leading daily in Peterborough district and surrounding counties and no difficulty should be found in getting your friends or neighbors to subscribe for it.
10. Contestants who remit by mail or pay at the office should see that these remittances and answers are made on a proper contest coupon to ensure them reaching the Contest Department.
11. If the correct answer is not sent in by any contestant the prizes will be awarded for the nearest correct solutions. In the event of a tie a second puzzle will be presented which will be as practicable and solvable as the first. Only those tieing will be permitted to solve the second puzzle. Should two or more persons be tied in the second puzzle the prizes will be divided equally among those tieing. No cash will be accepted on the second puzzle.
12. In entering the contest, contestants agree to abide by the rules of the contest and to accept the decision of the judges as final. The Contest Department reserve the right to alter and amend its rules if necessary for the protection of contestants or The Peterborough Examiner. It also reserves the right to refund any subscriptions and to disqualify any contestants whom they consider should not be in the contest. Contestants are assured of the same impartial treatment which characterizes The Examiner in all its dealings.

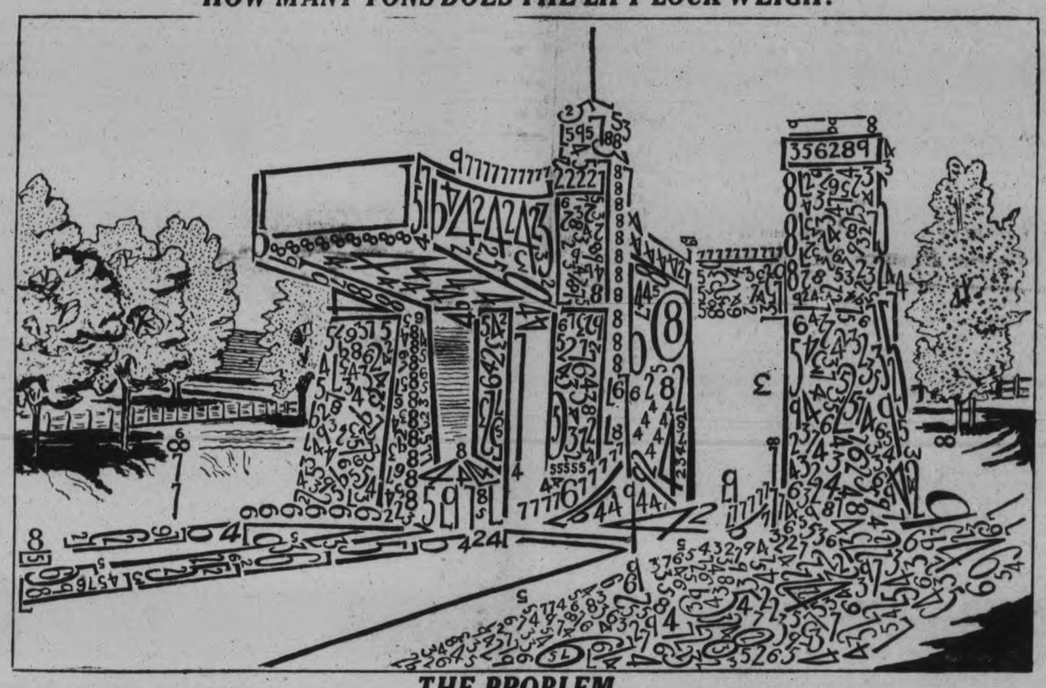
HOW MANY TONS DOES THE LIFT LOCK WEIGH?



THE PROBLEM

The problem is to add together all the figures shown above, which, when added together, represent the total number of tons that the Lift Lock weighs.

The puzzle is entirely free from tricks or illusions, every figure is complete and stands alone. The figures range from two to nine. There are no ones (1) or ciphers (0) in the puzzle. The sixes are curved, while the stem of the nines are straight.

We wish it clearly understood that every figure can be plainly seen. There is nothing hidden in the trees or shadows, but the problem of adding these is a real test of accuracy.

Remember, each figure is added separately. For example, 9777 is counted 9 plus 7 plus 7 plus 7, or, in other words, simply add them as if each figure stood one above the other in a single column.

REMEMBER, NO ONE KNOWS THE CORRECT ANSWER UNTIL THE CONTEST CLOSES

To ensure this we had Mr. E. M. Elliott, County Treasurer, and Mr. Frank Adams, City Treasurer, each erase one or more figures from the original drawing, which they carefully noted and sealed in an envelope and gave to the manager of the Royal Bank for safe keeping until the contest closes.

A TIP ON HOW TO WIN

Take a pencil and put down the numbers as you stroke them out, then add them up. Some suggest that you cut the chart into dozens of pieces, then check them from all sides; or if you wish, try blotting them out with colored ink or pencil. Others think the best way is to pick out all the twos, threes, fours, etc. Any they miss the first time they find later. Or suppose you try taking a combination of figures which, when added together, makes a total of ten. For example, 5 and 3 and 2 make 10. Tens are not only easily added together, but there is less danger of making a mistake.

Important Points to Remember

1. Everyone has the same opportunity. A person sending in only $3.00 in subscriptions has the same chance of winning the first prize as a person sending in more money. The advantage of sending in more money is to increase the value of the first five prizes.
2. This is a contest for Peterborough district, and 50 people from Peterborough or the surrounding district, which The Examiner serves, will win the prizes.
3. Don't forget to answer all the necessary questions on the solution blank.
4. If you collect a subscription from a friend or neighbour, that person can also submit an answer to the puzzle without further payment.

THE JUDGES

In order that each Contestant shall have fair and impartial treatment, we have arranged with Mr. Roland Denne, Mayor of the City and Alderman Nagel Phelan to act as judges for the contest. Any complaints in this connection will be referred to these judges whose decision will be absolutely final.

JUSTICE RIDDELL GIVES ADDRESS ON CANADIAN CRIMINAL LAWS

Says Native Canucks Measure Up Pretty Well as Law-Abiding Citizens.

AT PHILADELPHIA.

Gives Brief Description of Procedures of Courts and Juries.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Jan. 14 (Canadian Press).—In an address here last night on the criminal law in Canada, Mr. Justice W. K. Riddell, of the Supreme Court of Ontario, said that native Canadians measure up pretty well as law-abiding citizens among the people of the North American continent. Mr. Justice Riddell spoke before the Philadelphia Forum, giving a description of Canadian criminal law and of the procedures of courts and juries.

Speaking of the result of the administration of law in the Dominion, Mr. Justice Riddell said:

"I do not claim that we have in Canada a population that is naturally more law-abiding than any other but I can fairly say that we measure up pretty well among the people of this continent, and show a reasonably decent people among the English speaking nations.

"Our native folk are very law-abiding, but we have the misfortune to have somewhat large and increasing foreign population, and this foreign element raises our crime record beyond what it should be. To give an example of the result, I would say that in the week I am writing this, there were seven criminal appeals before my court, and of the seven convicted persons, five had non-British names and were immigrants from non-Nordic Europe.

Official Figures

"I shall give the official figures from the report for the years to the twelve-year period, 1914-1925 inclusive, the latest available, and invite comparison with any nation or people.

"Murder per million—Canadian-born, 11.8; born in other British possession, 29.1; born in the United States, 59.2; born in other foreign countries, 240.3.

"Manslaughter — Canadian-born 31.5; born in other British possessions, 43.2; born in the United States, 93.6; born in other countries, 261.6.

"Murder, manslaughter and attempts to murder—Canadian-born 89.4; born in other British possessions, 91.1; born in the United States, 224.6; born in other foreign countries, 691.9.

"... as to avoid any possible misapprehension, I should, perhaps, say that I am assured on the highest authority that Canadian-born, when they move South, are found to be in the favored land not more but rather less regardful of law than the native-born American—no, I have no reference to the Volstead Act."

OUR WINTER WEATHER

A Trying Time For People With Weak Watery Blood.

Canadian winter weather is a trying time for debilitated, run-down people. The close air of shut-up houses, lack of out-of-door exercise, the restricted diet of the season, all have their effect on weakened systems. There is always in such cases the danger of severe colds, attacks of influenza, or the still more dreaded pneumonia. There it no other time of year, when a bountiful supply of rich, red blood is so necessary; and the one way to keep the blood rich and pure and thus avoid winter trouble is through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. If, unfortunately, you have fallen a victim to influenza, or other winter troubles, this same medicine will restore your health and strength. Among those who have proved the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is Miss Margaret Pearson, R.R. No. 3, Chatham. Miss Pearson had passed through a severe attack of influenza and says: "It left be so weak and run-down, that I could scarcely walk. Anaemia set in and it almost seemed as if I would not pull through the winter, as I grew so weak that the least exertion would bring on fainting spells. I was under medical treatment, but it did not help me. Then one day in our local paper I read an advertisement of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and decided to try them. By the time I had used three boxes I felt much better, and continuing the use of the pills it was not long before I felt better than I had been before the influenza attacked me. My rapid recovery surprised my friends, and when asked "What did you do?" I would proudly say, "Not my doing, but Dr. Williams' Pink Pills." To me, at least, the pills have been worth their weight in gold."

As a precaution against winter ills take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills now. Sold by medicine dealers, or sent by mail at 50 cents a box by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Short of Breath Dizzy, Sinking Spells COULDN'T WALK FAR

Mrs. L. A. Oliver, Granville Ferry, N.S., writes:—"A few years ago I had dizzy, sinking spells so bad I could hardly stand up without taking hold of something to support me, and I could not walk any distance on account of being so short of breath.

"I had taken a lot of doctor's medicine, but it did me no good, only for the time being, so reading in the B.B.B. almanac about

MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS

I decided to try them and found them to be just what they are recommended to be, and I feel that I owe my life to them."

NEW PONTIAC IS OUT TO-DAY

ing brake is provided on the rear wheels.

One of the outstanding pioneering features of the new car is a radically changed principle of engine cooling as embodied in the unique "cross flow" radiator, from which it is practically impossible to lose either water or anti-freeze solution by evaporation. The water flows horizontally through the radiator cells instead of vertically as in other radiators. The water circulation is thermostatically controlled and the flow is maintained by a new water pump of the balanced impeller type.

Among other important changes on the engine are the adoption of the G-M-R cylinder head and the replacement of the conventional vacuum tank with a gasoline pump, two late developments both of which are pioneered by General Motors engineers.

The new G-M-R cylinder head (developed by General Motors Research engineers) eliminates spark knock and roughness. It gives an impulse to the car comparable only to the smoothness of the steam engine and has also enabled the Pontiac compression ration to be raised to 4.9 to 1. This is chiefly responsible for the increased power while retaining the same 186.5 cubic inch cylinder displacement, which remains larger than the displacement of any six cylinder car under $1300.

This higher compression the anti-spark effect of the new head which permits the spark to be maintained by the automatic distributor at the point of highest efficiency, a new carburetor designed especially for this car and a complete redesigning of both intake and exhaust manifolding systems, combine to produce exceptional power and performanec.

The gasoline pump, operated from the camshaft, assures a proper supply of filtered fuel at all speeds.

A combination pressure and suction type of crank case ventilator has been added, which prevents fumes from entering the body compartment and decreases dilution of the engine oil by condensed water vapor, the vapor being discharged underneath the car before it has reached the condensation point.

The new design clutch may be shifted with even greater ease than the clutch on the previous Pontiac Sixes, requiring only a light pressure on the foot pedal, a feature especially attractive to women drivers. A new steering gear design of higher ratio and with burnished bronze bearings together with a new 17-inch wheel carrying finger grips on the inside of the rim has immeasurably improved steering ease, another factor of importance to women drivers.

A new semi-coincidental lock has been incorporated in the transmission. It is operated from the ignition switch by the switch key. Thus a turn of the switch key locks both ignition and transmission without danger of soiling hands or gloves. A position has been provided so that the ignition may be turned off without locking the transmission.

The combination ignition and transmission lock and light switch are on the left side of a completely changed instrument board. Choke and throttle unit are on the right and the control assembly consisting of speedometer, oil gauge, gasoline gauge and ammeter is enclosed in a glass-covered, indirectly lighted metal case. The dials of all three instrument assemblies have an entirely new antique finish. The control buttons and switch lever mtach the body hardware.

Besides continuing the convenient foot-operated tilt-ray feature in the improved headlamps, a combination top and tail light has been added, the powerful stop light being so wired that the driver may turn it on for use as a backing light.

Although the New Series Pontiac Six retains its former wheel base of 110 inches for ease of handling and parking, the car has the appearance of being considerably larger and more sturdy than its predecessor. This effect is achieved principally through the larger, deeper radiator, surmounted by its Indian head radiator cap. This year the radiator and the new raised panel on top of the hood are nearly two inches higher, than in 1927. Full crown fenders with hood sills completely covering the front of the frame give distinction to the front of the car.

From the side, the larger hubs and spokes, the solid appearance given the front wheels by the front brake drums, the dropping of the front window lines and raising of the body panels, all combine toward an impression of low-slung, comfort and safety.

MYSTERIOUS BEING

said that he will stay for a week in any part of the house they say. But he has never come to make good his promise.

The Keatings themselves have completely abandoned the entire east side of the house, and Mrs. Keating will not even go into the empty rooms in daylight. She says that she scrubbed them a day or so ago and that the knocking commenced even then. She admits that her nerves are all on edge and that she wishes someone could explain the mystery. The children too are frightened. They cannot sleep except by "fits and starts," and are beginning to look as their mother does, pale and wane.

Only yesterday have the rumors begun to filter into town and these ranged from the most plausible story to the most ridiculous tale of the hair-raising variety. Everyone had a tale to tell and while most of them began quite modestly they usually grew to alarming proportions. Early last night a party consisting of the police, The Examiner and three local business men visited the scene of the origin of the stories. The Keatings were very glad to have someone there to help pass the time and readily answered all questions which were asked. They had not the slightest appearance of having anything to hide and Mr. Keating led the party from one room to another in order that they might see everything there was concerning the entire affair.

Armed with flashlights, and most of the party with firearms as well, they proceeded to the outside of the house and examined the markings and hales in the brick wall outside the house. Satisfied that they could not explain what had caused them, they examined the inner side of the holes and found an Ontario automobile license marker for 1918 bearing the number 34372. This had apparently been used to stop the hole on a previous occasion. All along the path taken by the spectre, the floor was carefully examined, but no marks found, although Keating said he had heard scratching and had himself been unable to find any traces. Nor did the stairs yield any clue to the blows they had received.

Apparently this mysterious thing does not go to the second storey of the house, so there seemed no necessity of investigating further for the time being. The party retired to one of the two rooms now occupied by the family. There Mr. Keating was asked to describe his impression of the thing as he saw it. He said it was about as big as a barrel and seemed to move like a man who went on his hands and feet and with boots on all four. There was no head or tail but it moved with a queer motion, combining rotation and a sort of waving effect. He had not seen it since the first of the year, but the knockings had been exceptionally violent on the nights of Thursday and Saturday, January 5th and 7th. These were from the cellar and he had not gone to open the door. He believes he would have seen it again if he had done so. He says that it always starts in the cellar and goes all through the house but never on the second floor.

Mrs. Keating was able to furnish a little more detail. She said it was of a striped appearance with a black streak through the middle and the rest was greenish grey in color with perhaps a tinge of blue. It had no head or tail and seemed to be a sort of mist. It never went through anything that she had seen but a closed door. Articles of furniture in the room were carefully avoided by it as it swept its windy way about the house. Others had been in the house to keep them company and help quiet their nerves and had heard the thing, but never seen it.

About four o'clock one morning there was a banging at their bedroom room. Thinking it to be the wind outside, Keating got up and after placing a folded rug against the bottom of the door, held it secure by placing a heavy leather upholstered chair against it. After that the door opened and shut four times, and when he got up to replace the mat and chair, he found they had not been disturbed. Yet he had seen the door open about eighteen inches and slam violently shut with a resounding bang. Mrs. Keating admitted that she was paralysed though she could not say it was from fright. She thought she was getting used to things by then. On the same night there was the sound of violent scratching on the hall floor, but not a mark could be found in the morning. Mr. Keating says he expected there would be holes in the floor or very nearly so.

Nor did the party get off without at least some evidence. In order to pass the dragging minutes, a four-handed game of euchre was instituted at the dining table. The press sat out as did one of the business men. They carried on a conversation with Mrs. Keating, who sat with her youngest child in her arms. The players were intent upon their cards and the conversation was demanding the attention of the other three when their came a distinct though not loud series of quick taps on what seemed to be either the floor or the bottom of the door beside the reporter. Having momentarily forgotten the business of the moment for the topic of the conversation, the reporter rose to open the door. As he did so he glanced at Mrs. Keating to obtain her permission to admit the person without. Her face had suddenly gone white and her eyes were staring. He paused. And in that instant she whispered swiftly, "That was it." It was a moment before the door was opened and no trace of anything was to be seen then.

Later there was a single, but this time much louder, knock from the floor almost under the table. This dispelled all doubt as to the first knock. But there was no repetition during the next hour, and the party took leave of the place. But not, however, before they had been given an invitation to remain as long as they desired and to return at any time they wished. The Keatings are more than anxious to have the matter cleared up, and peace established in their household, but they are not exactly anxious to have their time wasted by idly curious people who are not particular about their property. They say that the knockings are almost hard enough to shake the house during the first week in the month. "The floor seems to be going to come right up from under your feet." But they do not appear to be terrorized, rather only unnerved by the persistent recurrence of something which neither they nor their friends are able to explain.

If you buy out of town, and I buy out of town, and all our neighbors buy out of town, what in thunder will become of our town? Ever think about it?

DISTRICT CHURCHES.

SPRINGVILLE UNITED CHURCH

SPRINGVILLE, Jan. 14.—The regular morning service was held in Springville United Church, with the pastor, Rev. A. H. McConnachie in charge.

The Scripture reading was taken from Luke 17 20-37.

The children's text, from the Lord's Prayer, was—"Forgive us our debts as we also forgive our debtors."

"Debts," Mr. McConnachie explained, "is a much bigger word than, 'trespasses,' as is commonly used in the Lord's prayer. This petition we will notice, is conditionary. If we cannot forgive our neighbour but hold in our hearts a feeling of hate we have no capacity for our Heavenly Father's pardon.

"If we believe in Jesus Christ and feel good fellowship toward our neighbor, then we can pray this prayer, knowing that it will be granted, that our sins will be forgiven, discharged and blotted out."

The morning text was taken from Luke 17 20—"And when he was demanded of the Pharisees, when the kingdom of God should come, he answered them and said, The kingdom of God cometh not with observation."

"The Jews of olden times were sustained and carried on in the strength of great hope and expectation. They were buoyed up from their dark days by the expectation of the Messiah—a great political personage who would overcome all enemies of the Jews and restore their kingdom. They did not believe in a spiritual kingdom or a spiritual Messiah.

"These Jews were always expecting a sign to denote the coming of their king. The Pharisees in the text were thinking of this earthly kingdom. Jesus rebukes them in His reply. 'The kingdom of God cometh not with observation.' 'The kingdom of God,' said Jesus, 'is within you.' Jesus' kingdom was to be a spiritual, inward power. The reign of God must begin in the human heart where spiritual blessings are born, such as forgiveness, peace, joy and great charity toward all men. All Heavenly powers dwelling in us must be made homely (made flesh)—so that others may see them and receive blessings from them. These heavenly powers must be cultivated in our hearts. Then, and only then, have we a right to pray for others.

"The Kingdom of God cometh not with observation, but secretly, powerfully, it lodges and grows in our hearts. People everywhere are still hoping for and looking for signs. If God were to send a sign we would willingly believe. Jesus said, 'It is an evil generation that seeketh after signs—they shall receive no signs.'

"It is the nature of sin to advertise itself. A drunkard cannot hide his sin but goes reeling through our streets. Evil delights to parade, before the public eye but, good, is retiring and secret. The reclaimed and converted drunkard no longer is seen staggering along the streets. He does not usually advertise the fact that he has been reclaimed but he humbly and earnestly begins to build up a new life. Without advertisement the new spiritual signs show themselves.

"Jesus said, 'Blessed are those that have not seen and yet believe.' We all cannot see, or hope to see, the mighty work that is being done on our Mission fields, but we believe the reports we hear from our returned missionaries.

"We know that the Christian church has been born in China and it has come to stay. If all the missionaries were to be taken away from China there would be tens of thousands of Christian Chinese left to carry on the great work and sustain the church of Christ.

"The same is known of India, but the kindly leadership of the white man cannot permanently be withdrawn with safety yet. The interesting story of the wicked Queen of Madagascar shows how Christianity will survive and grow stronger under difficulties. This queen drove all the missionaries from the country and forbade even the reading of the Bible during her reign, but her Christian subjects would not give up their Bibles and their religion. They secretly met in small groups here and there through the land, conducting Christian services and reading their Bibles until, when this wicked queen died, the church was stronger than ever before.

"In Western Africa men and women are seeking for education as little children and with our missionaries we are trying to supply their needs.

"We cannot see what is going on in Japan but we know that the preaching of the Gospel through the Christian church is making a new Japan. Thousands of Japanese are being converted.

"In Korea a great Christian church is being founded. These Koreans are being gathered out of darkness into the light. They are a very devoted self-sacrificing people, and give more per member than the Canadian church to help send the Gospel to others.

"In Trinidad a century ago Christ had never been heard of. The majority of these people migrated from India, and are now accepting Christianity.

"All of these nations need Christian guidance. We like to boast of ourselves as a Nation, so why should we deny this priviledge to India, China, Africa, etc. Our missionaries are often great statesmen who are able to show true leadership to these countries. For one generation at least we must carry on with the great work, supporting and guiding these young Christians until they are strong enough to support themselves and call themselves nations.

"In Canada the church is doing a great work meeting the immigrants at all the ports to the east and to the west, offering help and guidance.

"Unless we see signs, many will not give toward this great missionary cause. Some will not even trouble themselves to read the missionary papers. We save ourselves by cultivating ignorance.

"The Kingdom of God cometh not with observation—it is coming as never before. We need to see signs in changed minds and open hearts. Jesus Christ must reign until every enemy is put under His feet. May God hasten the day."

SAFETY WORK SHOWS RESULTS

Number of Accidents at Deloro Plant Has Decreased Greatly.

OFFICERS ELECTED

MARMORA, Jan. 14.—Opening with a banquet served by chef Arthur Hart at the Hub, Deloro, for which the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company was responsible, the Deloro Safety Committee held a very interesting monthly meeting on Tuesday evening, followed by the annual meeting. After justice had been amply done to the good fare spread for members and guests to the number of fifty, the roll call was read with reports of committees following.

The flag and star were awarded to the Engineering Department for the best monthly and yearly results, T Cousins, the floating member for December on the Inspection Committee having given his report, Chairman R. A. Elliott announced that a McCallum, newly-elected member, would be floating member for January. With C. H. Buskard presenting his statement of the past month's activities of the Benevolent Board, the meeting adjourned.

Mr. Elliott, in opening the annual meeting, read a telegram from F. A. Bapty, Secretary of the Company, who had been called away to the bedside of a parent. Mr. Elliott, in his report as Chairman gave many interesting figures in proof of 1927 being the most successful year at Deloro from the Safety First standpoint.

Among other facts mentioned were these.—In the past five years there have been 1680 days lost time at the plant, coming under compensation, made up as follows:

1923	643
1924	519
1925	246
1926	184
1927	88

Organized Safety-First took place in 1926 and its result is shown in that year and 1927. From 1923 to 1926 inclusive, the employees averaged 325 in number, but in 1927 the number was 362. Good results declared Mr. Elliott were due not only to Safety-First propaganda, but also to co-operation on the part of the employees. The three foremen awarded the trip to the Safety Convention this year are, A. Kennedy, E. Hewitt, and J. Jerome, all of whom are employed at the Oxide plant. As chairman, his message at the start of 1928 was, "Go ahead." He wished all a happy and prosperous New Year, free from accidents. F. Paquet, having given an excellent Secretarial report, the election of officers was proceeded with.

Upon motion, all officers of the Executive were re-elected, namely: Chairman, R. A. Elliott; Vice-chairman, J. Hemphill; secretary, F. Paquet; Asst. Secretary, W. Reynolds.

The appointment of sub-committees was named by the chairman:

Complaints—W. Williams, J. A. Rice, C. T. Nicholson, J. Judge and H. Loveless.

Competitive—H. A. McNally, R. Hunter, H. F. Berry, R. Murray and J. Hemphill.

Publicity—W. R. Reynolds, A. V. Yates, W. J. Cottrell, W. L. Rigg, and K. Buehmann.

Inspection—C. H. Buskard, M. J Lamplin, F. Gray, W. Mumby and J. K. Savage.

Relief Board—A. McCallum, 3 years; R. A. Elliott, 2 years; C. H. Buskard, 1 year.

Auditors—R. Hunter and H. F. Berry.

Mr. Elliott then tendered the thanks of the committee to the company for providing such a fine banquet. S. B. Wright, General Manager, replying, expressed his pleasure at being present He noted that very few accident forms had been passing through the office for the past few years. He followed the activities with much interest. As they were all aware, the first consideration was the avoiding of injury, but they must recognize in addition, the effect the accident has on the earning power of the injured man. No compensation is full in the strict sense of the word, besides which the injured is rendered more or less inefficient from the employer's point of view. Safety in practice saves a man money, retains his efficiency and saves money to his employer. He congratulated all on the interest they had shown in the matter and expressed his pleasure to St. John's ambulance classes of the year. H. W. Sabine, one of the guests of the evening, after tendering congratulations, extended the hope that the record in the coming year might be even bettered.

Dr. D. Thomson, in course of a cheery speech, referred to the reports given as revealing Safety-First, carried to the first notch.

Dr. H. Crawford, the company's doctor wished he could put into proper words his feelings over the accomplishments of the Safety Committee. Speaking of accidents, he said he could remember when treatment of injuries was part of the day's work. He had noticed that the solicitude of the fellow workmen at Deloro for the injured man was wonderful. Credit, he said, should also be given to tincture of iodine. Workmen have got so accustomed to it throughout the country that they want to apply it to everything.

The chairman then asked H. W. Shoemaker, of the Dorr Company to say a few words. This visiting gentleman confessed that it was his first close up of any safety work, but all were to be complimented on the activities of safety work.

Messrs. W. R. Reynolds and J. Hemphill having spoken briefly, the meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

BEAUTIFUL ELIZABETHAN HOME

THE CANADIAN HOMEMAKER
A series of weekly articles covering
PLANING . BUILDING . FINANCING
DECORATING . FURNISHING . GARDENING
copyright 1928

(Warren & McDonnell, Architects.)

Besides the charm of form and proportion illustrated by the perspective, that of color must be considered when appraising the artistic value of this beautiful Elizabethian home. Imagine the roof of variegated green shingles, dark greenish blue woodwork contrasting against warm yellow stucco walls, and the restful surface of the rough brick lower storey wall. It is an engaging combination.

Five main rooms and a profusion of closets, all of ample size and conveniently arranged are shown on the plans.

With the stucco on hollow tile or concrete block, the cost would vary between $7,000 and $8,000 according to locality.

Readers desiring further information regarding a house of this design should communicate with MacLean Builders' Guide, 345 Adelaide St. West, Toronto, Ont., who will see that it is supplied. When writing please mention design number 107. Copyright, 1928.

The Story with a Thousand Thrills

On the dressing table, not far from the murdered body of Margaret Odell, lay the jewel case. It was twisted out of shape by the terrific leverage that had been necessary to force it, and beside it lay a brass-handled poker.

Vance had glanced but casually at the different objects in the rooms, but when he came to the dressing table he paused abruptly. Taking out his monocle, he adjusted it carefully and leaned over the broken jewel case.

"This steel case," he said, "was never torn open by that wholly inadequate iron poker."

Heath nodded his head approvingly. "So you, too, noticed that, did you? . . . And you're dead right. That poker might have twisted the box a little but it never snapped the lock."

He turned to Inspector Moran.

"I say!" Vance commented. "Something devilish queer took place here last night."

"Oh, not so queer," Heath amended. "It was a thorough job, all right, but there's nothing mysterious about it."

Vance polished his monocle and put it away. "If you go to work on that basis, Sergeant," he returned carelessly, "I greatly fear you'll run aground on a reef. And may kind Heaven bring you safe to shore!"

And there you have the key to one of the most baffling murder mysteries in New York police history. THE "CANARY" MURDER CASE, by S. S. Van Dine, author of THE BENSON MURDER CASE, begins in The Examiner Monday, January 16. Watch for it. You'll want to read every thrilling chapter.

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

Because she did not want to live, Faith, during her intervals of consciousness that first morning in the hospital, stubbornly clamped her jaws and lips against the medicines which the nurse tried to give her. But she could not prevent the injection of medicine by hypodermic, nor the gradual reducing of her fever by ice cold sponge baths and ice caps.

"Your husband's coming, Mrs. Hathaway," Dr. King bent over her to say. "Your husband, Bob. Miss Sutton says you were calling for 'Bob' this morning. Bob's coming. Do you understand?"

She blared her eyes wide, staring at the ruddy face of the old doctor with unblinking frankness. Her lips stirred to whisper: "Stella Pringle. Stella Pringle is my name."

"No, no, Mrs. Hathaway," the old man insisted.

"I wouldn't advise trying to force her memory," another doctor interrupted in a quiet, deep voice. "Perhaps the sight of her husband will do the trick."

They left her alone at last, alone with the starchy rustle which marked Miss Sutton's efficient, otherwise noiseless activities. Bob was coming. Bob! The lips that had kissed Cherry yesterday would flinch now as they touched her fever-scorched flesh!

At last there came a knock on the door. The nurse rustled starchily to open it. Faith, lying very still with her eyes closed, caught the freshness of the air which Bob brought in with him.

"How is my wife?" she heard Bob's hoarse voice cracking with anxiety.

"There seems to be no change," Miss Sutton answered.

By a supreme effort of the will, Faith kept her eyes closed as Bob advanced awkwardly on tiptoe. The bed shook slightly as he knelt beside it and leaned forward to lay his cheek against hers. How cool and dear it felt! But slightly rough. He had not taken time to shave. Poor Bob! How frightened he must have been! He had searched for her all night, had not slept—

"Faith, darling, it's Bob! Your Bob. Look at me, honey."

It was fortunate for her fever-conceived and desperately adhered to plan that she had had plenty of warning of his approach. When she opened her eyes they stared at him blankly, without a trace of recognition. Then her eyelids fluttered shut, as if they were too tired to remain apart, as indeed eyelids fluttered shut, as if they were they were.

"Oh, my darling!" She was gathered into his arms, her head pillowed against his breast, and upon her upturned face she received the baptism of his tears. Poor Bob! She had never known him to cry before. Were they the tears of guilt and repentance? But she mustn't weaken now. She must have the courage to die, so that he and Cherry might be free to love each other without shame and to marry. If Bob knew that he had caused her death, he would put happiness forever behind him.

"Did she know you?" Miss Sutton asked from the doorway.

"No," Bob answered heavily, as he "I'd give anything in God's world to know what brought this on."

Lyrics of Life - By Douglas Malloch

AN EVEN BREAK

I'm not much given to askin' heaven
To spend all its time on me,
To smoothe my pillow, to calm the billow
Whenever I put to sea.
I do some prayin' and now-I-layin'
And askin' my-soul-to-take;
But joy I'll pay for, here's all I pray for:
Just gimme an even break.

The saints, I figger, have somethin' bigger
To tend to, than my affairs.
They must get dizzy, they're kept so busy
With various kinds of pray'rs.
Some folks want money, like bees hunt honey,
And never a care nor ache;
I ask no favors, no special flavors—
Just gimme an even break.

When I have trouble I'll just work double,
A little bit harder yet,
For I'm not given to botherin' heaven
With all of the bumps I get.
I'll bear the crosses, I'll take the losses
That ev'ryone else must take,
And all I say is, whatever the play is,
Just gimme an even break.

Mrs. Record was then called to the platform and Chief Comp. Mrs. Terrace presented her with a Foresters' Jewel as an appreciation of her work as treasurer for five years. Both Companions, taken by surprise, thanked the members for their gifts.

The evening concluded with refreshments served by the Social committee.

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

Sunday, January 15, 1928.

(Copyright, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Benefic aspects rule this day, according to astrology, which finds the planetary government favorable to most human high ambitions.

Under this sway the churches should benefit for the spiritual forces are supposed to be awakened.

The clergy is well directed but warning is given of serious doctrinal controversies that may sunder organizations.

There is a sign presaging the appearance of a true philosopher who will win many followers.

The seers declare that groups will assemble on the shore of the Pacific ocean for serious study and the promotion of better ideals of living.

From small beginnings worldwide movements are to develop, strong beginnings being indicated for this new year.

Again the stars indicate that attention will be focused on domestic matters and the home will be the subject of agitation for reforms in various clubs.

Hotels will flourish in the land, however, for they are subject to aspects read as encouraging to wholesale hospitality.

Under this sway gardens will be of special interest, it is foretold, for horticulture will become a widespread avocation.

Again the seers warn of the danger of heart failure and of overstrain in pursuing business or pleasure.

Nervous maladies of every sort also may be more than ever prevalent, because of the influence of malefic aspects.

All the seers agree that women will not be successful in any great degree in high political ambitions this year.

Persons whose birthdate it is may have rather a vexatious year, but it should be prosperous.

Children born on this day probably will be industrious and slow to recognize duplicity, but they should be always on guard and should be trained wisely.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

Folding fan ornamented with sequins and border of ostrich that falls longer at one side than the other.

(Copyright, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

When Miss Mary Patricia Tumulty, daughter of Joseph P. Tumulty, was married to Mr. Robert Cahill in Washington last month she carried with her to the altar a bouquet of lilies of the valley and orchids and a little fan—and the fan was noted with interest by guests who went expecting—as wedding guests do nowadays—some little innovation or other in the bride's ensemble. The fan incidentally was of rose point lace and, as I said, rather small.

Even now that rather smaller fans have come into favor there are some notable women to be seen with ostrich fans of enormous size. My attention was attracted the other evening to Mrs. Morris de Peyster, who carries a feather fan of perfectly enormous size. And when one of these really large ostrich fans is actually in action it is something that cannot be ignored.

A revival of interest in fans has been quite notable at the opera recently, and the newest sorts are of uncurled or willow ostrich of lovely colors. Some of these are seventy-two inches deep and apparently the deeper the better for they are used not so much for the purpose of providing ventilation as to furnish a splash of lovely fluttering color.

There are, to be sure, smaller ostrich fans—some of them quite small, though these are not the sort one sees so much at the opera. Quite small stick fans with rhinestone studded sticks are chosen for dancing by some women, and there are specially made bags of brocade with jeweled tops in which these fans are carried.

LUMBERMAN'S RHEUMATISM

Conquered by T-R-C's

Who would be more subject to Rheumatism than lumbermen who work in the dampness and raw chill of the backwoods? Charlie Henderson, Parry Sound District, had both Rheumatism and Neuritis. He was wild with pain until he heard of Templeton's Rheumatic Capsules:—"You've got the best rheumatic remedy in the world" (he writes). "I have suffered from Neuritis for three years. The pain in my arm has been so bad at times that I have had to lay off for days at a time.

"I heard of your medicine from a man who had been brought out of bed and put on his feet by it, after months of pain.

"I had hardly taken half a box before my pain left me and the rheumatism hasn't returned since. I boost for you every chance I get."

Mr. Henderson's case is just one of hundreds... people tormented almost to death by Rheumatism, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Neuritis and Lumbago... trying this or that medicine and obtaining no relief... receiving word about T-R-C's, then regaining good health through their use.

If Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Neuraglia, Neuritis, are taking all the fun out of your life, do as Charlie Henderson did... get your box of T-R-C's from the nearest druggist and begin taking them. The quicker the better. T-R-C's are harmless. They contain no habit-forming drugs. They go to the source of trouble,—give your system first-aid in throwing off the poisons which are directly responsible for all your misery. 60c and $1 at all druggists.

Questions and Answers.

Question—P. C. asks. "Is it safe to marry a person who has had consumption in the first stages and is now cured?"

Answer—One who has had tuberculosis can usually get perfectly well and there is no reason why she should not be married. A woman who has been tubercular must be sure she has completely recovered before she subjects herself to the ordeal of childbirth.

Question—A. L. asks. "What am I to do for a stubborn case of St. Vitus dance of ten years' standing? I am a young man in the twenties."

Answer—You should take a fruit juice fast for at least ten days which should be followed by a carefully planned diet in order to cure yourself of any tendency to nervousness. Also, take systematic exercises using only those exercises which require slow movements and where it is necessary to use increased strength each day.

Uncle Wiggily

To-day's Bedtime Story

By HOWARD R. GARIS

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE FROZEN TURNIP.

(Copyright, 1928, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Uncle Wiggily looked at the twitching, black nose of the Weasel popping up from a hole beneath the snow, and the rabbit gentleman began to feel sorry. He felt sorry for himself, not for the Weasel, for that sly, bad chap, was always trying to catch Mr. Longears.

Uncle Wiggily, as you remember, had brought home a cold icicle who wanted to get warm. But the fire in the hollow stump bungalow was too hot for the icicle which melted into a puddle of water and Baby Bunty stepped in the middle of it with her stocking feet and screamed.

Then the puddle of water, which had once been an icicle, begged to be frozen

"I'm nearly starved!" snarled the weasel.

again into its long, slim shape. So Uncle Wiggily soaked the water up in a sponge, and was carrying it outside to squeeze it out so the water could freeze into an icicle again when, all of a sudden, up popped the Weasel's nose.

"Are you—are you looking for me?" asked Uncle Wiggily as he saw the Weasel's head following his nose up out of the hole in the ground under the snow.

"Yes," snarled the Weasel, "I am looking for you."

"Dear me!" sadly sighed the rabbit gentleman. For a moment he had hoped the Weasel might be looking for some boiled onions or fried potatoes or something like that. But no such luck. That Weasel wanted rabbit ears and he was going to have them!

"I have been waiting for you to come out of your bungalow," went on the Weasel, "and, now that you are here, I shall have my supper."

"Yes, it is just about supper time," agreed Mr. Longears.

"And I'm nearly starved!" snarled the Weasel, looking hungrily at the rabbit. "I think I shall eat at once and not wait for company," he went on, creeping closer to Uncle Wiggily.

Just then the sponge full of water that had been melted from what had once been the icicle, spoke softly and said:

"Uncle Wiggily, why don't you play a trick on this chap?"

"What sort of a trick?" asked the rabbit.

"A cold, frozen sort of trick," went on the icicle water in the sponge. "I'll help you, for it was to do me a kindness that you came out of your bungalow. Squeeze me out and dribble me all over the Weasel," advised the sponge full of water. "It is so cold that it will not take a moment for me to freeze solid and then the Weasel will be inside a lump of ice. Go on—play that trick."

"I will!" whispered the bunny. The Weasel was creeping nearer and nearer to the rabbit, not having heard what the sponge said. Uncle Wiggily took the dripping wet sponge from the pail in which he was carrying it and waited for the hungry Weasel to get closer.

"What have you there?" asked the Bad Chap, seeing the sponge. "Don't think you can fool me, Mr. Longears. Once I fooled you and Baby Bunty by digging a hole trap and scattering pieces of carrot all around it. Baby Bunty went down in the hole and I nearly caught her. But you dug a hole so she could get out. But you aren't going to get away from me now! I've got you!"

"Oh, have you?" asked Uncle Wiggily. Quickly, just as the Bad Chap was about to spring on him, Mr. Longears held the sponge of water over the Weasel's back. The bunny squeezed it, though his paws were very cold. And no sooner had the icle water fallen on the Weasel, than it froze solid almost at once. And there the Weasel was, frozen fast in a coating of ice. It was just as if he were in a glass case. He could look out and Uncle Wiggily could look through, but the Weasel could not move nor could he bite.

"Ha! Ha!" laughed Mr. Longears. "I think I fooled you all right, Mr. Weasel. You will have to stay frozen inside that chunk of ice until warm weather comes again, meanwhile I'll say good-by and run home!" Which Uncle Wiggily did. But just as he was going to hop into his bungalow he heard a voice say,

"Oh, have pity on me and take me in where it's warm. Please!"

"Who are you?" asked the rabbit.

"I am a frozen turnip," was the answer. Uncle Wiggily looked around but he could see no one and he wondered who had spoken.

Sharkey-Heeney Battle 12 Rounds to a Draw

SHARKEY EARNS DRAW DECISION BY GOOD FINISH

Boston Battler Overcomes An Early Lead Gained By Heeney.

SHARKEY HAS GONE BACK.

Heeney Forces Going From Start to Finish—No Knockdowns Scored.

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, New York, Jan. 14.—Jack Sharkey and Tom Heeney, rival heavyweight title aspirants, fought to a slashing draw last night in a 12-round match that upset the "dope" and left experts as well as spectators sharply divided in opinion. Apparently believing that Heeney's bulldog aggressiveness had given him the edge, the crowd of 17,000 onlookers set up a chorus of boos and jeers after the decision but the critics' gallery at the ringside gave a majority opinion in favor of the Boston sailor.

It was a close fight from start to finish but a shock to the critics who had installed Sharkey a heavy favorite as well as a disappointment to those expecting the bout to develop an outstanding contender for Gene Tunney's crown.

Sharkey gained the draw by a fighting comeback in the last few rounds, after Heeney had piled up a substantial early margin on points, but the now "Silent Sailor" was far from the cool, confident and ruthlessly efficient fighting machine of a year ago. Whether the knockout he sustained at the hands of Jack Dempsey has left its mark in weakened stamina and confidence, or whether his six months' lay off was responsible for poor timing and slowness afoot, Sharkey was considerably below his expected form.

Heeney Sets the Pace.

Heeney, battling with bulldog grit and ferocity, forced the going from start to finish, working inside Sharkey's defence to punish the sailor about the mid-area that withstood such a pummeling from Dempsey last July. Short-arm left hooks and right uppercuts were the best weapons of the chunky New Zealander as he tore in with a two-fisted attack.

From the third through the seventh round, Heeney kept plugging away with telling effect. He cuffed, wrestled and harried his taller, slightly heavier and more experienced opponent. In close, Heeney was at his best while on one occasion, in the fifth round, he landed a vicious right hander that sent Sharkey flying back to the ropes. This was one of the sharpest blows of the entire fight and the only one that came close to accounting for a knockdown. Sharkey went to his knees in the tenth round but it was from the force of a partly missed right-hander to Heeney's head.

Rally Helps Sharkey

Heeney unable to keep up his gruelling pace, was forced back and made a target for sharp right crosses and stiff lefts to the body in the closing five rounds. Sharkey still found difficulty locating his mark at times and he was slow afoot, but he outboxed the Anzac and landed the sharper blows.

Heeney, always willing to mix and seeking close quarters constantly, found Sharkey's chin more difficult to reach as the fight wore on. Likewise he was often tied up in a few bow knots by the sailor as they clinched. But few times was either boxer able to sustain much of an advantage. It was nip and tuck in most of the rounds.

The official vote of the two judges and referee, Jack Denning, will not be disclosed until todal, but expert opinion was at wide variance last night. Most of the critics appeared to give Sharkey a slight edge, but few registered more than seven rounds in his favor, while others scored an edge for Heeney.

If anything, it was a moral victory for the New Zealander, who from a crude and little-known fighter a year ago has developed into one of the most formidable heavyweights on the list. Heeney, too, was on the short end of the betting, which was reported at the ringside to be 2 to 1 in Sharkey's favor before the bout.

OSHAWA HERE MONDAY NIGHT

Shamrocks Have Last Year's Team Intact—Petes Expect To Win.

FAST GAME ASSURED.

Oshawa Shamrocks last year's O.H.A. semi-finalists, will make their debut on Brock street ice on Monday night when they meet Lew LeBarr's Juniors. Oshawa is a real fast team. The team of last year has been practically held intact and a fine brand of hockey is assured the fans, who have been given a week's rest on account of soft ice. The Petes went down fighting in Oshawa when the Shamrocks won three goals to 0 but the first fifty three minutes of play saw no goals scored, and a splendid exhibition of hockey such as only junior teams can play. The Petes have to win the game to stay in the running and after Monday night's game they are sure they will be out of the cellar position and will have lowered the Shamrocks' colors for the first time this season.

The game will start at 8.15 and Walter Edgar of Bowmanville has been assigned the bell.

Wins on Points From Ludwig Hayman

BERLIN, Jan. 14 (Canadian Press).—Bud Gorman, heavyweight pugilist of Wisconsin, won on points from the German, Ludwig Hayman, in a ten-round contest last night.

The fight was an exciting one, both men taking terrific punishment. In the fourth round, Hayman warmed up a bit and had the better of the next two. Then Gorman went to the front, and did most of the fighting in the concluding four rounds. The referee's decision, giving the fight to Gorman, drew protests from some of the crowd.

LOUGHRAN HAS NEW CONTRACT

Signs Pact With Manager Joe Smith For Five Years.

GOING ABROAD.

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 14. — Contracts between managers and fighters mean nothing to Tommy Loughran, light heavyweight champion of the world, and Joe Smith his manager. Sometime in the dim past Tommy and Joe signed a contract and then forgot about it; it was not until Smith wanted to do business with Tex Rickard after Loughran's defeat of Leo Lomski in Madison Square Garden last week that it was brought to their attention that their old contract had long since expired.

The New York Boxing Commission insisted that a contract must be on file so the champion and his manager signed another, this one for five years.

Loughran sails for the Carribean Sea, Jan. 24, and will be gone about a month. Upon his return, Smith said to-day he may accept a proposed bout with Johnny Risko in Cleveland and that he would stand ready at any time to defend his title against any opponent Rickard selects.

BRUINS LEADING AMERICAN GROUP

Tied With Rangers in Game at New York—One Point Lead.

TORONTO, Jan. 14.—Boston Bruins are to-day leaders of the National Hockey League's American group. Their lead is very precarious, however, consisting of a single point margin over both Rangers and Detroit. The Bruins and Rangers deadlocked at New York Thursday night, 2-2. Detroit might have taken the leadership if they had not been defeated on their own ice by Toronto Maple Leafs, 2-1. This game put the Leafs out of an unwanted deadlock with Americans for the cellar position in the other group. In the third league fixture of the night Pittsburgh won at home from Chicago, 2-0, thrusting the Hawks still further down at the bottom of the heap.

Hockey was fast and a little rough as the Rangers and Bruins battled for leadership. Thirteen thousand spectators saw the Bruins in the last half of the last period secure the two counters necessary to nullify the two secured by New York earlier in the game. They were secured in a savage attack in which Shore and Oliver scored, both aided by team-mates.

The Leafs at Detroit had a slight edge on the Cougars, but were themselves not any too good, being still unable to put over perfect combination plays. They persistently hunted for openings, however, and the goals secured by Danny Cox and Bill Carson were sufficient to give them victory. Frank Foyston, in his first major league game of the season saved Detroit from being whitewashed.

The Chicako Hawks were still in their slump when they battled the climbing Pirates at Pittsburgh. Bert McCaffrey, Pirate defense man, aided Darragh to secure the first goal and himself scored the second and only other goal of the night.

Martin Lauder Loaned To Providence Club

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 14. Canadian Press. — Martin Lauder, a young centre ice player with the Boston Bruins has been loaned to the Providence Club of the Canadian - American League, Manager G. Art Ross, of the Bruins said yesterday. Lauder recently returned to the Boston line-up after an absence of several weeks due to an operation, and showed to such good advantage against the Chicago Black Hawks here on Tuesday that Manager Ross decided to farm him out for experience rather than hold him on the Bruin bench. Lauder will report to the Bruins again next fall.

A lively shakeup in the affairs of the A.A.U. of Canada is looked for when the Dominion organization meets in annual convention at Edmonton early in December.

Would Link Amateurs With Professionals To Encourage Growth of New Organization

NEW YORK, N.Y., Jan. 14 (Canadian Press).—The United States Lawn Tennis Association is prepared to extend the olive branch to professional elements of the game and encourage the growth of the newly-organized professional lawn tennis association.

This was disclosed yesterday in announcement of resolutions proposed by the amateur rule committee for the adoption at the annual meeting of the U.S.L.T.A. in Chicago, February 11.

Citing the purposes of the professional organization and its close contact with younger players through tennis instructions, the U.S.L.T.A. proposes this definition of its policy:

"That it is the sense of the U.S.L.T.A. that the game of lawn tennis will be benefitted and the influence of professional players with the younger amateurs will be bettered by the development and improvement of standards of instruction and play among the professionals and by the maintenance on the part of a high standard of ethics, conduct and sportsmanship, and that the U.S.L.T.A. to accomplish these ends, should foster and encourage the continuance and growth of the professional lawn tennis association of the United States, along sound and constructive lines."

This represents a sharp reversal in the attitude of the U.S.L.T.A., which has refused to have any connection with the professional game since it was pushed into the limelight by C. C. Pyle's travelling troupes, attracting such stars from amateur ranks as Suzanne Lenglen, Mary K. Browne, Vincent Richards and Howard Kinsey. Richards and Kinsey are members of the new professional organization.

If the proposal for harmony is approved, the amateur and professional governing bodies of tennis will enjoy working relations similar to those prevailing among the ruling groups of golf.

INSIDE SPORTIN' DOPE

By A WISE CRACKER

Mister Sporting Editor:

Well, Mac, I'm glad to report that our hockey teams is improving. They ain't none of them lost a game this week, which you gotta admit is a lot better showing than last week when we played 6 and lost 6. Consistent, see I. And if some customer butts in to say that the reason they ain't lost none this week is because they ain't played none, well, all I gotta say is that bird don't want hockey news—he wants to start a argument.

Sat. the srs. bumped into the Varsity blues and was set back 10 to 0. Not so good, Mac, but take it from me the lads made a better showing than them Maple Leaves did against the Flying Frenchmen, as I call 'em, Sat. night. I was kinda sorry for Mister Irvin Bailey's sake to see them wild Canucks rubbing it in, but then every time I thought of the way Mister Connie Smythe's Varsity team showed no pity on the Petes 2 years ago when the lads was sick and burned out, I started rooting for another Canadien goal, knowing just how Mister Smythe was feeling sitting down there on the Leaves' bench and trying to look happy when the Frenchmen was making his team look like six cents worth of stale Hamburger rapped up in the Port Hope Times. The Canadiens is rare birds, Mister Sporting Editor. They play hockey like they like it, instead of it being all in the day's work, and it looked to me, Mac, as if you couldn't hardily stop them skating comets with a machine gun.

The mild spell has sure gummed up the works, although I gotta admit they was seasons when I was more anxious for good ice than this 1. But anyway we're hoping for enough of the frozen water to let the customers have a look at this Preston gang and the Kitchener Dutchmen and the Varsity stewedgents. The Petes promise to make things interesting for all of them birds at Brock st. rink, and they is particularly anxious to spear a defeat over Varsity when the college lads pay us a visit next Wed. night. Put that game down in your diary. It oughta to be a wow, and how!

Well, Mac, this Hornsby trade sure has the ball fans by the ears. It's got me up a tree for a fair, Mac, for the way I see it, swoping Mister Hornsby for a coupla unknown ball tossers would be just like the Canadiens swoping Mister Howie Morenz to the Lakefield intermediates for Misters John and Louie Sabatino. Mister McGraw says it's for the good of the Giants, so figgering that way New York should cop the National League flag sure if they was to trade Mister Jackson, Mister Terry and a few more of them birds.

Before I forget it, Mister Sporting Editor, I wanta extend my sympathy to the coal men. If them birds can't sell fuel in Jan., when the heck they going to sell it? I want to tell you, Mac, that if this thing keeps up somebody'll hafta to start a Society for the Sustenance of Suffering Coal Men. I'll head the list with a coal scuttle in fairly good shape and a snow shovel.

Well, old dear, you'll be glad to know I'm through.

Sportfully yours,

A. WISE CRACKER.

WILL REMAIN WITH LEAFS

Nothing in Report That Fisher Will Be Sold to Yankees.

PLAYERS FOR ROCHESTER.

TORONTO, Jan. 14.—"Clarence Fisher will be with the Leafs and nowhere else as far as I know next season," commented Manager Bill O'Hara of the Leafs when asked if their was anything in the story that the submarine slinger was wanted by the Yankees. Ed. Barrow, business manager of the New York club, never mentioned Fisher's name when he was here recently, according to the local pilot. Prudhomme was the pitcher he was after and when he discovered that he couldn't get the youngster he talked everything but baseball. Incidentally Prudhomme has been heard from. He wants to remain in Toronto and writes that he will consider it an unkind act if he is traded for a "bird dog" or anything like that.

O'Hara believes that there is something in the wind from a Syracuse point of view. He would not be surprised if the St. Louis club transferred its affections along with the players who represented Syracuse in the International League next season to Rochester. But whether the latter club's holdings will be taken over by Syracuse people or dumped into Jersey City or Providence as suggested he wouldn't commit himself.

Reports from Syracuse art to the effect that the Donnelly Brothers of Jersey City who sold out last fall to George Stallings are prepared to buy the Syracuse franchise with the idea of locating the club in Providence. This means that there will be no International league baseball in the Saline City next summer.

A special meeting of the International league will be held in New York on Monday to consider the matter. It's a mixed up situation at the best.

THE HAND OF THE MURDERER

PHILO VANCE said to Markham: "Invite those three men to your apartment to-night to play poker. After the game I hope to be able to tell you which of the three murdered Margaret Odell. . . ."

The murderer, Vance knew, was a superb gambler, the sort of man who would risk everything if the stakes were high enough.

To tell what happened at that game would be to tell too soon one of the most thrillingly interesting episodes in THE "CANARY" MURDER CASE. But when the five cards pictured here forced four aces to drop, Vance knew that the man who held them was Margaret Odell's murderer.

Be sure to read about it in THE "CANARY" MURDER CASE. It is the greatest mystery story in years. It starts Monday, January 16, in The Examiner.

"7TH HEAVEN" IS ACCLAIMED BY CRITICS AS ONE OF THE GREATEST SCREEN DRAMAS

"7th Heaven" has been brought to the screen and will be shown for the first time in Peterborough at the Capitol Theatre on Monday.

This picture, based on the play by Austin Strong, is said by all critics to be one of the finest productions of any type ever screened. Taken from every angle it is perfection, and more than that it has lost none of the appeal or beauty of the original play.

The atmosphere of the Paris Montmartre, where the plot of the story is laid, is accurately carried out in the settings and the photographic effects. The story follows the play itself, but bringing into actual view those things that could only be talked about in the play, thereby heightening the interest and adding greatly to the entertaining value of the picture.

The characterisations of the players are said to be inspired, particularly that of Janet Gaynor, who appears as the winsome, frightened and finally glorified "Diane," and Charles Farrell, who is the handsome, egotistical, generous, and thoroughly lovable "Chico."

"7th Heaven" is the story of two of the lowest types of Parisians, a worker in the sewers of Paris and a waif of the Paris streets. But because of the glorious doctrine of courage which it preaches and the marvellous things it does to both of their characters it has been called one of the greatest and one of the most beautiful love stories ever written. The play created a sensation when produced for a record run on Broadway, and the picture is surpassing the reputation established by the play.

Besides the two principals the cast includes Ben Bard, David Butler, Albert Gran, Gladys Brockwell, George Stone, Emile Chautard, Marie Mosquini, and Brandon Hurst.

Frank Borzage directed the production.

AT THE REGENT.

"AFTER MIDNIGHT" A TRUE-TO-LIFE STORY

It is only on rare occasions that motion pictures succeed in telling a story of life without all the distracting furbelows to draw our attention from the theme of the tale.

"After Midnight," a Metro-Goldwyn Mayer production, starring Norma Shearer, coming Monday to the Regent Theatre, has succeeded in shaking off the great mass of detail and glitter that goes with the usual motion picture.

It has gotten down to the bare facts of things which happen in the life of a young girl. It proves beyond a doubt that a human being's greatest enemy is life itself. There is no physical villain awaiting favorable opportunity to pounce upon an innocent girl.

Miss Shearer, as a cigarette girl in a New York night club, conclusively proves that even such environment cannot damage her character in the least — as long as she wills otherwise. She proves that environment has nothing to do with whether a girl is a lady. By the dignity of her character she conducts herself in such a manner that no habitue of night clubs even thinks of attempting familiarity. Yet she has a smile for everybody.

The very simplicity of the story makes it a gem that will not soon be forgotten by picture-goers and gives Norma Shearer a chance to prove that she does not need elegance of wardrobe to prove her acting ability.

MOST VALUABLE ROOKIES OF 1927

BY BILLY EVANS

Whom do you regard as the two most valuable first year players in the majors for 1927?

Since the close of the season, a great many fans have asked me that question. Going back over the 22 years I have spent in the majors, such a query would ordinarily prove a rather tough one, yet I doubt if the question of the two outstanding first year youngsters was ever more clearly defined than last season.

I have no hesitancy in saying the most valuable youngster in the National League was Lloyd Waner, of the Pittsburgh Pirates. Pitcher Wilcy Moore of the Yankees assumed a similar role in the American League.

It is a rather strange coincidence that these two players, the outstanding stars of the majors, should graduate into fast company from the same minor league.

During 1926, Lloyd Waner started with the Columbia team of the South Atlantic League. Waner batted .345 for the season, right up among the leaders. To me the most remarkable thing about his play was the fact that he enjoyed a great year although a member of a hopeless tailender.

Columbia finished last with a percentage of .274, practically 400 points from the champions and 200 points below the mark of the club that finished seventh in the race.

The above figures will give you some idea of what a bad team Waner played on and what a handicap he worked under. It takes a real player, one who loves the game, to keep stepping at top speed when his team isn't going anywhere.

Waner, joining the Pirates in 1927, and getting a chance to play regularly after "Kiki" Cuyler jumped over the traces, continued to deliver the same kind of a game in the majors in his first year as had featured his debut in the minors. He was an important cog in the winning of the pennant by Pittsburgh.

He took part in 150 games and established the wonderful batting record of .354 in 629 times at bat.

Pitcher Wilcey Moore of New York was even more prominent in the winning of the pennant by the Yanks than was Lloyd Waner in Pittsburgh's triumph.

In his first year in the majors, Moore swept aside all tradition that clung to first year pitchers and turned in 19 victories while losing only seven ball games. It is conservative to say that he saved a dozen more. Thus Wilcey Moore, in his first year, did something that only a few pitchers accomplish over their entire career—made possible the winning of 30 ball games for his team.

While Waner was struggling hopelessly with the tail-end Columbia team during the 1926 season, his work being the only redeeming feature of the club's play, Wilcey Moore was pitching the Greenville team to a pennant in the same league. All Moore did was to win 30 games while losing only four, for a mark of .882.

Major league baseball offers nothing that parallels the careers of Lloyd Waner and Wilcey Moore in their first year in the big show. Few players are fortunate enough to meet with the success that greeted these two athletes in their first season out of the minors.

Unquestionably, Wilcey Moore and Lloyd Waner were outstanding in their first year in big leagues. There are many experts who doubt if these two players will be able to maintain the high standard set during the past season.

Another unusual feature in connection with these two phenoms is, despite the fact that last season was the first chance either has had to show his stuff in the majors, Moore is about 10 years older than Waner.

GEORGE STREET UNITED CHURCH

The Rev. Wm. McDonald, of Knox United Church, occupied the pulpit of George Street Church on Sunday morning and delivered a very eloquent and thoughtful discourse, taking as his text, Isaiah, 35th chapter, 8, 9, 10th verses. His theme was "The Highway of Holiness." Mr. McDonald said, "It is well for us as a people to take a message from these ancient prophets and see their vision which was afterwards fulfilled in Jesus Christ.

"This Book of Isaiah, which is really a poem, must not be taken too literally, but it presents a picture, in time of great need, when the Israelites, exiled from their homeland and oppressed as slaves, cried out for liberty. They thought God was displeased with them for their sins and were in despair in this foreign land. They were in poverty of Hope when Isaiah came as the messenger of hope, bringing songs of joy and gladness, and hope of return to their native land.

"We need not concern ourselves as to whether these ancient people realized the full meaning of the poem, but we know it strengthened and encouraged them. Isaiah gave a picture of angelic truth.

"We are strangers and pilgrims in this land looking forward to our heavenly land where we shall see God for ever.

"This message of Isaiah, 'a highway of holiness,' is a message for all ages, which will establish us on our way until we end our days in Zion.

"In ancient days the highways stretched across the vast desert and anyone making the journey was in great danger from sickness, accident, adventure. The way was long, wearisome, hot, dusty and beset with dangers from wild beasts, and brigands.

"The modern highways are prepared, broadened, straightened. There are camps and resting places, and modern vehicles come and go constantly, and people can come and go as they please. But here Isaiah speaks of a Highway of Holiness, and God says, 'Whosoever will may come' and these are all the necessary helps on the way.

"We pause at the name of this highway—Holiness. We think of those who have halos around their heads, of saints, of persons separated unto the life of the Lord, but any good man or woman who has heard the name of the Lord and is willing to follow him may enter this Highway of Holiness if he knows and trusts God. Go to Jesus for teaching. He says, 'I am the way.' 'This is the way of Life.' 'The holy highway,' stretching across the desert to the end of life.

"Now that we have decided on the highway, let us consider some of the markings. We are accustomed to this on our journeys—

"Plain way—so plain that simple people need not err.

"Secure way—It is safe, protected. The laws of the land try to protect us as much as possible. If on the highway of holiness we are safeguarded from temptations.

"Happy way—People nowadays are in quest of happiness. How many are happy who do not know and follow Jesus Christ? The Christian way of life is a way of happiness and singing.

"Do you feel today that you are travelling on this Highway of Holiness? Do you think it the best way? The Glory way? The holy way? The Christian way? Will you say, I'm in the way of holiness, symbolized as Heaven the end of the journey. There are rest houses by the way, churches, homes, companionship with Jesus, and at the end of the journey the ransomed shall return to God."

At the evening service the pastor, Rev. J. E. Todd, took as his subject, "Alibis," reading the 14th chapter of St. Luke, beginning at the 16th verse:

"This incident in the life of our Lord shows that He knows men so well. He depicts a feast, and for some reason these people do not want to go. Perhaps they think it would be impolite to say they did not want to go, so an excuse must be framed—an alibi. The difference between an alibi and a reason is that an alibi conceals facts, but gives an excuse. Their excuses are:

"I have bought a piece of ground;
"I have bought five yoke of oxen.

"I have married a wife.

"In modern life we have similar excuses:

"People not on the same social level, and we make excuses.

"If we fail in games or sporting contests we have an alibi.

"In business deals—when we did not exactly play fair we excused ourselves.

"Violent temper—When people lose their temper they make excuses, blaming some great provocation.

"Things that we do that we ought not to do, and things that we should do that we fail to do and we make excuses.

"These alibis or excuses are confessions of failure and we are trying to let ourselves down easily, but we do not fool any one much, but ourselves. So many people today make excuse for failure to go to church. They say they used to be Sunday school teachers, but now have so much work to do at home, have a cold, a headache, called out of town, and cannot get time to go to church or Sunday school.

"Be honest with yourselves my people, and with God.

"Men who do not pray, what is your alibi? It's the only part of your nature that reaches out unto the divine.

"Listen! As a man I have one supreme duty in life, so has each one of us. Jesus Christ tells us 'Seek first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness.' If we are not doing this we are not playing the game. If we are not seeking the Kingdom we are refusing to face the facts of life fairly or squarely.

"It will be an epoch-making day when man takes stock of himself and then we will understand the meaning of the publican when he said, 'God, be merciful to me, a sinner'."

FAMOUS LOVE ROMANCES — POCAHONTAS AND CAPTAIN JOHN SMITH (VI) — By Nicholas Afonsky

Nobody knows just what feeling mastered Pocahontas when she saw again the philandering hero of her girlhood. He called her, formally, Lady Rebecca. Because, he said, the King had commanded that she be treated as a princess. But when Pocahontas sorrowfully besought him to call her his child again, he gave in to her.

Smith did much to make her stay in England gay. Her portrait was painted, and she was present, with her stern old Indian guard, at the playing of Ben Jonson's Christmas masque. Smith took many courtiers with him to visit her, and they talked together of the days of her childhood in the new world.

After her meeting with Smith, the young Indian woman seemed to grow lonely for the land of her birth. She stood hour after hour by the window looking away westward over the sea. Her young husband, worried at her growing melancholy, tried to rouse her, and then made hurried plans for their return to Virginia.

At last the sailors came to announce that the ship was ready to sail, and the Rolfes went aboard. But while the boat lay at Gravesend she died, and she was buried there—leaving a husband, a small son through whom her blood descended to so many southern families, and a more or less devoted old friend, John Smith, to mourn her.

BASKETBALL GAMES START

Four Good Games Played in Ladies' League at Y.W.C.A.

NO BIG SCORES.

The Peterborough Ladies' Basketball League opened last evening at the Y.W. The first game of the evening was Westclox vs. Brintons, with a score of 12-3 for the Westclox. The game was much closer than the score indicates. The Brintons, who are nearly new to the game, gave a fine exhibition. Arthur McLeish handled this game. Line-up:

Westclox — L. Kingdon, I. Thirnbeck, B. Scott, J. McIllwain, K. Murphy, C. Downs, A. Gainey.

Brintons—F. Pavey, R. Agnew, M. Simpson, M. Montgomery, A. Montgomery, P. Parks, I. Firth, H. O'Toole.

The second game between 'Y' Elementary and Senior School Girls ended with a score of 16-4 for the Senior School Girls. This game was closely contested, but through very good passing the Senior School Girls eluded their checks and scored. Isobel Davidson, Mary Comstock, Eleanor Stacey, Voila Harvey and Jeannette Allin scored for the winners, and Lillian Groombridge scored the four points for 'Y' Elemetnary. Line-up:

Sr. School Girls—Isobel Davidson, Jeanette Allan, Mary Comstock, Elcanor Stacey, Evelyn Armstrong, Zelta Nixon, Viola Harvey.

'Y' Elementary— Sybil Ecobichon, Lillian Groombridge, Sheila Keown, Carrie Touchburn, Mary Lescales, Margaret LsRoan.

Charles McLeish handled this game.

The third game between Canadian Woollens and 'Y' Seniors was a close one, there being no score made by either side during the first half of the game. The checking was very good on both sides. Dorothy Graham made the first score with a free shot. The game ended 15.0 for the 'Y' Seniors. Irene Chambers, Dorothy Graham and Gertie Gimblett scored for the winners.

Line-up:

Can. Woollens — Myrtle Bradley, Loretta Bradley, Elda Bradley, Lilly Slaughter, Jessie Gregory.

'Y' Seniors—Dorothy Graham, Verda Graham, Irene Chambers, Hazel Jackson, Gertie Gimblett, Sophie Haggis.

Arthur McLeish handled this game.

The last game of the evening was very exciting, when the De Laval met the C.G.E. The teams seemed evenly balanced and the score see-sawed back and forth, the final score being 13-10 for the C.G.E. Edna Forrester and Rosamond McPherson scored for De Laval, Violet Langton, Mabel McLaren and Annie Logan scored for the winners. Line-up:

De Laval— Edna Forrester, Rosamond McPherson, Florence Giroux, Helen Carson, Helen Resco, Eva Outram.

C.G.E. — Dorothy Mortimer, Kay Taylor, Violet Langton, Mable McLaren, Mazie Nixon, Annie Burns.

Arthur McLeish handled this game. The games were all good to see and spectators' space was well filled. Games for next week will be announced later.

LEGION BRANCH TO HOLD SMOKER

Pension Matters Discussed in Meeting at Campbellford Armouries.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 14.—As it was the first meeting of the local branch of the Canadian Legion for the year, the first item of business on Thursday was the installation of the new officers. Practically the only change made was that of the secretary, where Comrade Ironsides succeeded Comrade Free. There were many cases of pensions to be submitted and several to be reported on. Also there was one new membership accepted. A motion was passed instructing the secretary to notify any new applicants regarding the result of their application. This was considered a more business like method than had formerly been employed. The financial statement was accepted along with the report of the auditors. Since the auditors worked gratuitously they were tendered the thanks and appreciation of the branch.

Most of the correspondence dealt with the matter of pensions. The first communication to be read referred to the case of J. J. Willis and stated that his pension had been increased since November 1, 1927, and that the balance due him had been forwarded. Mr. Willis, through the medium of a comrade, expressed his appreciation of the efforts which the Legion had put forward in his behalf.

The case of W. J. Cole was referred to in the next communication. Cole had been pensioned but his pension had been discontinued. The letter enclosed a form for further particulars and this form, Major Bygott explained, had been already filled out and returned to the proper authorities. George Hicks also wanted an increase in pension and had forwarded his pension number to allow the Legion to act in his behalf.

Two membership cards and buttons were enclosed from Ottawa for two new members and these were presented to them. W. G. Clarke's case is expected to be a more complicated case than is usually brought to the Legion since Clarke's service was with the Imperial forces.

A communication from the Dominion Command detailing the lines along which the Legion functions was received and placed on file in the club rooms for the inspection of any of the members at any time. All the papers and documents concerning the case of the late Thomas Iliffe had been sent, it was stated, with the exception of certificates for his South African service.

Comrade Morgan reported that two members were ill and thought the visiting committee should be advised.

Some previous mention of a supper for the club had been made, and the matter was discussed at some length. Finally a vote was taken to decide whether it would be a supper or a smoker with coffee and sandwiches served later in the evening. The feeling of the meeting was in favor of the smoker and the social committee was authorized to make the necessary arrangements and set the date. The name of J. S. Dickson was added to those already constituting the committee.

Asked by the president if he would act on the pension committee, N. A. MacColl graciously replied that he had been about to offer his services to the Legion and would be very pleased to assist in any capacity. This brought the business to the discussion of changing the meeting nights for the next three months in order to coincide with Comrade Johnston's shift. He is the resident of the armouries and gave excellent reasons why he wished to be at home on the nights when the meetings were held. He was more than ordinarily concerned for the safety of his family since there had been some carelessness shown by someone in the Legion rooms where furniture had been left dangerously near the fire. The result was that the meetings were changed to the first and third Thursdays of the month. Comrade Johnston expressed the sincere appreciation of himself and Mrs. Johnston for the considerate action of the branch.

There being no further business to transact, the meeting closed with the National Anthem.

GAINS WINNER OVER HUMBECK

TORONTO, Jan. 14. — As was forecasted last night's show at the Coliseum produced plenty of action with lots of slugging in fact heavy hitting predominated in all the bouts but the curtain raiser, and while three of the five clashes went to decisions two of them were stopped well inside the limit. The two Canadian champions who were on the card, Larry Gains and George Fifield, the heavy-weight and welterweight monarchs of the Dominion, won easily, with Fifield's victory being the more impressive, as he stopped Joe Mullaney of Boston, in the second round, while Gains went the full ten before getting the decision over Jack Humbeck, the Belgian champion Humbeck came with the reputation of being a dangerous man at all times, of continually boring in and of packing a dangerous left, and for a change advance notices were correct, but Gains was too clever for him and the local lad evened up for the defeat he sustained at the hands of Humbeck in Antwerp several years ago. The Canadian champion won by a good margin, but right up to the end the Belgian was dangerous, and in the final round he went after Gains and the winner was called upon to show all his defensive skill to keep Humbeck away. The summary for the ten rounds shows that Humbeck took the third, broke even in the fourth, eighth and tenth, and Gains took the other six.

WEDDING BELLS

EAGLESON—DAWSON

On Wednesday afternoon, January 11th, at Trinity United Church, Peterborough, the marriage took place of Marion Christina Dawson, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Dawson of South Monaghan, to James Edwin Eagleson, only son of Mr. and Mrs. George Eagleson of Millbrook. The Rev. D. Wren, pastor of the church officiated. The bride wore a rose biege georgette dress, with hat to match, blonde shoes and stockings, and a brown fox fur, the gift of the groom. The young couple were attended by Miss Eileen McCamus, cousin of the groom, and Mr. Herbert Dawson, brother of the bride. Following the ceremony a luncheon was served at the Empress Hotel, after which Mr. and Mrs. Eagleson left by the C.P.R. to visit Niagara Falls, N.Y., and other points. The bride travelled in a tan jersey cloth dress, seal coat with self collar, and gold colored hat. On their return they will reside on the Eagleson homestead, Cavan Township.

OBITUARY

MRS. WILLIAM HUME.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 14. — The funeral service of the late Mary Ethelwyn Govan, wife of William Hume, was held at two o'clock yesterday afternoon at her late residence, Booth street. The Rev. James Grier officiated at the service and he was assisted by the Rev. David Thompson, Hastings, and the Rev. D. A. MacKenzie, Burnbrae. Interment was made at Mount Pleasant cemetery, where the service was conducted by the same clergymen.

The late Mrs. Hume was the youngest daughter of one of the oldest families of the district, her forefathers having settled in Seymour West in the year 1831. From that time, the homestead has always been in the name of Govan and is known to-day as one of the leading stock farms of the district. Always an ardent church woman, Mrs. Hume had for years been identified with the various organizations of the Presbyterian church. For many years she had been teacher and superintendent of the primary and beginners' departments of St. Andrew's Sunday school. In the W.M.S. of the continuing Presbyterian church, she had held many offices, including that of president, which she had occupied since 1925. She was also first vice-president of the Peterborough Presbyterial W.M.S. Her connection with this society also placed her in the position of president of the Mission Band for several years. She had also been a member of the Ladies' Aid Society of the church.

In 1925, the late Mrs. Hume was an official delegate from the Campbellford church to the Presbyterian Conference held in St. Andrew's church, Toronto. Last year, she was a delegate to the provincial convention of the W.M.S., held in the city of Brockville. In these cases as in many others, the reports which she brought back to her home societies were complete to the most insignificant detail.

A member of the I.O.D.E. for several years, Mrs. Hume had held the office of secretary for the last year. She was also on the executive of the Seymour Agricultural Society, where she acted as a most efficient judge of fancy work and home cooking. In all these activities she will leave a vacancy which will not be easily or readily be filled.

As evidence of the high esteem in which the late Mrs. Hume was held, many of the merchants closed their places of business during the hours of the funeral service and allowed their staffs to attend. Those who were unable to do so, drew their blinds in token of respect to one of the most generous, kind and charitable women Campbellford has known.

Many beautiful floral tributes were placed to her memory by the family, Seymour Agricultural Society, Campbellford I.O.D.E., St. Andrew's church, Peterborough Presbyterial W.M.S., St. Andrew's Primary Class, Col. and Mrs. Ogilvie, Toronto, Miss Margaret Govan, Toronto; Miss Maude Dowsley, Toronto; Miss Annie Hume, Walkerville; Mrs. Bissonhette, Stirling; Mr. Alex. Hume and family and Miss Alice Hume; Rev. A. Govan and family, Williamstown, Ont.; the Armstrong family; Jack and Billy Thompson, Bloomfield; Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Archer; Miss Alta Robertson, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Rutherford; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Rannie; Mr. and Mrs. Roy Walker; Mr. and Mrs. Carl Johnson; Mr. M. Mahoney and Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Eidgood.

The late Mrs. Hume is survived by her husband, William, two sisters, Lillian and Agnes, woh reside on the old homestead, and three brothers, Andrew, Seymour West, John of Sault Ste. Marie, and Rev. A. Govan, of Williamstown, Ont.

The pallbearers were Messrs. F. W. Wood, J. R. Battisby, G. A. Hay, V. S., James C. Anderson, J. P Archer and William Cock.

Among those who came from out of town to attend the funeral were John Hume of Goderich, Mr. Fred Johnson, Hamilton, the Rev. A. Govan, Williamstown, John Govan, Sault Ste. Marie, and Miss Alice Hume of Stirling.

IN POLICE COURT

A local young man faced Magistrate Langley this morning charged with being intoxicated in a public place, but as he was not in shape to go on a plea of not guilty was entered and he was remanded until Tuesday with bail fixed at $100. In commenting on the sum of bail the prisoner said he thought it was a most exorbitant fine.

William Kelly was given two months on the hill on a charge of vagrancy.

In the county police court yesterday afternoon His Worship discharged the case against a farmer of Smith township, who was charged with stealing 20 bushels of wheat from the granary of a Smith farmer.

THE EXAMINER'S CONTEST BEING WELL RECEIVED

Is Already Creating a Great Deal of Interest in the City and District.

The Examiner circulation contest which was announced on Saturday has already created a great deal of interest which can be gathered from the large number of requests that have been received from persons both in and out of the city for extra charts on better grade of paper. The contest does not cost anything to enter, inasmuch as it only requires the getting of a new subscriber or the renewal of your own subscription, and in this case full value is given when the paper is renewed.

The purpose of the contest is to secure new subscribers and to have all present subscribers take care of all arrears so that our Audit Bureau of Circulation statement will be improved and in keeping with what our circulation in reality is. If you have overlooked the first announcement, watch for others, then write or call for extra contest sheets and take part in the first contest of any kind ever put on by The Examiner. There is a list of prizes amounting to $2,500.00. Win the contest and get the car you want. Fifty prizes in all.

HAS WIDE EXPERIENCE.

Mrs. Lt.-Commissioner Maxwell, of Toronto, will be in the city on Wednesday of this week to conduct another of the monthly series of women's meetings arranged by Mrs. Commandant Ham.

This will be Mrs. Maxwell's second visit to the city, she having been with her husband, Lt. Commissioner Maxwell, the Territorial Commander of the Salvation Army of Canada, in May of 1927.

The meeting will be open to all women and a large number is expected to be present on this occasion.

Mrs. Brigadier Bloss will accompany Mrs. Maxwell.

Looking Forward To Visit, Says Kellogg

HAVANA, Cuba, Jan. 16.—(Canadian Press.)—"I look forward to my visit to Canada," Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg told the Canadian Press last night. "I want to see your Parliament in action," he added, "and to renew acquaintance with the governor-general and Lady Willingdon and with Premier King."

The secretary of state for the United States is here to attend the opening ceremonies of the Pan-American Union to-morrow. He discussed with the Canadian Press correspondent the recent visit of distinguished Canadians to Washington.

Mr. Kellogg will return these visits early in February. He will spend several days in Ottawa.

TWO MEMBERS ARE DEPORTED

Following Commission of Inquiry Investigation Into Samoa Unrest.

DEMONSTRATION AT SAILING.

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, Jan. 16.—(Canadian Press Cable via Reuter's.)—A telegram from Apia, Samoa, states that the impending deportation of O. F. Nelson and A. G. Smyth from Samoa, arising from the recent investigation into Samoan unrest, led to a demonstration by 300 natives who came to Apia from Savali last Thursday. A few of the demonstrators carried shotguns which they discharged in the streets, but by the following morning their enthusiasm appeared to have died down and the deportees sailed from Apia without further incident.

The New Zealand Government, which holds mandatory powers over Samoa under the League of Nations, ordered an enquiry recently into alleged "unwarranted untruths and sensational concerning Samoa." Charges of "dictatorship" against Sir George Richardson, Administrator of Samoa and complaints of extravagance in public expenditure criticism of the policy in regard to the sale of intoxicating liquors both to the natives and the white people and the action of the Administration in regulating the sale of copra on behalf of native growers were brought by the Citizens' Committee of Samoa.

The Commission of Enquiry found that these charges were unfounded, and a sequel to the whole affair came when the Administrator served deportation orders upon Nelson, Smyth and Girr, who had been prominently identified, as members of the Citizens' Committee.

The Weather

There has been a decided change from the mild conditions of last week. Lowest last night 4 degrees below zero; highest yesterday 35 degrees. This cold dip will be short-lived. I have been told of a robin being seen at the corner of Park and Charlotte streets. The boys in some sections have already resurrected their marbles and in some places sheltered and sunny verandahs are pre-empted for a game of skill. On Saturday evening I heard the climate of our province shamefully slandered. Listening in over the radio I heard the announcer at Nashville Tenn., read this telegram from a small village near Orillia: "Program coming in fine; 40 below zero here!" No wonder the announcer said "Whew!"—W.P.

Week Without Fires Reported By Brigade

For the past week, Fire Chief Gimblett and his men have been enjoying a well-earned rest, not one call having come in. This information was not given boastfully and the men hope that mention of the fact will not provoke an outbreak of fires.

MRS. J. MILLS IS RE-ELECTED

Ladies' Auxiliary to Canadian Legion Holds Annual Meeting.

YEAR'S WORK REVIEWED.

The annual meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Canadian Legion was featured by election of officers for the ensuing year and by a supper which preceded the business session, and was attended by between thirty and forty of the members. Arrangements for supper were in charge of Mesdames Chambers, Devall and Little. Mrs. W. R. Morris spoe briefly, recalling the early days of the society, which was then known as the Auxiliary to the G.W.V.A., and was composed of a few ladies, the initial small organizations now having their successors in the two large societies; the Canadian Legion and the Ladies' Auxilitary.

Mrs. Morris also alluded to the splendid spirit of co-operation between the two societies of men and women and of the fine leadership afforded the former by Captain Abraham, who does so much in bringing to light many hidden cases of need, and who was particularly active in this way at Christmas time, carrying out the aims of the organization with energy and capability at all times.

Captain Abraham also spoke in glowing terms of the excellent service rendered by the Ladies' Auxiliary and of the splendid manner in which they responded to appeals for aid.

The president of the society, Mrs. J. Mills, wished the ladies a very happy and prosperous New Year.

The report of the secretary, Mrs. R. Bugg, was given, and was a very full review of the year's activities. Fifty-three members were enrolled and fifteen meetings were held. A special feature of the year's affairs was the presentation of the members to Lord and Lady Willingdon, and the invitation to be present at the reception to the Prince of Wales during the visit of the latter to the Toronto Exhibition. Three of the members, Mrs. W. R. Morris, Mrs. J. Mills, and Mrs. R. J. Devey, were members of the executive of the Provincial Command, from whom a letter was read, expressing thanks for the splendid reception given the delegates during the convention.

Mention was made of the donation by Mrs. J. Lillico of a container for use at the cenotaph, also to the possession of a charter on which names of the officers and nine others, especially chosen, were inscribed.

The various committees had been active this year, with convenors in Mrs. J. Black, visiting, and Mrs. E. Houghton, sewing. Mrs. W. Stanley donated a quilt for the bazaar, which netted the sum of $21.50, and the services of Mr. Waterman were also much appreciated on that occasion.

Reports were given by Mrs. Black and Mrs. Houghton and Mrs. Clarke, convenor of the social committee, also by Mrs. A. Paterson, treasurer, showing a good balance in the bank.

Mrs. Bugg thanked Mrs. Budd for taking her place as secretary during the former's absence, and thanks were also extended to Mrs. E. McKinstry, who acted for Mrs. Mills on several occasions.

Mrs. J. Porter then took the chair

ST. LAWRENCE PROBLEM HARD SAYS PREMIER

Tells Boards of Trade Delegation it Must Receive Close Consideration.

EARLY START URGED.

Ontario Representatives Stress Necessity of Retaining Control of Power for People.

OTTAWA, Jan. 16. Canadian Press. —The problem of the St. Lawrence waterway was the biggest which the Government of Canada would have to face for some years and there was every necessity for giving it the closest consideration before any step could be taken.

This was the comment of the Prime Minister to-day when a deputation representing the Associated Boards of Trade of Ontario met the Cabinet and presented a number of resolutions chief among which was one urging the government to proceed "without unnecessary delay to make appropriate arrangements for the early construction" of the waterway.

Another resolution "hoped that the great navigation and water potentialities of the St. Lawrence would be developed for the general service of the people." The latter resolution declared it to be the opinion of the repreesntative business men in Ontario that the "transference of any of the interests of the people of the Province of Ontario in the water-powers of the St. Lawrence to pass under the control of private or corporate interests, or public interests other than the Province of Ontario, on behalf of the municipalities, would be prejudicial to the best interests of the province."

G. C. Martin of Hamilton, president of the Associated Boards of Trade of Ontario, headed the delegation. In his introductory remarks he congratulated the government on the prosperity of the country, due, he declared, to the good government of Mr. King. A spirit of optimism prevailed throughout Canaad. The people were meeting their problems courageously and he continued to hope for future prosperity.

The deputation comprised Mr. Martin J. J. Duffus of Peterboro, Col. Graham, Belleville, Mr. Newman H. W. Snetsninger, Cornwall and General Mitchell, Mr. Burton J. A. Toty, S. B. Gundy and Thomas Marshall of Toronto. Mr. Hall is secretary of the association.

RATS AND MICE USUALLY CAUSE WEIRD SOUNDS

Ghost Hunter Believes That He Can Find Cause of Seymour Story.

HAS LAID MANY SPOOKS.

George Gaul Tells of Some "Haunted" Houses Whose Mysteries He Has Solved.

George Gaul, ghost hunter and spectre detective who has investigated hundreds of haunted houses in both Scotland and Canada, claims that he can go down to Seymour township and solve the Keating farm mystery. Mr. Gaul, who with his wife and family, is living on Elm street in this city, was interviewed by The Examiner to-day and told of many of the houses where he had sought ghosts and solved the mystery.

While he is not a believer in ghosts Mr. Gaul can tell many hair-raising stories that would firmly convince anyone that there were ghosts in these modern times.

Mr. Gaul came to Canada some 15 years ago from Scotland and since then he has investigated several mysteries in Western Canada. He spoke with a real Scottish accent and said he hoped to go to Campbellford in a day or so and investigate the mystery there.

"People never should go about such houses with cars for they will scare away the cause of the mysterious noises," said Mr. Gaul. "I always investigate at night and when I hear the tappings on the floor I get a short hollow pipe and hold it over the particular spot and listen very carefully."

"In one haunted house that I investigated, the same kind of tappings were heard as in Seymour township. After investigating with the hollow pipe a hole was dug in the wall and about two feet out from the stone work I found that a lady had been buried in a wooden box and it was the rats gnawing her bones that were causing the noise and the tappings.

"In another house that was supposed to be haunted Mr. Gaul found that 60 bats had made a home for themselves in the partition and at night they would make a noise when they were going and coming from their home.

In another house he found that the mice had a spool of thread and as they trailed this around between the partitions weird noises would be heard.

"People readily jump to conclusions that anything queer that they see afternight is a ghost or something from the mysterious world. A young married couple one night went to a store in the old country for groceries and while returning home they had to go by a cemetery. As they were passing the cemetery they saw two workmen busy digging a grave and they immediately became scared and threw their groceries into the ditch and ran to the home of the minister, where they told of seeing a ghost in the cemetery."

When asked how he accounted for the weird sounds in the Keating home he gave several reasons. "I think that either somebody is wanting to get the man out and hence is hiring someone to scare the people; or it might be that there are some bones below the floor and mice and rats are gnawing parts of the body and bones are rattling in the box.

In nearly every case that Mr. Gaul has investigated he has found that mice and rats have been the cause of the mystery.

LONDON, Ont. Jan. 16 (Canadian Press).—The striking printers of The Advertiser and Free Press composing room staffs today agreed to submit their cause to a conciliation board under the Department of Labor and perhaps with the Hon. There will be an evening edition of both papers today, sixteen pages, jointly published at The Free Press plant. Activity was commenced on a small scale at The Advertiser composing room today.

NOTED EDITOR DIES AT HOME

Frances Herbert Stead Succumbs at Blackheath, England, on Saturday.

NATIONAL WORKER.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—(Canadian Press.) — Francis Herbert Stead, noted editor and social worker, died at his home at Blackheath Saturday.

Francis Herbert Stead was the brother of William T. Stead, editor of the Review of Reviews, who was drowned when the steamship Titanic sank in mid-ocean after a collision with an iceberg in April, 1912.

Among William T. Stead's writings was one which caused a stir in the United States in the early 90's, "If Christ came to Chicago."

Francis Herbert Stead, born in 1857, was warden of the Robert Browning Settlement, Walworth, 1914 to 1921. He was assistant editor of the Review of Reviews and editor of the Independent and non-conformist. With others he was instrumental in initiating a series of conferences from which sprang the national committee on old age pensions in 1898.

GHOST DISAPPOINTS PEOPLE WHO VISIT HOUSE ON SUNDAY

Young Men Who Go Out at Night Change Minds About Stopping.

MANY THEORIES HELD.

Bear in Cellar or Oil or Gas Well Suspected By Less Superstitious.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 16. — The ghost which is supposed to be residing on the Keating farm about two miles north of Campbellford, has been somewhat of a disappointment to many people who have gone to inspect it. All day Sunday people have visited the farm in hopes of seeing this mysterious thing, but this ghost, like most inhabitants of the spirit world, prefers to appear at night. All its manifestations have been during the dark hours and particularly between two and three o'clock in the morning. Basing their hopes on this supposition, a party of young men ventured out to the farm about two o'clock in the morning, but decided to return without making exhaustive investigation. With their nerves on edge from merely thinking about the monstrosity, the sudden appearance of a white goose moving slowly and sedately toward them through the dead grass, the dismal howling of the wind, and a clothesline full of flapping white clothes, caused them to decide without a dissenting vote, to return to town immediately.

Certain people who have heard the stories which are going the rounds, are of the opinion that the ghost is nothing more than a bear that has chosen the cellar of the house for its winter quarters. This belief is based on the fact that the collie dog will not enter the cellar. Until a few weeks ago that was where the dog spent the nights. In fact it was almost impossible to keep him from doing so. There had been a broken pane of glass in one of the cellar windows and this had been the dog's means of entrance and exit. Wishing to stop the dog sleeping there and with the winter approaching, Keating replaced the broken pane. But the dog broke it and continued to sleep in his accustomed place. Now, though the pane is still missing and the dog is quite at liberty to enter at any time, he will not do so. If his master tries to force him inside, he struggles frantically and howls and whines pitifully.

Water Tainted.

Occasionally the water in the house becomes tainted to such an extent that it is impossible to use it for any purpose whatever. Apparently of its usual purity when pumped from the well, it turns an opaque brown after it has been inside for a time. This is not a regular occurrence. To drink it when this condition occurs is impossible, nor can it be used for cleansing purposes. The Keatings are at a loss to explain this phenomenon.

After being absent from their home for a few hours on one occasion, the family returned to find the house reeking with a most offensive odour. Asked to describe it, Keating said he could think of nothing more like it than the odor of burning flesh. When the question was asked him, Keating turned to a butcher who was present and asked him if he ever burned the refuse from a slaughter house. The butcher nodded and Keating said that the odor which had so filled his house was almost exactly the same, nor had the smell been all though the house at the same time. This was a rather remarkable thing since the house is old and the doors have a considerable air space at the bottom of them and are, as a rule, left open or partly so.

This odor, Keating said, had only appeared twice, the same number of times that the ghost had made itself manifest. On one occasion it had so filled certain rooms of the house that it had been impossible for a human being to breathe. It seemed to go deeper into the lungs at each breath, he said, and a man would not last long if he remained in the room. Had it appeared in the same rooms on each occasion, it would have been less mysterious, he said, but the second time the odor came, it filled the rooms which it had not occupied the first time. The rooms which had been filled the first time were not at all odoriferous on the second occasion. Each time it was the same strangling odor and on one occasion the family simply locked the house and went to town to stay with friends here. When they returned to the farm some hours later, there was not the slightest trace of the smell which had been the cause of their departure. This was rather difficult to understand since the doors had all been locked shut and the windows were not left open.

Rough Box Burned.

Inquiry from various sources have revealed a coincidence which may have some bearing on the case for those who are inclined to believe in spirits. About two years ago, a fatal accident occurred at a rock quarrie some miles distant from the farm. The body of the unfortunate workman was given Christian burial. But

HARDY'S ASHES BURIED TO-DAY

Many British Notables Attend Service in Westminster Abbey.

GREAT CROWD PRESENT.

LONDON, Jan. 16 (Canadian Press).—With modern religious simplicity, yet ancient pomp, the ashes of Thomas Hardy were laid at rest today beside the grave of Charles Dickens in the Poets' Corner, Westminster Abbey. The ceremony took place this afternoon and the great men of the political kingdom and the kingdom of letters gathered with a thousand others to pay their last tribute to the man who was a leader in the world of fiction.

A gathering of famous men such as has not been seen in many years surrounded the casket, when the bronze urn containing the ashes was lowered to the opening beneath the floor. Among the mourners were the Prime Minister, the Right Hon. Stanley Baldwin; the former Labor Premier, the Right Hon. Ramsay Macdonald; Rudyard Kipling, Sir James Barrie, George Bernard Shaw, John Galsworthy, Sir Edmund Gosse, Laurence Housman, and representatives of the King, the Prince of Wales, and the Duke of York.

The widow, heavily veiled, sat in the Poets' Corner for half an hour before the service began. Tears rolled down her cheeks while the service proceeded and when she accompanied the casket from the altar to the heart of the Poets' Corner. Great crowds waited outside the Abbey in the rain, unable to gain entrance.

At the conclusion of the services, "Lead, Kindly Light" was sung, and hundreds of those devoted to the great novelist marched slowly past the grave.

Honored in Wessex

DORCHESTER, England, Jan. 16 (Canadian Press).—While the great and famous assembled in Westminster Abbey to honor the memory of Thomas Hardy, his own countrymen of Wessex paid a simple tribute at the memorial services here today and at Stinsford village church. While the great men of Britain carried Hardy's ashes to their final resting place in the Abbey, the Vicar of the village carried his heart, encased in a bronze casket, to where it will repose in the grave of his first wife under a great yew tree.

Guard Rescue Crew Of Alleged Rum-Runner

WASHINGTON, D.C. Jan. 16. —(Canadian Press.)—Destruction of an alleged rum schooner, the Gaspe Fisherman, flying a British flag, and the rescue of the crew of eight off Nantucket Island was reported late Saturday by the coast guard to the treasury department.

The coast guard destroyer McCall, sighted the burning vessel earlier in the day and stood by until the crew took to a dory. After rescuing the men, the McCall fired several shots at the flaming derelict and sank her. The crew was taken to Boston and turned over to the immigration authorities.

The report, which was relayed to Washington by the coast guard destroyer Trippe, said the schooner's cargo was alcohol.

Conference Is Leading American Topic Of Discussion in France Since Lindbergh

PARIS, January 15 (Canadian Press). — The Pan-American Congress opening at Havana to-day is attracting greater attention in France than any of the five preceding ones, and is the leading American topic of discussion since Lindbergh.

That the Pan-American Union may be turned into a political organization, the establishment of a League of Nations for the Western Hemisphere, and that a general attack will be made on the present foreign policy of the United States, are some of the probable results advanced by Paris newspapers.

All papers print lengthy front page stories, the Temps particularly. This newspaper devotes two columns to an editorial discussing from all angles the possible effect of the conference. United States intervention in Nicaragua, the leading organs of the Left feel, cannot be kept out of the discussion at Havana. The attitude of Argentina and Chile toward the proposed resolution which will be proposed by the San Salvador delegation against intervention by any state into the affairs of another, is keenly watched by this group of publications.

"It is highly doubtful whether Latin-Americans will be content to spend six weeks at a congress discussing such momentous questions as the size of consular invoices," L'Oeuvre says in an ironical vein.

GEORGE DEIGNTON WAS WELL KNOWN IN OTTAWA

Toronto Slayer Had Been Connected With Police Force as Interpreter.

BEST OF CREDENTIALS.

Did Considerable Work With British War Office During Great War.

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 16 (Canadian Press).—George Deignton, held by the Toronto police, following the slaying of his four-year-old son and the attempted killing of his wife and another child, was a well-known figure in Ottawa, having been connected with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and also with the Ottawa police office. In both instances he was engaged entirely in interpretation work.

It is understood here that during Deignton's service with the Imperial forces in the Great War, he was engaged in considerable work for the British War Office owing to his ability as a linguist. His discharge papers from the army gave him the rank of "Captain," and it is said by Ottawans who were acquainted with him that he had been employed following the war on missions to Russia, France and other European countries.

During most of the time George Deignton spent in the capital after coming here in 1924 from Winnipeg, he was employed with the R.C.M.P., as a special interpretation officer. It is said that in Winnipeg he was engaged as a school teacher. His connection with Ottawa's civic police office was as an assistant to W. P. Lett, court clerk. He also gave private instruction in languages at his home, and a prominent Ottawa man who took lingual lessons from Deignton, last night described him as "a most wonderful teacher of languages."

Prepare Vault In Westminster Abbey For Receptian Of Ashes Of Thomas Hardy

LONDON, January 16 (Associated Press). — Westminster Abbey was echoing last night to the unwonted sounds of a dozen masons and other workers preparing by dim lamps, according to ancient custom, in secrecy, a narrow vault in the floor of the Poets' Corner for the reception of the ashes of Thomas Hardy. The body of the noted novelist was cremated yesterday afternoon at Woking with brief and simple ceremony.

Sir James M. Barrie and two intimate friends were the only witnesses, and they conveyed the urn with the ashes to London, where it reposed last night above the altar in St. Faith Chapel, opening off Poets' Corner. Here, lighted by candles, it will remain until to-day's ceremony.

A temporary platform is being erected around the vault. It will be covered with mauve, with white piping, to accommodate the mourners and clergy at the funeral when the urn will be deposited in the vault and covered with a stone bearing a simple inscription, and the great writer will sleep with the glorious company of his forebears.

There will be three simultaneous services on Monday afternoon —one at the Abbey, another at the interment of the novelist's heart at Stinsford, and a memorial service at St. Peter's, Dorchester, which will be attended by the Mayor and Corporation of Dorchester and other organizations and individuals who wish to pay tribute to the dead.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION COUNCIL HEARS FINE ADDRESSES ON WORK

Cavan and South Monaghan Sunday School Workers Meet.

DR. FLETCHER SPEAKS.

Officers Elected at Annual Meeting Held in Millbrook Church.

MILLBROOK, Jan. 16—The thirty-eighth annual convention of the Cavan and South Monaghan Religious Education Council was held in the United Church, Millbrook, on Thursday, January 12, the president, R. S. Staples, taking the chair at 1.45 p.m.

The opening worship period was in charge of the pastor, Rev. F. H. Howard, and the first address on "Making the Most of the Sunday School Hour," was given by W. Fred Fallis, Superintendent of the Sunday School.

Defining the aim of all Sunday School work as the winning of the boys and girls for the Master, Mr. Fallis developed his theme along three lines: (a) reverence, which is not always taught at home, the example of the teacher and of the officers having a decided influence from the opening hour of the school session; (b) Worship, the program used in the local school being outlined; (c) To teach the boys and girls the Bible, and this means preparation on the part of teachers and superintendent, often involving sacrifice of time and energy and the putting aside of the claims, for the time being, of other duties and demands.

Mr. Fallis stated he had only opened up the subject for discussion and among those speaking to the point were Rev. F. H. Howard who stressed the need of suiting the teaching to the scholars, and of a close, personal contact and understanding between teachers and scholars.

Rev. H. W. Foley emphasized the time limit and suggested a division of the sixty minutes—twenty minutes for the worship period, thirty minutes for marking class book, teaching and hearing verses, and ten minutes for literature and closing.

Rev Dr Fletcher

Rev. Dr. Fletcher, of Oshawa, used the question and answer method to make the most helpful use of the period assigned to him, and urged the need of up-to-date Sunday School rooms — "sometimes we put them underground and think it good enough for a Sunday School"—and noted also that plans along this line which were excellent a few years ago are being superceded by something better, "because all the time progress is being made and God is ever marching on."

"Fellowship is a feature of genuine worth when Sunday School workers meet together; 'Blessed are they that hunger,' and again the Master said, 'If any man thirst,' so if you have come here eager to receive help, you won't go home empty, but if you haven't any desire to be helped then you will go away with heart and mind unfilled.

"What's the problem back yonder where you live? What's the question you want to ask? 'I came that ye might have life, and that ye might have it to the full'; has your appetite been aroused and are you anxious for help from some other's experience during the year?"

Replying to the question, "How are we to hold young men in a Sunday School Class?" the speaker said he was working on that very problem in his own school, and while there are expedients such as a hockey club with regular attendance as the claim to be able to play, and he believed in catering to the social and athletic side under church auspices, yet of first importance is the teacher's obligation to make the lesson so full of meat that interest will hold them week by week. Try to fit the lessons into everyday life of the young men, and as soon as you possibly can, put some definite responsibility upon them, tie them up to some job that they will have to think about it during the week, and be there on Sunday to see that it is done."

Filling vacancies on the Sunday School staff was discussed, and the benefits of the Standard School for Leadership Training, which has just been successfully carried through at Oshawa with eleven schools participating, were strongly emphasized. "This study school idea is growing in the province with leaps and bounds; in rural schools you might find it more convenient to have an afternoon gathering. We met at 6.30 for supper and a happy fellowship together, then forty minutes in classes, followed by twenty minutes when we all came together for a worship period, and then a lecture session." Relating this to the week of prayer, the speaker explained a number came in for the worship period and remained for the final classes, but did not take in the teaching session.

Parents were urged to come for training as well as teachers because they need it to fulfill rightly their sacred obligations, and the Interdenominational Leadership Course (Standard) was recommended as being unsurpassed for such study classes.

Winning the parents who send their children to Sunday School but will not come themselves was defined as "a problem," and a number of suggestions, personal visits among others, were given as its solution. "When a boy feels manhood beginning to surge through his being, the devil and a careless father can defeat even the angels."

The careless and profane use of God's name was characterized as an outgrowth of the war, in its present day prevalence, prayer, personal example, and teaching from pulpit and platform being strongly recommended as antidotes.

The Nominating Committee, consisting of the pastor and superintendent of Sunday School from each circuit, was chosen, and Rev. J. O. Totten dismissed the afternoon session with the benediction.

Tea was served by the Boneka Bible Class in the basement, and the delegates enjoyed a social time together, gathering again in the church auditorium at 7.30 for an opening song service led by Rev. Mr. Totten. Rev. John Riddell, pastor of Grace Presbyterian Church, had charge of the devotional period.

Officers Installed.

Rev. Dr. Fletcher installed the officers elect, the list being: President, Mr. T. H. Aiken, Millbrook; Vice-President, W. J. Finney; Secretary-treasurer, Hubert Gardiner, Mount Pleasant; Superintendent Beginners' Department, Mrs. James Douglas, Cavanville; Superintendent Girls' Work, Miss Pearl Burnham, Millbrook; of Boys' Work, Rev. F. H. Howard, Millbrook; of the Young Peoples' Department, Mr. Fred Barnard, Bailieboro; of the Missionary Department, Miss Emma McIndoo, of Fairmount; of the Home Department, Mrs. Robert Hootan Fairmount; of the Temperance Department, Mr. R. Matchett, Cavan Centre; of the Adult Department, Mr. W. Seymour, Fairmount; of the Leadership Training Department, Rev. H. W. Foley Frazerville.

A duet, "Ever Near," by Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Johnston, was followed by a special appeal for subscriptions to meet all financial obligations, each school being asked to pledge five cents per enrolled member, as a membership fee in the townships' organization, R. S. Staples, the retiring president, taking this feature of the program. The amount pledged is to be paid within the next six months.

Rev. H. W. Foley addressed the convention on "Activity in Religious Education," developing the thought of "something to do as well as to think," and leading the workers to realize that thought, feeling, and action result in the building of character. "The problem in Sunday School work is not so much the child as the teacher, and behind her, or him, the parents. I am inclined to think we know our Scholars, and we must so learn the latter as to make our knowledge effective.

"Under wise guidance the natural instinct of the child for doing things has a subtle effect upon his religious development. The teacher co-operates with God in helping the little lives to have a foundation of faith in the Heavenly Father so firmly established that the years will never cause it to be undermined."

Rev. Dr. Fletcher had the closing address leading the convention to realize how close and interdependent is the relationship between home and school. "Your children need your children—we learn democracy that way. We are never going to get anywhere, however, so long as we regard the Sunday School as a 'penny job,' hesitating at the expense involved to bring our equipment up to date. Don't teach the little ones to sing "Hear the pennies dropping,' because the penny outlook may circumscribe their giving all their days. Until we progress from the penny idea to the dollar idea our work is scarcely done..

"We need teachers who are ready, and this comes from a training course fully covered and then worked out in practical experience. This may be done if you will pay the price, and present day opportunities for both parents and teachers are far beyond those of former years. Can Jesus Christ count on you to help Him finish the work He began so long ago?"

Rev. Mr. Foley dismissed the convention with the benediction.

ABANDON SEARCH FOR LOST AVIATORS

Warships Unable To Find Any Trace of New Zealand Fliers.

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, Jan. 16 (Canadian Press).—After scouring 24,000 miles of ocean trails, warships yesterday abandoned search for three aviators who set out from Sydney, N.S.W., last Tuesday for New Zealand.

The fliers were Captain Hood, Lieutenant Moncrieff, and Captain Knight. The warships were unable to find any trace of either the fliers or their machine.

Searching parties on land are continuing to look for the fliers. It is believed that they may have been forced to descend in the region of the Tararua Mountains.

GHOST DISAPPOINTS PEOPLE WHO VISIT

the rough box was of wood. Some time later relatives of the deceased desired to have the casket placed in a steel rough box and had the grave opened and the transfer made. The lumber from the original box was taken to the Keating farm and some of it was used for fuel. The story further relates how the ashes were placed in the cellar near the west wall of the building.

This may or may not have anything to do with the matter as it now stands, but certain it is that the hammering on the underside of the cellar floor, has its origin directly over this spot. From there it proceeds in a southeasterly direction to the east side of the house and returns along a similar, in fact almost identical route, to the cellar stairs. From there it sometimes proceeds through the rooms on the ground floor and ends with a terrific bang on about the fourth or fifth step of the stairs leading to the second floor. If it comes out of the cellar at all it does not return that evening. Only when it remains under the ground floor do the hammering sounds continue throughout the night.

Where the hammering begins and the spot where the ashes are supposed to have been deposited are on the west side of the cellar. This side is not excavated and the ground floor of the house is less than two feet from the earth. There is however a sort of shallow trench which leads from the excavated cellar to the middle of the west wall. Asked about this, Keating said that he had wondered if there could be anything there to cause the noises and had dug the shallow passageway for the purpose of investiagting. There he had found some "cinders" and after digging a little deeper had discovered some boards. These did not seem to signify anything to him so he ceased excavating.

Theories Advanced.

In the opinion of some people, there is someone trying to scare the Keating family into vacating the farm. Others claim that some animal is the cause of all the trouble. One old hunter says that it might be a bear since the dog will not go near the place. Another ventures an opinion that a rabbit might be responsible since, in spite of their smallness they are known to make quite a noise when they jump on to a floor from any height. But a rabbit would not go about pounding with a hammer on the underside of a floor. It is equally difficult to suppose that a bear would do so either, unless especially trained for that purpose. The theory has also been advanced that there is a gas load directly under the dwelling and that oil might probably be found there as well. This is no doubt put forward after considering the brownish tint in the water, but this may be discarded when it is remembered that the water changed color after it had been brought into the house. The gas did not have the odor of oil but that of burning or burned flesh.

In this day of modern science, ghosts are supposed to be a thing of the past. Few if any manage to baffle scientists who set out to make a scientific investigation. When interview the Keatings were anxious that some explanation be put forward that would suit every condition and, if possible, eliminate the, annoyance. At the present time they are living in only a part of the house and have even removed their furniture from the rooms which they are not occupying. Nor have they placed it in their present quarters. It is simply stored in the hall and one otherwise vacant room. Even the children are badly frightened. They do not expect that the spectre will again be visible till the first week in February. But they assert that not a night passes but that there are sounds under the floor, although their intensity varies at irregular intervals.

CHICAGO RESENTS CRIME REPUTATION

Without Foundation in Fact Says Report of Crime Commission.

CHICAGO, January 14 (Canadian Press).—The "malicious characterization" of Chicago as "the most crime ridden city in America," is without any foundation in fact, the Chicago Crime Commission said to-day in its annual report.

"During the last few months," said the report, prepared by Henry Chamberlain, operating director of the commission, "there has been more harmonious co-operation among the administration of criminal justice, than at any other time since the organization of the commission, ten years ago."

Between 25,000 and 30,000 persons in Great Britain benefit by an act which entitles blind wireless listeners who are properly registered to be excused payment of the annual license fee.

WORKMAN KILLED IN SHOOTING FRAY

Bystander Dangerously Wounded When Officers Seek To Arrest Armed Laborer.

CHICAGO, Jan. 16 (Canadian Press)—A workman paid with his life the penalty for carrying a pistol; two policemen, who sought to arrest him, were shot, and another worker dangerously wounded in a shooting affray at the Pullman Car Company's plant here Saturday.

Herman Hilliger, 39, collapsed with fatal wounds as he ran for shelter after opening fire on Patrick Devine, an officer. The wounds of Devine and Michael Shannon, his companion, were slight.

Tony Kalwalis, 46, a cabinet worker, passing through the car shop yards after Hilliger dropped, received a bullet in the head.

When the policemen emerged from the shops after Hilliger dropped, an angry mob of workers confronted them. The men, many of them shouting "Lynch them," advanced on the officers. Alex. Dluzak, a clerk, dashed among them, calling that the men were officers. The feeling subsided.

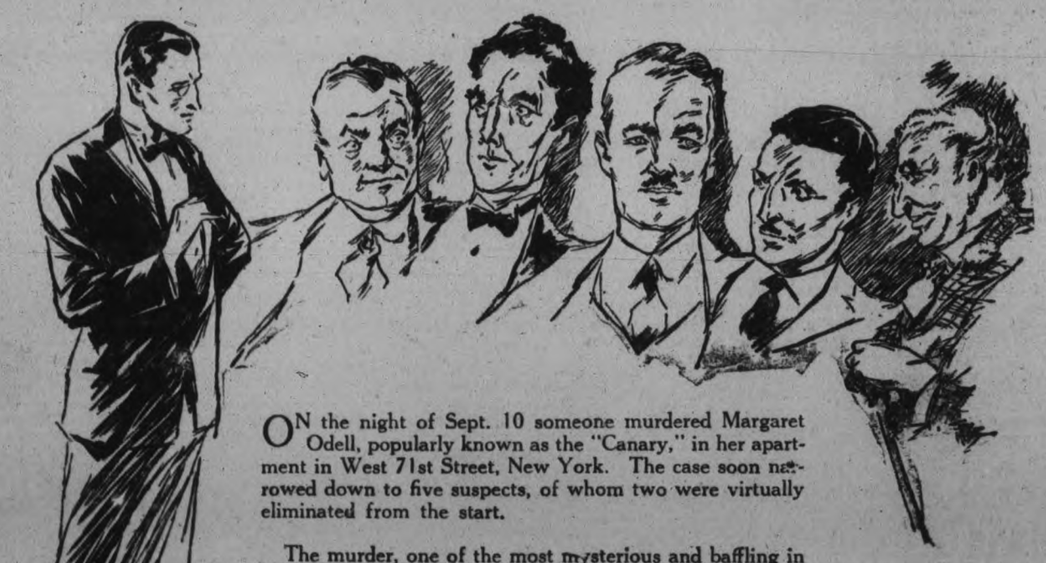
Which One Murdered Margaret Odell?



ON the night of Sept. 10 someone murdered Margaret Odell, popularly known as the "Canary," in her apartment in West 71st Street, New York. The case soon narrowed down to five suspects, of whom two were virtually eliminated from the start.

The murder, one of the most mysterious and baffling in New York police annals, finally was solved by Philo Vance, after the district attorney had thrown up his hands in despair. Here you see Vance looking over the suspects. From left to right, they are: the man-about-town, the doctor, the manufacturer, the crook, the importer.

Which one did it? Do you think that after reading the first few installments of THE "CANARY" MURDER CASE you can name the man who strangled Margaret Odell? If you can, you are a great deal cleverer than the average detective.

How did the murderer get in and out of the girl's apartment? What was the motive of the crime? How many people were in the apartment when the murder was committed? Why was the jewel case battered with a poker before being pried with a cold chisel? What did the finger prints on the table and door knob mean?

You will have to answer these questions before you can solve THE "CANARY" MURDER CASE. Be sure to read it, or you'll miss the biggest fiction treat in years. It begins to-day with a full page installment.

Mother's fondest wish for her Girl Baby

—That Schoolgirl Complexion

THE rule in skin care, under modern teachings, is the same in infancy as maturity—correct skin cleansing regularly with mild and gentle soap.

Priceless complexions are thus cultivated from the earliest days of childhood; natural loveliness invited and protected with nature's own proved way.

The only secret is to know what kind of soap to use. A true complexion soap must be chosen. Others often are too harsh.

Thus soothing Palmolive — a soap made for one purpose only, to be used freely and lavishly on the skin—is the ONE soap purchased for toilet use in thousands of homes where correct skin care is an object.

CHAPTER I

IN THE offices of the Homicide Bureau of the detective division of the New York police department there is a large steel filing cabinet; and within it, among thousands of others of its kind, there reposes a small green index-card on which is typed: ODELL, MARGARET. 184 West 71st Street. Sept. 10. Murder: Strangled about 11 p. m. Apartment ransacked. Jewelry stolen. Body found by Amy Gibson, maid.

Here, in a few commonplace words, is the bleak, unadorned statement of one of the most astonishing crimes in the police annals of this country—a crime so contradictory, so baffling, so ingenious, so unique, that for many days the best minds of the police department and the district attorney's office were completely at a loss as to even a method of approach. Each line of investigation only tended to prove that Margaret Odell could not possibly have been murdered. And yet, huddled on the great silken davenport in her living-room lay the girl's strangled body, giving the lie to so grotesque a conclusion.

The true story of this crime, as it eventually came to light after a disheartening period of utter darkness and confusion, revealed many strange and bizarre ramifications, many dark recesses of man's unexplored nature, and the uncanny subtlety of a human mind sharpened by desperate and tragic despair.

Margaret Odell was a product of the bohemian demimonde of Broadway—a scintillant figure who seemed somehow to typify the gaudy and spurious romance of transient gaiety. For nearly two years before her death she had been the most conspicuous and, in a sense, popular figure of the city's night life.

Her notoriety was due in part to certain legendary tales of her affairs with one or two obscure potentates in the backwashes of Europe. She had spent two years abroad after her first success in "The Bretonne Maid"—a popular musical comedy in which she had been mysteriously raised from obscurity to the rank of "star"—and one may cynically imagine her press-agent took full advantage of her absence to circulate vermilion tales of her conquests.

Her appearance went far toward sustaining her somewhat equivocal fame. There was no question that she was beautiful in a hard, slightly flamboyant way. I remember seeing her dancing one night at the Antlers Club—a famous rendezvous for post-midnight pleasure seekers, run by the notorious Red Raegan. She impressed me then as a girl of uncommon loveliness, despite the calculating predatory cast of her features. She was of medium height, slender, graceful in a leonine way, and, I thought, a trifle aloof and even haughty in manner—a result, perhaps, of her reputed association with European royalty. She had the traditional courtesan's full, red lips, and the wide, mongoose eyes of Rossetti's "Blessed Damozel." There was in her face that strange combination of sensual promise and spiritual renunciation with which the painters of all ages have sought to endow their conceptions of the Eternal Magdalene. Hers was the type of face, voluptuous and with a hint of mystery, which rules man's emotions and, by subjugating his mind, drives him to desperate deeds.

Margaret Odell had received the sobriquet of Canary as a result of a part she had played in an elaborate ballet of the "Follies," in which each girl had been gowned to represent a variety of bird. To her had fallen the role of canary; and her costume of white-and-yellow satin, together with her mass of shining golden hair and pink-and-white complexion, had distinguished her in the eyes of the spectators as a creature of outstanding charm. Before a fortnight had passed—so eulogistic were her press notices, and so unerringly did the audience single her out for applause—the "Bird Ballet" was changed to the "Canary Ballet," and Miss Odell was promoted to the rank of what might charitably be called premiere danseuse, at the same time having a solo waltz and a song* interpolated for the special display of her charms and talents.

She had quitted the "Follies" at the close of the season, and during her subsequent spectacular career in the haunts of Broadway's night life she had been popularly and familiarly called the Canary. Thus it happened that when her dead body was found, brutally strangled, in her apartment, the crime immediately became known, and was always thereafter referred to, as the Canary murder.

My own participation in the investigation of the Canary murder case—or rather my role of Boswellian spectator—constituted one of the most memorable experiences of my life. At the time of Margaret Odell's murder John F.-X. Markham was district attorney of New York, having taken office the preceding January. I need hardly remind you that during the four years of his incumbency he distinguished himself by his almost uncanny success as a criminal investigator. The praise which was constantly accorded him, however, was highly distasteful to him; for, being a man with a keen sense of honor, he instinctively shrank from accepting credit for achievements not wholly his own. The truth is that Markham played only a subsidiary part in the majority of his most famous criminal cases. The credit for their actual solution belonged to one of Markham's very close friends who refused, at the time, to permit the facts to be made public.

This man was a young social aristocrat, whom, for purposes of anonymity, I have chosen to call Philo Vance.

Vance had many amazing gifts and capabilities. He was an art collector in a small way, a fine amateur pianist, and a profound student of aesthetics and psychology. Although an American, he had largely been educated in Europe, and still retained a slight English accent and intonation. He had a liberal independent income, and spent considerable time fulfilling the social obligations which devolved on him as a result of family connections; but he was neither an idler nor a dilettante.

Vance was not yet thirty-five, and, in a cold, sculptural fashion, was impressively good looking. His face was slender and mobile; but there was a stern sardonic expression to his features which acted as a barrier between him and his fellows. He was not emotionless but his emotions were in the main intellectual.

I kept a fairly complete record of the cases in which Vance participated, little thinking that I would ever be privileged to make them public; but Markham, after being defeated, as you remember, on a hopelessly split ticket at the next election, withdrew from politics; and last year Vance went abroad to live, declaring he would never return to America. As a result I obtained permission from both of them to publish my notes in full. Vance stipulated only that I should not reveal his name; but otherwise no restrictions were placed upon me.

Did you ever enquire about the saving in a yearly subscription? Paying by the week The Examiner costs $7.80 a year. A city subscription paid at The Examiner office costs $6—and the newspaper is delivered to your home just the same.

I have related elsewhere the peculiar circumstances which led to Vance's participation in criminal research, and how, in the face of almost insuperable contradictory evidence, he solved the mysterious shooting of Alvin Bennett. The present chronicle deals with his solution of Margaret Odell's murder, which took place in the early fall of the same year, and which, you will recall, created an even greater sensation than its predecessor.†

A curious set of circumstances was accountable for the way in which Vance was shouldered with his new investigation. Markham for weeks had been badgered by the anti-administration newspapers for the signal failures of his office in obtaining convictions against certain underworld offenders whom the police had turned over to him for prosecution. As a result of prohibition a new and dangerous, and wholly undesirable, kind of night life had sprung up in New York. A large number of well-financed cabarets calling themselves night clubs, had made their appearance along Broadway and in its side streets; and already there had been an appalling number of serious crimes, both passional and monetary, which, it was said, had had their inception in these unsavory resorts.

At last when a case of murder accompanying a hold-up and jewel robbery in one of the family hotels up-town was traced directly to plans and preparations made in one of the night clubs and when two detectives of the homicide bureau investigating the case were found dead one morning in the neighborhood of the club with bullet wounds in their backs, Markham decided to pigeonhole the other affairs of his office and take a hand personally in the intolerable criminal conditions that had arisen.

(Sunday, Sept. 9)

On the day following his decision, Markham and Vance and I were sitting in a secluded corner of the lounge-room of the Stuyvesant Club. We often came together there, for we were all members of the club, and Markham frequently used it as a kind of unofficial up-town headquarters.

"It's bad enough to have half the people in this city under the impression that the district attorney's office is a kind of high-class collection agency," he remarked that night, "without being necessitated to turn detective because I'm not given sufficient evidence, or the right kind of evidence, with which to secure convictions."

Vance looked up with a slow smile, and regarded him quizzically.

"The difficulty would seem to be," he returned, with an indolent drawl, "that the police labor under the notion that evidence which would convince a man of ord'n'ry intelligence, would also convince a court of law. A silly notion, don't y' know. Lawyers really don't want evidence: they want erudite technicalities. And the average policeman's brain is too forthright to cope with the pedantic demands of jur'sprudence."

"It's not as bad as that," Markham retorted, with an attempt at good nature, although the strain of the past few weeks had tended to upset his habitual equanimity. "If there weren't rules of evidence, grave injustice would too often be done innocent persons. And even a criminal is entitled to protection in our courts."

Vance yawned mildly.

"Markham, you should have been a pedagogue. It's positively amazin' how you've mastered all the standard oratorical replies to criticism. And yet, I'm unconvinced. You remember the Wisconsin case of the kidnaped man whom the courts declared presumably dead. Even when he reappeared, hale and hearty, among his former neighbors, his status of being presumably dead was not legally altered. The visible and demonstrable fact that he was actually alive was regarded by the court as an immaterial and imperinent side-issue. . . . Then there's the touchin' situation—so prevalent in this fair country—of a man being insane in one state and sane in another. . . . Your layman, swaddled in the darkness of ordin'r ycommon sense, would say that a person who is a lunatic on one bank of the river would still be a lunatic if he was on the opposite bank. And he'd also hold—erroneously, no doubt—that if a man was living, he would presumably be alive."

"Why this academic dissertation?" asked Markham, this time a bit irritably.

"It seems to touch rather vitally on the source of your present predicament," Vance explained equably. "The police, not being lawyers, have apparently got you into hot water, what? . . . Why not start an agitation to send all detectives to law school?"

Markham grunted. "I'd hardly endear myself to the people of this country if I answered the current strictures against me by recommending law courses for the police department."

"Permit me, then, to suggest the alternative of Shakespeare's butcher: 'Let's kill all the lawyers'."

"Unfortunately, it's a situation, not a utopian theory, that has to be met."

"And just how," asked Vance lazily, "do you propose to reconcile the sensible conclusions of the police with what you touchingly call correctness of legal procedure?"

"To begin with," Markham informed him, "I've decided henceforth to do my own investigating of all important night-club criminal cases. I called a conference of the heads of my departments yesterday, and from now on there's going to be some real activity radiating direct from my office. I intend to produce the kind of evidence I need for convictions."

Vance slowly took a cigaret from his case and tapped it on the arm of his chair.

"Ah! So you are going to substitute the conviction of the innocent for the acquittal of the guilty?"

Markham was nettled; turning in his chair he frowned at Vance. "I won't pretend not to understand your remark," he said acidulously. "You're back again on your favorite theme of the inadequacy of circumstantial evidence as compared with your psychological theories and aesthetic hypothesis."

"Quite so," agreed Vance carelessly. "Y' know, Markham, your sweet and charmin' faith in circumstantial evidence is positively disarming. I tremble for the innocent victims you are about to gather into your legal net. You'll eventually make the mere attendance at any cabaret a frightful hazard."

Markham smoked a while in silence.

"Why this sweeping deprecation of circumstantial evidence? I admit that at times it may be misleading; but it often forms powerful presumptive proof of guilt. Indeed, Vance, one of our greatest legal authorities has demonstrated that it is the most powerful actual evidence in existence. Direct evidence, in the very nature of crime, is almost always unavailable. If the courts had to depend on it, the great majority of criminals would still be at large."

"I was under the impression that this precious majority had always enjoyed its untrammelled freedom."

Markham ignored the interruption.

"Take this example: A dozen adults see an animal running across the snow, and testify that it was a chicken; whereas a child sees the same animal, and declares it was a duck. They thereupon examine the animal's footprints and find them to be the web-footed tracks made by a duck. Is it not conclusive, then, that the animal was a duck and not a chicken, despite the preponderance of direct evidence?"

"I'll grant you your duck," acceded Vance indifferently.

"And having gratefully accepted the gift," pursued Markham, "I propound a corollary: A dozen adults see a human figure crossing the snow, and take oath it was a woman; whereas a child asserts that the figure was a man. Now, will you not also grant that the circumstantial evidence of a man's footprints in the snow would supply incontrovertible proof that it was, in fact, a man, and not a woman?"

"Not at all, my dear Justinian," replied Vance, stretching his legs languidly in front of him; "unless, of course, you could show that a human being possesses no higher order of brains than a duck!"

"What have brains to do with it?" Markham asked impatiently. "Brains don't affect one's footprints."

"Not those of a duck, certainly. But brains might very well—and, no doubt, often do—affect the footprints of a human being."

"Well, according to your highly and peculiarly developed processes of reasoning, would the circumstantial evidence of those masculine footprints indicate a man or a woman?"

"Not necessarily either," Vance answered; "or, rather, a possibility of each. Such evidence, when applied to a human being—to a creature, that is, with a reasoning mind—would merely mean to me that the figure crossing the snow was either a man in his own shoes, or a woman in man's shoes; or perhaps, even, a long-legged child."

"I'm delighted to observe," said Markham, "that, at least, you repudiate the possibility of a duck dressing itself up in the gardener's boots."

Vance was silent for a moment; then he said:

"The trouble with you modern Solons, d' ye see, is that you attempt to reduce human nature to a formula; whereas the truth is that man, like life, is infinitely complex. He's shrewd and tricky—skilled for centuries in all the most diabolical chicaneries. He is a creature of low cunning, who, even in the normal course of his vain and idiotic struggle for existence, instinctively and deliberately tells ninety-nine lies to one truth. A duck, not having had the heaven-kissing advantages of human civilization, is a straightforward and eminently honest bird."

"How," asked Markham, "since you jettison all the ordinary means of arriving at a conclusion, would you decide the sex or species of this person who left the masculine footprints in the snow?"

Vance blew a spiral of smoke toward the ceiling.

"First, I'd repudiate all the evidence of the twelve astigmatic adults and the one bright-eyed child. Next, I'd ignore the footprints in the snow. Then, with a mind unprejudiced by dubious testimony and uncluttered with material clues, I'd determine the exact nature of the crime which this fleeing person had committed. After having analyzed its various factors, I could infallibly tell you not only whether the culprit was a man or a woman, but I could describe his habits, character, and personality. And I could do all this whether the fleeing figure left male or female or kangaroo tracks, or used stilts, or rode off on a velocipede."

Markham smiled broadly. "You'd be worse than the police in the matter of supplying me legal evidence, I fear."

"I, at least, wouldn't procure evidence against some unsuspecting person whose boots had been appropriated by the real culprit," retorted Vance.

He became suddenly serious.

"See here, old man; there are some shrewd intelligences at present allied with what the theologians call the powers of darkness. The surface appearances of many of these crimes that are worrying you are palpably deceptive. Personally, I don't put much stock in the theory that a malevolent gang of cut-throats have organized an American camorra, and made the silly night clubs their headquarters. The idea is too melodramatic. It smacks too much of the gaudy journalistic imagination; it's too Eugene Sue-ish. Crime isn't a mass instinct except during war-time, and then it's merely an obscene sport. . . . Markham, old dear, don't let this romantic criminological idea lead you astray. And don't scrutinize the figurative fingerprints in the snow too closely. They'll confuse you most horribly."

He sighed deeply, and gave Markham a look of bantering commiseration.

"And have you paused to consider that your first case may even be devoid of footprints? . . . Alas! What, then, will you do?"

"I could overcome that difficulty by taking you along with me," suggested Markham, with a touch of irony. "How would you like to accompany me on the next important case that breaks?"

"I am ravished by the idea," said Vance.

Two days later the front pages of our metropolitan press carried glaring headlines telling of the murder of Margaret Odell.

*Written especially for her by B. G. De Sylva.

†The Loeb-Leopold crime, the Dorothy King case, and the Hall-Mills murder came later; but the Canary murder proved fully as conspicuous a case as the Nan Patterson- Caesar" Young affair, Durant's murder of Blanche Lamont and Minnie Williams in San Francisco, the Molineux arsenic-poisoning case, and the Carlyle Harris morphine murder. To find a parallel in point of public interest one must recall the Borden double-murder in Fall River, the Thaw case, the shooting of Elwell and the Rosenthal murder.

This most baffling of murder mysteries continues in The Peterborough Daily Examiner. Never before has so ingenious a crime been perpetrated as this which took the life of the beautiful and luckless Margaret Odell. The story is thrilling and well written—it is everything a mystery story should be.

Don't miss a single installment of this thrilling story. Chapter 2 describes the scene in the "Canary's" apartment.

DOUBLE TAXATION.

One feature of the coming Robb Budget that will be awaited with interest will be the answer given by the Finance Minister to the resolution passed by the fifth convention of the Canadian Tax Conference asking the Dominion Government to discontinue the imposition of double taxation in respect of dividends now imposed under the Dominion Income War Tax Act.

The chief complaint against the present system is that it is double taxation.

This would clearly appear to be the case since the income of corporations is taxed before distribution, and then if the recipient of dividends has a taxable income it is again subject to tax.

Again the taxation of dividends is a means of applying the practice of differentiation to the Dominion income tax, inasmuch as "all income from property" is thus taxed first at a 9 per cent. rate and then, in addition, at the unusual rate embled to "income from personal exertion."

In a young and growing country requiring large amounts of speculative capital for development purposes there is reason to doubt the wisdom of applying the principle of differentiatism.

THE POULTRY SHOW.

The Directors of the Peterborough Poultry Association are to be congratulated upon the great success of the annual poultry show last week.

It will rank as one of the outstanding events in the history of the association in the variety and excellence of its exhibits and in the amount of interest displayed by the public.

The triumph of this year's show was made possible by much hard work on the part of an enthusiastic body of Directors, who put into their efforts the same energy and vigor that distinguish the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition directoriate, and have succeeded in giving the annual poultry show a new status.

In its own field the Peterborough Poultry Association should occupy as prominent a niche as Peterborough's big fair, and its show should become noted throughout the Province as an annual event no poultry fancier would think of missing.

That it is fast developing into such a show the great success scored last week leaves no doubt, and already a bigger and better poultry exhibition is being planned for next year.

SUNDAY READING.

An attempt to have Toronto's Public Libraries open on Sundays was rejected on the ground that the reports from other cities were unfavourable to such a practice.

Just what the effect of issuing books on Sunday would be The Examiner has no means of estimating, but in so far as the throwing open on that day of the reading rooms of the libraries is concerned we can testify that the reading rooms of the Peterborough Public Library have been open on Sunday afternoons for some years without creating a noticeable deterioration in the morals of the community, and without causing any other condition that might create a demand for a change.

The privilege of using these rooms and of spending an hour or two perusing the magazines and papers available there for public use has been greatly appreciated by many citizens, most of whom are living away from home and welcome the opportunity offered by the opening of the Library's reading rooms on Sunday to profitably pass an afternoon that would otherwise have to be spent in the bedroom of their boarding house or on the street.

Judging by the manner in which the system has worked out here there is no particular reason why the reading rooms in Toronto's libraries should not be open on Sunday.

BOTH LEADERS COMING.

The Conservative Association of West Peterborough evidently does not believe in doing things by halves.

Most organizations would be satisfied to capture one big gun to feature such occasions as annual "at homes," but the local Conservatives were not content until they had booked two lions.

Accordingly both Hon. R. B. Bennett, K.C., the newly elected Dominion leader of the party, and Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Premier of Ontario, will be in attendance at the annual gathering in the G.W.V.A. Hall tomorrow night, and the appearance of these two celebrities will create interest among citizens generally, whatever their political affiliations may be.

It is Mr. Bennett's first visit here since his accession to the leadership, and the first occasion in some years upon which the Premier has attended a local function.

Mr. Ferguson is not going to have much leisure time during his sojourn in Peterborough, inasmuch as he is billed to give two other addresses in addition to that to be given at the Conservative "at home," speaking to the Peterborough Rotary Club at noon and to the Women's Canadian Club in the afternoon.

The joint appearance of Provincial and Federal leaders at an informal function is an unusual event in Peterborough.

CANADA'S INTERPRETER.

The London (Eng.) Telegrapher says of the message of the carillon, the volume of addresses by the Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Prime Minister of Canada, recently issued:

"What Mr. Baldwin does for England in these non-political addresses, which are among the most gracious features of our public life, is done for Canada by her own Prime Minister, Mr. Mackenzie King. This collection of addresses, inspired by the spirit and tradition of Canada, might, indeed, have been fitly entitled, after Mr. Baldwin's example, 'On Canada.' The actual title is that of the first speech, delivered at the inauguration of the carillon at the Houses of Parliament, Ottawa, on the occasion of the Dominion's Diamond Jubilee on July 1 last. This anniversary, and the recent visit to Canada of the Prince of Wales, Prince George and Mr. Baldwin, provide the occasion for a number of the succeeding addresses. Others again—those delivered on the author's visits to this country for the Imperial Conferences in 1923 and 1926—will be well remembered by many English readers.

"Through the wide variety of Mr. King's subjects, ranging from 'The British Constitution' to 'Industrial Peace' and 'The Supremacy of Ideals,' there run two leading conceptions, the idea of expansion and growth, and the idea of unity. Few public men are more richly endowed with a sense of history than Mr. King. 'First and foremost we must strive to be worthy of our past,' he writes. 'And to be worthy of our past we must have a more intimate knowledge of its history. In the annals of the world there is no more illuminating and inspiring history than the history of Canada.' From this standpoint, appearing over and over again in these pages, he looks forward to a development—economic, political and constitutional—as significant as has been that of the past.

"The idea of unity—of Canada's unity with the British Empire, with the civilization of the United States, with the nations of Europe—also finds expression in nearly every one of these addresses. For Mr. King his country is 'a land of reconciliation,' where many different strains of blood unite to form a nation. He has a flair for the picturesque and telling illustration. What could be an apter symbol of the country 'where the enmities of past generations lie buried' than his reference to the monument in Quebec which commemorates in a single epitaph the virtues of Wolfe and Montcalm; or a better illustration of Canada's link with Britain than the clock of the Houses of Parliament at Ottawa, which reproduces the notes of Big Ben and the Westminster chimes, and the replica of the Speaker's chair in the same building? Perhaps the most permanent impression left by this book is Mr. King's attitude to his country and its history. The words with which he praises Quebec might have come from the pen of a man versed in the lore of old London; and there are countless other passages which bring home to the English reader that youth and promise are not Canada's only qualities, but that she has a history scarcely less rich and romantic than our own, and almost an antiquity.

A LIGHT THAT FAILED.

The more that is written about Woodrow Wilson—and large already is the literature that has gathered around his name—the more difficult it seems to arrive at a satisfying estimate of his personality.

His life has been recorded by many hands, with more or less sympathy and insight. His letters have been published without any of the reservations usually attached to contemporary correspondence. His private papers, as well as the official records of his public activities, have been made accessible; and collections of his speeches have been supplemented by volumes of commentary upon his character, conduct and habits in various spheres of thought and action. Yet with all this material available, Woodrow Wilson remains a good deal of a riddle.

Some time ago, the Woodrow Wilson Foundation decided to offer to the people of the United States an opportunity to express their appreciation of the qualities of the former President.

To secure a public estimate worthy of the subject, the large sum of $57,000 was set aside for prizes in an essay contest, in which anyone living in the United States, and between the ages of 20 and 35, was eligible to compete. Entrants were invited to expatiate on the text: "What Woodrow Wilson Means To Me;" and, for the two best essays, prizes of $25,000 each were offered, with other awards ranging from $1,000 to $20.

Here was an exceptional chance for America's men and women of letters, within the age limit, not only to pay tribute to a great President, but to make a reputation and a fortune. Competent observers had asserted that the spread of literary ability was greater, and the standard probably higher, in the United States than in any other country under the sun, and there was therefore every reason to anticipate that, with the name of Woodrow Wilson to inspire them, and such handsome rewards to tempt them, the competing essayists would flood the headquarters of the Foundation with literary masterpieces.

The flood came, but not the masterpieces. Ten thousand manuscripts poured into the hands of the special committee appointed by the trustees to make the first selection, and of that vast number only 44 were deemed worthy of being passed on to the jury of award for final judgment. Then, when these had been carefully considered, it was found that none was of sufficient merit to warrant the award of either the two first prizes of $25,000 each, or the two second prizes of $1,000 each; while the standard of excellence generally was so low as to necessitate the withholding of some of the third prizes, and even a curtailment of the list reserved for honorable mention.

Such a showing would seem to indicate that either Woodrow Wilson did not mean very much to the ten thousand competing scribes, or that his significance was beyond their grasp. It might also be held to signify that the standards of literary ability in the United States are not quite as high as they have been represented, for it is to be inferred from the report of the learned adjudicators that few, if any, of the essays submitted were, "in substance and in style, fit to be published without embarrassment, and submitted to the critical judgment of educated men and women."

Such a finding is at once a commentary upon certain forms of literary competition, and an admission that the light which was expected to reveal the inscrutable Woodrow Wilson in clear and true perspective had miserably failed.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The coal man smiles once more.

1928 will be remembered as the year of the great January thaw.

That ghost story from Campbellford indicates that country life is not always as unexciting as it is sometimes pictured.

The West Peterborough Conservatives might have brought Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen here tomorrow night with Premier Ferguson and staged a smoker.

Television is making such rapid strides that we'll soon be able to see if those radio sopranos really look as bad as they sound.

Old Man Winter may have been backed against the ropes for a while, but he still carries a punch that has to be respected.

Latest reports from ardent curlers are to the effect that they are beginning to feel as if life is really worth while after all.

A Toronto fireman was badly injured last week while responding to a false alarm. The accident shows the folly of needlessly calling out the fire fighters.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO Ills., Jan. 16 (Canadian Press).—Faced by increased country offerings and by a cold wave likely to promote enlargement of the crop movement, corn values Saturday suffered a material setback. Wheat gave way with corn and as a result of profit-taking on the part on holders.

Corn closed heavy, ⅝ to 1⅛ cents net lower, wheat ¼c to ½c off; oats unchanged to ¼c to ⅜c down, and provisions unchanged to 12c decline.

Wheat values were largely dominated toward the last by the downward swing of the corn market. Earlier, however, wheat displayed an upward trend, general absence of snow protection over domestic winter wheat territory causing apprehension as to possible crop damage during expected low temperatures. Stormy conditions in Canada were also looked upon as tending to check the market of wheat.

Oats as well as wheat receded with corn, but not until No. 1 white oats here sold at 60 cents a bushel, the highest prices since 1925.

Notwithstanding an upturn in the hog market, provisions were easier, sympathizing with grain and cottonseed oil.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Jan. 16 (Canadian Press)—There was a marked increase in the demand from the United Kingdom and the Continent for wheat here on Saturday and a large volume of business was done. Some business was also worked in rye and barley, and sales of Canadian scalping oats were also fairly large.

The domestic grain market was quiet, the demand being only for odd cars, but the undertone was firm.

The demand for Spring and Winter wheat grades of flour continued of a limited character, but prices were unchanged.

A fairly active trade was done in all lines of millfeed and values ruled firm. The movement of standard grades of rolled oats was fair and prices were steady.

On account of the increased production of eggs throughout the provinces of Ontario and Quebec and the heavy supplies coming forward for the season of the year combined with the larger shipments from British Columbia on consignment a weak feeling developed here Saturday and prices for fresh aggs scored a decline of three to five cents per dozen, and storage eggs one to three cents per dozen. The demand was dull. The receipts were 406 cases.

Extreme dullness again marked the trade in butter, but prices were about steady. The receipts were 64 packages.

The cheese trade was dull and featureless. The receipts were 152 boxes.

Wise and Otherwise

Folks prick up their ears these days when somebody talks about his ship coming in. It may be a rum ship.

Lazy people think heaven is a place where they will never have to get up, but, of course, it is a place they will have to get up to.

Life is puzzling. A rut is something a man spends half his time digging and the other half trying to keep out of.

Nature is consistent. She never makes an egotist without giving him plenty of tongue.

Ivory Ivy is running true to form. She thinks the aesophagus is a book of fairy tales.

We read of a painting that is 125 feet long. Which proves conclusively the old saying that art is long.

Sorrows are a great deal like kittens. Some folks takes the ones they don't want and drown them.

ADDRESS GIVEN ON ROMAN DAYS

Illustrations of Clothing, Ornaments and Other Articles Add To Interest.

ART ASSOCIATION MEETS.

A very interesting address on "Modern Ways of Ancient Days", a study of Roman private life two thousand years ago, illustrated by a number of slides from the classical collection of the Royal Ontario Museum, was given to the members of the Women's Art Association in the studio at the Conservatory of Music, Saturday afternoon, by Professor Ileiffe of the University of Toronto. The picture machine was operated by V. R. Henry, of the staff of the Collegiate Institute, and tea was served at the conclusion of the address.

The address by Professor Ileiffe, who was introduced by the president, Mrs. Wm. Blackwell, was delivered in an entertaining fashion whose atmosphere of imperturbable calm was especially noticeable during its closing moment, when a taxi waiting for the speaker, to take him to the station, was kept perilously close to the last possible moment, while the professor continued unflurried with his showing of slides. His feminine audience appeared much more concerned over his train than did the professor.

What proved to be a very interesting insight into ways of ancient Rome, with the majority of slides showing the dress, jewellery and household utensils of the dwellers of a bygone age, was given during the professor's discourse. Most of the articles illustrated, at present in the Royal Ontario Museum, were taken from excavations made in Roman settlements in Egypt, and showed a remarkable degree of preservation for objects over seventeen hundred years old, in the majority of instances.

The slides commenced with a showing of embroidered tunics and togas, which were, in those days, made to fit the person giving the order and were oddly fitted in many cases. One had a curiously shrunken body with large sleeves and another exhibited a remarkable degree of skill in their manufacture and ornamentation.

Linen curtains of the type used in those days to separate rooms in the houses, embroided in red, purple and blue, sandals and shoes, some with pointed toes, children's knitted woollen socks, showing a separate compartment for the big toe, bone knitting needles with eyes still intact after the lapse of so many centuries and balls of yarn wound on pebbles and bits of terra cotta ("X-Rayed", as the professor stated, in order to determine the nature of their centers), a hair net found in a tomb, of delicate fabric and structure, a rag doll belonging to some child whose bones have long since been turned to fine dust, but whose plaything still remains for the interested attention of later generations, and jewels of many sorts—all these were included in the slides, many of which were colored. The display of gems was especially interesting, with carnelian, ruby and emerald necklaces, and one beautiful specimen of fiery white opals. Necklaces and brooches and rings were intricate and lovely in design. These gems were worn in the first instance as amulets, each being considered as valuable in warding off evil spirits who afflicted dwellers in those ages, as they do in modern times. The professor interjected the information that the word "fascination" has a Latin word root which means the "evil eye", and also asserted mildly, when showing various types of toilet and trinket boxes, that "dressing in those days must have been just as anxious a business as it is now."

Curiously reminiscent of the Celtic jewellery work by the early Britons, he said, was the jewellery found in these ancient tombs of Luxor.

A votive hand, regarded in those days as another agent in warding off evil spirits from the home, was shown, with the fourth and fifth fingers folded in, the others, with the thumb, extended, in the same gesture as the professor declared was used by the Pope in giving his blessing. These hands set up in the houses, had inscribed emblems of superstitious value, including cocks' heads, the face of Isis and pine cones, each having a power all its own.

An exhibit of early Roman coins was made, the first of these being shapeless and without inscription of any sort, and usually weighing one pound apiece, also of glass vases and ornaments, manufactured by hand before the art of glass-blowing was invented. This was done by means of a heated bronze stick, inserted within a clay mould, around which was wound strips of heated glass, which was later shaped and colored to suit the taste of the artist. When the glass cooled sufficiently, the bronze stick was withdrawn and the clay removed in the form of fine powder, leaving the glass vessel intact.

Basketry and wicker work were shown, with cooking utensils that included heavy bronze frying pans and wine strainers, long bone and silver spoons, some of the latter shaped to suit one of the peculiar needs of the day, the removal of snails from their shells, fine combs of bone and wood, eyebrow sticks for the applying of the antimony used to prevent trouble in the eyes from the hot sun, silver-glass and bronze mirrors, convex in shape, vase of alabaster for holding unguents used to smear the body after the bath and later scraped off, the pocket comb of an ancient and noble beauty with the name of "Modesta" worked in its center, and tiny miniatures of horses and riders, in terra cotta and wood, scissors and writing utensils, spindles and combs for the looms, hand-cuffs and hot-water bottles of stone, shaped to fit the body, and a curiously-preserved loaf of square bread, petrified to immortal strength by the air of the tomb in which it was placed.

Mrs. Blackwell, at the conclusion of the lecture, made several announcements of coming events, speaking of the exhibit of Miss Hatton's pictures to be made shortly. Miss Hatton, who was one of the founders of the local organization, was welcomed back Saturday by the president, after her sojourn of some years, abroad.

Mrs. Blackwell also spoke of the sorrow experienced by the society in the death of the late Madame Goulet, who was to have been one of the hostesses at yesterday's meeting. Mrs. Blackwell referred to the interest always taken by the late Madame Goulet, in the efforts of the Women's Art Association.

LYRICS OF LIFE

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH.

TWO ROSES

Blue turns to gray, and sun to show'rs,
But time will turn the rain to flow'rs,
I never knew it yet to fail.
I've found them after ev'ry gale—
New blossoms on this earth of ours.

And life is like a grassy field:
Whatever clouds the sun concealed,
Whatever sudden shadow passed,
The morning always dawned at last
And morning some new rose revealed.

Death came, and seemed an awful thing
I said, "Can sorrow have a Spring,
Such night have morning? Suns may shine,
But never in this heart of mine.
What rose can such a shadow bring?"

But time has brought me not one rose
But two, the fairest that God grows:
The first a rose of love re-born,
But now a rose without a thorn,
The love that only memory knows.

And close beside it blooms again
The rose of faith, forgotten when
I was so sure, so free of care;
But now another rose is there,
The faith I had forgotten then.

Once heaven seemed so far away,
A word we use, a thing we say;
But when in heaven our loved ones are,
Then heaven cannot be so far—
Were they not here but yesterday?

If yours are now the clouded hours,
Yes, if your sun has turned to show'rs,
These things shall blossom from your grief:
A better love, more firm belief;
For time will turn the rain to flow'rs.

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

A sharp rise in her temperature, brought on by the excitement of seeing Bob and Cherry, mercifully made it unnecessary for Faith to have to pretend anything at all for the rest of her first day in the hospital. By the doctor's orders, all visitors were excluded from the room.

Just before dawn Faith awakened from the fever-stupor in which she had lain almost motionless for hours. At first she was startled by the presence of the white-clad night nurse, who was stretched at ease in a big chair drawn close to the bed. It came to Faith gradually where she was and why; then the whole hideous tragedy which had brought her here swooped down blackly upon her. She was very ill, and please God, she would die, for Cherry and Bob loved each other and must be free to marry. Her listless, heavy hands stirred, clasped each other weakly in the symbol of prayer. But before she could phrase her appeal to God for help in dying, something strange about her hands arrested her thoughts. Why, they were almost cool! Wonderingly, she lifted one of them to her face, touched her forehead and lips, that had been so scorchingly hot the day before. It was true, terrifyingly true. Her fever was either quite or almost gone. Terror lest she not die after all made her cry out, an eerie wail in the greyly lighted room.

Instantly the nurse was at her side, taking her pulse and thrusting a thermometer between her unwilling lips. Delight made the nurse unprofessional when she had scanned the little glass tube

"My, but we're doing fine! Almost down to normal! Isn't that splendid?"

She could not know that her words, instead of being welcome, were almost a death-knell to the sick girl's hopes. Faith lay with eyes closed in weary despair during the long hours that followed.

At nine o'clock Bob and her sister were admitted to the room, and their beloved faces were so haggard with sleeplessness and worry that Faith had to close her eyes quickly so that they might not see the pity and love which welled up in them.

"Fay is awfully anxious to see her," Cherry told Bub, as he turned sharply away from the bed, his face working with threatened tears. "She thinks maybe Faith will recognize her, since Fay is the last member of the family she saw before—before.— Oh, I can't stand it!"

"Bring Fay in. It's worth trying', Bob agreed. "Don't take it so hard, honey. Dr. King says there's no doubt that she will recover completely."

No actress ever loathed her role more or performed it better than Faith did when she turned blank, unrecognizing eyes upon her red-eyed little sister-in-law.

"Oh, Bob!" Fay cried heart-brokenly. "I knew the minute I saw her when she got back from going home after those things for me that she'd had an awful shock. She looked ill enough to die right then. What happened? Surely you know! And you ought to tell, so the doctor would understand her case better."

Nervou, Pale Girl, 6, Gains 2 Lbs In Week

"My little girl of 6 has nice, rosy cheeks now, and has gained over 2 pounds a week since giving her Vinol."—Mrs. Geo. Hendren.

Vinol is a delicious compound of cod liver peptone, iron, etc. The very FIRST bottle often adds several pounds weight to thin children or adults. Nervous, easily tired, anemic people are surprised how Vinol gives new pep, sound sleep and a BIG appetite. Tastes delicious. McDermid & Jury, druggists, E. L. Payne, McDermid Drug Company.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

The new hand-knit sweaters show elaborate designing. This model from London is of dark blue with beige stars.

Hand-knitted sweaters are with us again and when spring and summer comes they will doubtless be worn to a considerable extent. One of the advantages that is claimed for them is that they possess more individuality than those knitted by machine. Moreover, the intricate designing that is now favored can be most effectively done by the hand knitter. It is, of course, ever so much easier to have a sweater with your initials or monogram done by hand than to have a machine to do it—and monogramed sweaters are decidedly smart.

Almost all of the hand-knitted sweaters are of intricate design—designs that must require the closest sort of attention. I have seen a number of new sweaters with star designs and one showing a combination of white stars and dots on a dark blue foundation. Zigzag and irregular diagonal stripes are still smart, and of course much harder for the knitter than the vertical stripes that were so generally worn a few seasons ago.

One of the novelties promised for late winter resort wear and general wear this spring is little sports jackets made of knitted wool. The shops now are showing all sorts of dainty negligees, such as bed jackets and breakfast coats made of knitted or crocheted wool.

Some of the most charming negligees I have seen recently were displayed at one of the small specialty shops. These were of satin in a lovely light shade of lavender. There was a simple little slip-on bed jacket of this lovely satin with edges finished with fine feather stitching—not a touch of lace or marabou or ostrich to mar the perfect beauty of the satin.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

TUESDAY, JANUARY 17, 928.

Good and evil planetary influences contend today, according to astrology, which finds adverse aspects rather strong.

The day is read as unlucky for insurance, pensions and other methods of protection.

Warning is given that many unsafe projects may be launched in the name of thrift, which should be practiced wisely in the coming months.

It is well not to start any important project under this rule, which makes for delays and thwarting conditions.

Lawyers may now come under the condemnation of the public, because of some sensational case.

Legislators and legislation are subject to a sway that precipitates bitter controversies and prevents constructive action.

This should be a lucky sway for aviators who will find a growing demand for commercial transportation.

Again the seers foretell success for thinkers and this means that orators and writers will have enlarged opportunities.

There is a rule that is believed to presage secret warfare between certain fraternal and religious organizations.

Politics will reveal strangely allied forces that will bring about surprising results, astrologers prophesy.

Women may now prepare to assume the feminine graces and charm abandoned recently, for the stars indicate a decided reaction in modes and manners.

Again there will be a return to certain chivalrous ideals in the relation of men and women, the seers foretell.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a prosperous year in which great adventures will be experienced.

Children born on this day probably will gain eminence and fame. The subject of this sign are likely to meet famous persons and to have colorful careers.

CHILDREN COPY PARENTS

One trouble you will always have with your child is that he will insist on doing as you do, and not as you teach.

Children are not inherently bad, as many suppose, but learn their ideas of right and wrong from their elders, principally from their parents.

If your child is easily irritated it can only be because you have shown the same irritability upon similar occasions.

The child, of course, does not deliberately copy his elders, but, nevertheless, does so unconsciously. Your slangy expressions become part of the vocabulary of your child. The way you hold your knife and fork is the only way your child will learn the proper or improper use of these necessary table utensils.

Example is always stronger than precept, so if you have been fortunately blessed with children, you have been entrusted with a duty impossible to shirk with a clean conscience.

Children wish always to do the right thing, but often do not understand what is desired of them because you, yourself, do not do as you teach them to do.

The desire for happiness is just as strong with them as with you, but, having little sense of responsibility, and with immature judgment, their restless search for pleasure will many times lead them to commit acts which bring unpleasant consequences. Do not blame them too much, but honestly try to help them by suggesting other means for enjoyment you have found to produce the maximum of satisfaction.

Do not be surprised if your child is peevish all day after eating too large a breakfast of sausage and hot cakes. Remember, you ate the same disturbing food, and your disposition was probably no better.

Do you drink coffee or liquor, and then tell your child that he cannot have the same things as they are not good for little boys? Many a clove-eating father will tell his child fairy stories about the demon rum. A father with his pocket full of stogies will denounce Lady Nicotine as not being a fit companion for anyone.

How are you going to decently explain a big head the morning after the night before?

Live your life as close to perfection as you can if you wish your priceless example to be copied by your offspring. Problems will arise during the age of adolescence which must be met by the parents with a keen responsibility to the conditions of life as they exist today. The puritanical prudery of yesterday will not be a safe standard to teach your child today.

With the increased knowledge from your mature experience, and with the wealth of facts gleaned from the study of biology in the last century, you are so much better fitted to instruct your child in many of the fundamental truths of life!

The unwholesome teaching of companions must be met with plain, sensible advice, reasonable to young minds whose ideal should be a clean mind in a clean body.

Questions and Answers.

Question: A. P. R. asks: "Will you explain through your column what is meant by "epithelial cells" found in an analysis of a sample of urine? There was found no sugar or albumen, but these cells were present. Should a person have a further examination made to avoid further trouble later on?"

Answer: Epithelial cells appearing in the urine might show a mild form of cystitis, providing there are no other important findings in the urinalysis. These cells are microscopic, and under the microscope look similar to those thrown off by the scalp and called dandruff. Their presence in the urine does not indicate any serious trouble.

Question: Anxious Mother writes: "I would like to know how much orange juice a baby nine months old should take. What time of the day should I give it—before or after meals?"

Answer: A baby nine months old should not be eating meals, but should be taking only orange juice and milk. A good schedule is to make the feedings four hours apart, using about eight ounces of milk each time, and preceding the milk feedings by one or two teaspoonfuls of straight orange juice which has not been diluted. If the baby is inclined to be constipated, it is all right to give him orange juice between feedings, using one or two teaspoonfuls at a time and increasing the amount as it seems necessary.

Question: C. T. asks: "What would cause a ranula, and is it something permanent or will it go away eventually? If so, is an operation ever advisable, or would it be dangerous?"

Answer: A ranula is a cystic tumor beneath the tongue due to the obstruction and dilation of the sublingual or submaxillary gland, or of a mucus gland. It may go away by itself, but an operation is sometimes advisable.

"I talked him out of it - - -"

"IF I had only known this would happen! So suddenly! So unexpectedly! And when everything looked so promising!

"And to think that time after time he wanted to increase his life insurance and I talked him out of it. How hard I worked against myself and against my own interests. I wanted a bigger house. I wanted luxuries! I wanted everything except the protection he was urging me to accept.

"I got my own way, of course. The Life Insurance was not taken. I robbed the children of their education, of my care, perhaps of their future success in life. I robbed myself of the children's companionship. For now I must leave them to earn the money needed to keep our little family together - - the money that Life Insurance would have given me if he had had his way - -

"- - and I talked him out of it."

It has been truly said that, "If every wife knew what every widow knows, every man would carry adequate Life Insurance".

And too often it is the children who must pay the penalty of the wife's prejudice.

Latest Comment on Grain and Industrial Markets. — Closing Quotations on the Principal Active Stocks.

Impressions of the markets by Mr. C. Hawley, representing Stobie-long and Company:

The New York market was a bit weaker to-day but most stocks showed very slight declines. Yellow Cab, mentioned on Saturday sold down to 32¼, but looks like a buy there. Radio, which we said was a bit below 100, sold at 99, and is a buy near that figure. Int. Nickel weakened below 91, closing at a little better, and with minor re-actions should go higher during the next few weeks. We look for a general advance in the market within the next few weeks.

Some stocks showed declines, also in the Toronto market. Shredded Wheat was very irregular, varying in sales from 78 to 75, with much action in it. It still appears strong. Burt held its advance of Saturday, closing at its high. It will go higher. Massey Harris, which we mentioned also, was slightly weaker, but it appears a purchase around 42. International Pet. was a point or so lower. It may go lower but it is a safe buy near there.

The Mining Market seemed quiet, with no stocks showing much activity. Wright Hargreaves, which we said was a purchase, showed strength at the opening, selling at 6.30, but reacted a little at the close. It still remains a purchase under six dollars. Lake Shore was quiet, as was McIntyre. Noranda sold slightly below 22.00 and should be bought there. Amulet continues to sell around 4.85 to 5.00, but we look for better prices in this stock in the near future.

The cheaper issues remain quiet. McDougall showed a little action to-day, selling up to 55; also Central Manitoba sold up to 195.

Mine Market Rally Continues, But Weaker

TORONTO, Jan. 16. — (Canadian Press.)—The week end rally on the standard mining exchange was continued in heavy trading to-day, though with diminished force. A fair proportion of losses crept into the list, with transactions not far below the million share mark. Potter Doal, the active leader of the whole market, gained one at 21, but the biggest gain was the 25 cent advance in Sudbury Basin is 13.75. No very large price movements were effected.

Mining Corporation sold up 15 at 4.65 and Newbeck climbed four at 58. Howe Gold in greatly decreased trading firmed two at 174, while Amulet advanced seven at 487. The losses included a 14 point recession at 6.00 in Wright Hargreaves and a ten cent loss in Teck Hughes at 10.00. Treadwell, Tough Oakes, Laval Quebec, Kirkland Lake, Barry Hollinger, Area, Bidgood, Crown Reserve and Castle Trethewey lost from one to six points.

Losses In Majority On Toronto Exchange

TORONTO, Jan. 16. — (Canadian Press.)— More losses than gains were recorded in an active session of the Toronto stock exchange this morning, but the market was not wholly weak. International Petroleum, the active leader, lost fractionally at 41¼ and British American was also fractionally lower at 39 with Imperial losing 1½ at 62. The liquor stocks also eased slightly, while International, leader of the listed stocks, lost 1 3-8 at 91½. Canadian Oil lost two at 56 and Brazilian sold down 1½. Massey Harhis lost a full point at 42½. Some activity developed in Pure Gold and it sold up 1½ at 25½, while Shredded Wheat advanced one at 76. Imperial Tobacco, in very active dealings, gained 5-8 at -0¼, and Goodyear, Page Hersey, and Northern Bakeries appreciated slightly.

Many Stocks Decline In New York To-day

NEW YORK, January 16 (Canadian Press). — Reactionary price tendencies predominated in to-day's stock market, which witnessed the elimination of many weakened speculative accounts. Declines in most of the standard industrials and rails were limited to a point or two, but several of the high priced pool specialties broke three to seven points. Two or three rallies started in the early trading fell flat. Call money appeared in plentiful supply at the renewal figure of four per cent., but banks called about $20,000,000 in loans, presumably to repair the deficit shown in last Saturday's clearing house statement. In the absence of any adverse news developments, the reaction was attributed to weakened technical conditions within the market. The falling off in trading probably was due to commission house advices suggesting a waiting attitude for the time being on the part of traders.

Wheat Prices Go Down As Shipments Increase

CHICAGO, Jan. 16. Canadian Press. — Failure of the cold wave to develop tended to make wheat prices average lower early to-day besides world shipments of wheat were large and the amount on ocean passage showed an increase. Opening at 3-8c decline to 1-8c advance wheat later showed a disposition to sag. Corn and oats were firmer, corn starting at 1-8c to 3-8c advance and subsequently scoring additional gains. Provisions held steady.

Opening prices were: Wheat, Mar. 128 7-8, May 129 7-8. Corn, March, 89; May 91 5-8; oats, March 54 3-3, May 55½.

Professional Selling Weakens Mine Market

(Special from the Financial Post Syndicate.)

The mining market has been quite soft during the past week. Professional raids have been engineered on a number of issues and the resultant breaks have made the public rather timid. Bidgood and Wright Hargreaves, two popular Kirkland issues have been hardest hit and all the other Kirkland issues fall in line with the down movement. As far as the writer can see, the propositions and when the raiders there is nothing wrong with any of have had their winnings, there will undoubtedly be a substantial snap back in prices.

Wright Hargreaves has sold freely for sometime. A lot of this selling is said to have been coming from the United States, but it has been very well taken without any serious setback in the price. This property made good progress last year, and it has been difficult to account for the liquidation that has taken place. It is realized that this property has not got as much proven ore in ration to mill tonnage as either Lake Shore or Teck-Hughes, Wright-Hargreaves' holdings, however, are as large as the other two properties together, and it is felt that the development under way has great possibilities. For some time work at this property to the west toward the Lake Shore boundary has been through a faulted and broken area. It is now thought by the management that below a depth of 1,625 feet that they have got entirely under the faulting which disturbed the upper level. The prospect now is that they will have continuous ore through to Lake Shore without any disturbances at a depth of 1,750 feet.

On the south vein to the east, on the 1,250 foot level they continue to develop a better grade of ore than was ever located on the upper levels. In the No. 1 or north vein to the west on the 1,750-foot level where recently a width of between 6 and 7 feet of ore was cut, if maintaining the grade in evidence on the upper levels. Plenty of free gold is to be seen and tellurides. Sinking operations to the 2,000 foot level are proceeding rapidly, and this along with the opening up of the new levels in the near future and the diamond drilling to depth, holds out interesting possibilities for the future. It must be remembered, however, that some months' time will elapse before the results from the present expansion program will begin to be realized. The tonnage is running over 750 tons a day and the mill is doing excellent work. It has run as high as 830 tons.

On the constructive side, Howey Gold Mines, both from point of activity and strength, overshadowed the market. A lot of interest has been evident in the shares of this Red Lake company recently. The feeling among the traders seems to be that Howey is in for a successful career. With the power situation cleared up the property is closer to production. The needs of this property were power and ore, and now that it is assured of both, the public has lost no time in carrying the prices up to a new high. It is learned that developments are favorable on all levels, but no official information is available as to results.

Consolidated Smelters, Canada's premier mining company, had a good year in 1927. Figures show increased production for its two chief metals, lead and zinc, a less important increase in silver output and quite a drastic decrease in gold production, with a smaller falling-off in copper. In the case of gold, it is of course to be remembered that in 1926 there was an abnormal increase in the production of gold by this company. Output of lead was up 11 per cent over 1926, while zinc was up nearly 9 per cent. The increase in silver production was very small, while there was a 41 per cent decrease in gold and nearly 13 per cent in copper. Perhaps the brightest spot of the report is the showing for the fourth quarter of the year, in which very substantial increases are shown by the major metals over the fourth quarter of 1926. The year's increase in zinc, in fact, was very largely accounted for in this one quarter, which was the best of any quarter of the year in production of lead, zinc and copper.

Quarter Billion Taken From Mines During Year

(Special from The Financial Post Syndicate.)

Canada's mines during 1927 created 1252,000,000 new wealth and distributed $23,664,210.35 among shareholders in dividends and bonuses.

These figures indicate two new records. The production record is a substantial increase over the previous high mark of $241,000,000 and the bulk of this is due to the improved position of the coal industry in Nova Scotia and Alberta. British Columbia coal operators show but a slight improvement.

The metallic operators have suffered from weak prices for their products. In British Columbia, for instance the output of lead and zinc was materially higher and the same with silver, yet the province's total for the year fell off $5,000,000 in value.

Ontario's silver output declined also because of the decline in the price of bar silver, which led many of the operators to curtail their efforts.

Ontario had a banner year and the total output passed the $90,000,000 mark. Gold production showed a sizeable increase and the same with nickel and copper. The big increase in the province however, was due to the substantial activity in building operations which carried the value of the structural minerals and clay products up 20% above the total of a year ago.

In Quebec there was quite an increase in non-metallic minerals, especially Asbestos which industry seems to have enjoyed an excellent year and is driving ahead at full speed.

The Nova Scotia situation is particularly pleasing. The output of the coal mines this year will show an increase of 20% over 1926 and 100% over 1925. A general all round improvement in the industry is responsible, and better marketing plans have kept a steady flow of coal going out. The Maritimes are looking to the mining industry for big things. Nova Scotia gives indications of a big revival in its gold mining industry and gypsum production is coming along rapidly.

The year past has been notable for important developments on four properties that may provide Canada with four of the leading mining enterprises on the continent. These are Flin Flon and Sherritt Gordon in Northern Manitoba, the Errington Mine of Bunker Hill-Sullivan at Sudbury and the Frood mine in the same area.

Flin Flon definitely stepped into the ranks of promised big producers when the Whitney interests took up their option. This insured an expenditure of around $50,000,000 on railway, power, mine and smelter construction. Sherritt-Gordon, as a result of diamond drilling has been definitely placed in the big mine class and still has big possibilities.

Errington Mine which is being operated by Treadwell-Yukon, a Bunker Hill subsidiary, has proven ore of fabulous value and stands perhaps second only to the huge copper-precious metal deposit that has been opened up on the Frood property where International and Mond Nickel are driving to a depth of 2,000 ft. This deposit which is shared by the two large nickel operators, has been known for many years as a huge low grade nickel-copper body that was rather unattractive for development because of the higher values secured in other large bodies. Diamond drilling below the 2,000 ft. level has revealed that the copper values jump from two to 22 per cent. and that there is a substantial improvement also in the precious metal content, notably of platinum.

Gold mining in Northern Ontario is coming along rapidly. Kirkland Lake is now in the midst of a boom that has resulted in numerous new well sponsored operations entering the field. Rouyn camp in Quebec is making steady progress but there is little of the spectacular about its advance. The year closed with the Noranda smelter just getting production under way and shortly after the start of the new year there will be a steady stream of year closed with the Noranda smelter and shortly after the start of the new year there will be a steady stream of copper shipped from the mine to England where contracts have been made to absorb the output.

NO CLEW FOUND TO MURDERER

Police Are Investigating Killing of Hungarian Recluse.

DEAD SEVERAL DAYS.

NIAGARA FALLS, Jan. 16.—(Canadian Press.)—No further clews that might lead to arrests have been discovered by police investigating the slaying of Steve Nemet, a Hungarian, who was found dead near his lonely shack at Shisler's Point on Friday. It is now believed Nemet had been dead for several days. A farmer living near his shack told Provincial Police that he had passed Nemet's shack on Wednesday and heard the dead man's dog barking, but he did not stop. It was the dog which attracted the attention of a passing teamster on Friday and led the finding of the body.

Plays Joke On Wife And Assists Burglar

CAMDEN, N.J., Jan. 16 (Canadian Press).—James McCormick's desire to play a joke on his wife cost him two hundred dollars worth of jewellery. McCormick returned to his home, and upon hearing the front door close, thought it was Mrs. McCormick coming home, and hid in a clothes closet. He waited until he grew impatient for his wife to discover his hiding place, and started a search of the house for her. Several rooms had been ransacked and his watch and chain, two rings, and a scarf pin were gone.

CHILD SLAYER STILL AT LARGE

Michigan Governor Reviews Efforts Taken By Authorities in Man Hunt.

$1,000 REWARD OFFERED.

FLINT, Mich., Jan. 16 (Canadian Press).—Governor Fred W. Green arrived here Saturday night and after reviewing the efforts so far of Chief of Police C. J. Scavarda of Flint and Sheriff Frank Green of Genesee County to find the slayer of 5-year-old Dorothy Schneider, kidnapped and killed last Thursday, ordered Oscar Olander, State Commissioner of Public Safety, to assume direction of the man hunt.

The Governor also posted $1,000 personal reward for apprehension of the slayer.

The sheriff and police chief were commended by the executive for their efforts thus far in the investigation, and at the same time they were told that the crime must not be numbered among those unsolved in Michigan.

"This crime is so atrocious, so terrible, that for its perpetrator to remain at large would not only be a stain on the name of law enforcement and decency in the state, but it would represent a menace to every citizen, father and mother or child."

Meanwhile, police continued to run down every possible clue to the slaying.

Due to the frame of mind of citizens, stirred to a high pitch by the kidnapping and slaying, police have decided against giving out further information regarding the progress of the search for the slayer.

One man was severely beaten here Saturday by fellow workers of Leslie Schneider, father of the slain child, when, in discussing the case, he is said to have made a remark which angered his attackers.

LITTLE INSURANCE CARRIED ON BLOCK

Buildings Destroyed in Napanee Insured For About Quarter Value.

KINGSTON, Ont., Jan. 16. — Although it is impossible to obtain definite figures it is known that only a comparatively small part of the loss sustained in the disastrous fire at Napanee last night is covered by insurance. The building was valued at $40,000 and insured for about one-quarter of the value. The stocks of the Hewson drug store, the Douglas Drug Company, the Selrite Stores, Kelly's grocery, and the furnishings of the Canadian Order of Foresters lodge rooms were totally destroyed.

The origin of the fire was unknown. A call for help was sent to Kingston late last night and a party immediately set out for Napanee, where they rendered valuable aid.

FIFTY-NINTH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE ROYAL BANK OF CANADA

Sir Herbert Holt, President, in Annual Address, Point Out That Improved Situation Abroad, Taken Together With Well-Established Prosperity At Home, Constitutes a Propitious Combination of Conditions Favorable to Continued Progress.

C. E. Neill, General Manager, Reviews Statement, Which Shows Total Assets at $894,663,903, the Greatest in the History of the Bank — Advises Financial Institutions and Firms to Endeavor to Curb Unwise Speculation.

The annual General Meeting of shareholders of The Royal Bank of Canada marked the close of the most successful year in the history of the Bank.

Sir Herbert Holt, in his address, dealt more particularly with general conditions throughout the country, but touched on many developments of great importance, more especially from the standpoint of trade and industry.

Mr. Neill reviewed the growth of the Bank to the foremost position it now occupies and gave to the shareholders an interesting insight into the part the bank is playing in all centres in which it is now doing business.

Sir Herbert Holt, President, in addressing the shareholders, said in part —

"I regret having to announce the resignation of the Hon. R. B. Bennett, K.C., M.P., whose wide knowledge and broad experience, both in the east and west, made his counsel of such great value to the bank. Our loss is somewhat tempered by the realization that his great ability will now be devoted to the services of the country.

"Those who were most careful in their studies of world economic trends were forced to the conclusion that a return to world stability in commerce and finance would be accompanied by such a rising tide of demand for the products of Canada's fields, forests and mines as would assure a prolonged period of prosperity. The steady improvement in agriculture, mining, manufacture and internal and external trade which has characterized the years 1925, 1926 and 1927, has done much to vindicate the good judgment of this leadership.

"It is only natural that this general prosperity should have brought about a pervading spirit of optimism. In every part of the country one finds an improved tone in business, a more aggressive attitude towards expansion and greater interest in the opportunities afforded by foreign trade. And yet, there are no indications of industrial and commercial inflation. Production is not expanding to a point unwarranted by growth in demand. It is a noteworthy fact that this whole expansion has taken place during a period which has been characterized by a moderate decline in prices. On the whole, the fundamental situation in agriculture, industry and commerce is more stable than at the beginning of the period. However, I think it is necessary to give a word of warning and caution against inflation in securities and excessive stock speculation.

Constructive Policy of Finance Minister.

"In a growing country there is a strong tendency to expand government activities and to increase government expenditures. The Minister of Finance is to be greatly congratulated on reducing various taxes and on cutting down the net debt by $60,000,000 between October 31st, 1926, and October 31st, 1927. While the government should be given full credit for what it has accomplished, it is imperative that all capital expenditures should be kept down to a minimum. No single factor can do more towards maintaining stable prosperity than government economy and reduction of taxation, and only by this means can the country hope to throw off the gigantic burden of debt incurred during the year.

GENERAL MANAGER'S ADDRESS.

C. E. Neill, general manager, in his address to shareholders, said in part —

"The 58th annual balance sheet, showing the position of the Bank on November 30 last, the end of our fiscal year and the profit and loss account, giving the results of the year's operations, are before you. I think you will agree that both are satisfactory.

"Our total assets are $894,663,903.43, the highest in the history of the Bank, an increase of $128,286,960.19 over last year.

"Increased business activity and the growth of our business have resulted in higher profits, the best in the history of the Bank. Provision has been made for bad and doubtful debts and $1,809,831.87 is carried forward in profit and loss account.

Helping Foreign Trade.

"An interesting item in our balance sheet is the substantial amount of Letters of Credit outstanding. The figures under this heading are usually not a great deal smaller than the combined figures of the other Canadian chartered banks. Our Canadian Letter of Credit business is quite important and in addition our numerous branches in the West Indies and South America have occasion to issue many credits in connection with the financing of foreign trade. A good proportion of our transactions of this nature, however, arises from our operations in the leading financial centres of the world, especially London and New York. Our business of this class is of a particularly desirable and self-liquidating character, so that its growth during the last few years gives cause for satisfaction.

"The increase in deposits is $109,775,802.17, but included in this figure are several large temporary amounts. Apart from these special deposits, the growth has been substantial and shows the steady progress we are making. Here I may say that during the past year we have secured more valuable new accounts and connections than in any previous year.

NECESSITY OF CURBING UNWISE SPECULATION

"In commenting on the annual statement, Mr. Neill referred at length to the importance of call loans which represent loans against stock exchange collateral, not only of the Royal Bank, but of all banks. He pointed out that this was indicative of three things

"1. Increase in the number of securities available to investors.

"2. Increase in the market value of securities.

"3. Increase in speculation.

"In a growing country the development of its resources produces new securities. Prosperous times result in the enhancement in value of securities and for these reasons it is clear that the two first mentioned causes for the increase in Call Loans are at least to some extent justified. As to the third, it is obvious that speculation has reached a dangerous stage. The best-informed financial and brokerage firms are already operating on an unusually conservative basis by calling for increased margins, by declining to open new accounts and by restricting the liability of their customers to reasonable amounts. In times of excessive speculation, the lure of easy profits cannot be denied, but speculation can be checked and held within reasonable bounds by the financial interests, particularly the banks, and bond and brokerage houses."

"Perhaps the most striking item in the statement is the increase of $27,777,630.60 in commercial loans in Canada. In times of great business activity, increased turnover calls for additional banking accommodation. As our business is largely commercial, the substantial increase in loans is the inevitable result of prosperity throughout the country.

"The liquid position of the Bank has been fully maintained. Our holdings of cash, including bank balances, equals 23.12% of liabilities to the public, while our total liquid assets are 57.33% of liabilities to the public, as compared with 54.30% last year.

"Having regard to the opportunities which Canada offers for new developments, we may expect outside investors, particularly in Great Britain and the United States, to continue to send their money to this country. The unfortunate experiences of some of the British investors who made ill-advised commitments in the boom period preceding the war, undoubtedly affected Canada's reputation in financial circles in the Old Country.

"Everything possible should be done to guard against a repetition of this situation. I strongly urge anyone in Great Britain who has investments in Canada under consideration, to seek the advice of a Canadian bank or a reputable investment house familiar with Canadian conditions. While, in the case of such speculative ventures as mining, neither a bank nor an investment house might be in a position to appraise the prospects of success, they could at least give an opinion on the standing and integrity of those connected with the enterprise."

Uncle Wiggily

To-day's Bedtime Story

By HOWARD R. GARIS

UNCLE WIGGILY AND BUNTY'S TRICK.

(Copyright, 1928, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Nearer and nearer the Wolf and the Weasel crept toward where Uncle Wiggily was blindly groping about, trying to see his way without his glasses. Baby Bunty took hold of the rabbit gentleman's paw.

"Hop along with me," she said.

Mr. Longears tried, but, just as he had said, he slipped and stumbled, falling down more than once. For though Bunty did the best she could, the little orphan rabbit could not see every slippery place and every hole in the snow. So Uncle Wiggily slipped and stumbled. He could not see anything without his glasses.

And the reason he had no glasses I told you in the story last night. He and Bunty had started out to have an adventure. But while Mr. Longears rested and slept on a log, the Sly Weasel crept up and took the glasses right off the bunny's nose without awakening him.

Then the Weasel crept back to the waiting Wolf and the two started to catch Mr. Longears. For the Weasel knew that without his glasses Uncle Wiggily could not see well enough to run away.

"But what if Bunty leads him back to his bungalow as she said she would do?" asked the hungry Wolf.

"He will stumble and fall even if Bunty leads him," chuckled the Sly Weasel.

"But Bunty told him to have no fear—that she would make him another pair of glasses," went on the Wolf. "What about that?"

"Don't let her fool you!" snarled the Weasel. "Baby Bunty is very smart, but she can't make glasses for Uncle Wiggily. Come on!"

So the Wolf and the Weasel crept nearer and nearer to the rabbits and though Bunty did her best, still Uncle Wiggily slipped and fell many times, for he stepped into holes which he could not see without his glasses.

"You had better run along and leave me, Bunty," said Mr. Longears at last. "I am getting old. I am not much use in this world any more. Let me go and save yourself." For Uncle Wiggily could hear, though he could not see, the Wolf and Weasel coming back of him.

"Leave you?" exclaimed Bunty. "No! Never! I shall make you another pair of glasses and then you can see to run away from the Bad Chaps. ave no fear!" Bunty was brave

"But how can you make me another pair of glasses, my dear?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"Out of some thin pieces of ice!" Bunty suddenly answered. "Thin ice is just like glass. Just ahead of us I see a little puddle. It is frozen. The ice on it will be thin and I shall break off two pieces and make your glasses. Then you can see as good as before."

"I hope you are right, Bunty!" sighed Uncle Wiggily stumbling into another snow hole, out of which Bunty helped him.

He could not see without his glasses.

Soon the two hopping rabbits were at the frozen puddle. There was a thin coating of ice over the water. Bunty looked back and saw the Weasel and Wolf coming along. But they were still quite a distance back, for the two Bad Chaps had stopped, more than once, to quarrel over who should have the first bite of Uncle Wiggily's ears.

"I have time enough!" said Bunty. Quickly she broke off some pieces of thin, crystal clear glass and roughly made them in the shape of spectacle glasses. Then she fastened them with some thread she had in her pocket to twigs from the evergreen tree. A smaller twig made the curved nosepiece for the ice glasses and soon they were ready for Uncle Wiggily to put on.

"Why, I can see almost as well as with my regular glasses!" exclaimed the delighted old rabbit gentleman. "Thank you, Bunty!"

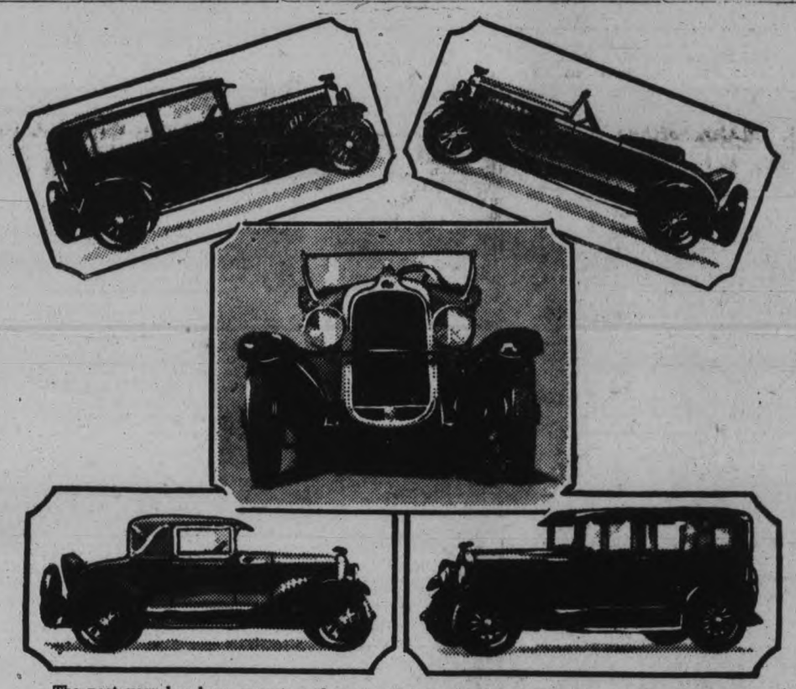
"Don't stop to thank me now!" whispered Bunty. "But hop as fast as ever you can. For the Wolf and Weasel have settled their quarrel now. The Wolf is to have the first bite of your ears if they catch you, he being the bigger, of course. But if you hop fast, Unkie Wig, they won't get either of us."

"Oh, I can hop fast now that I can see where I am going, with these ice glasses you made me!" said Mr. Longears. So he and Bunty hopped very fast and got so far ahead of the Wolf and Weasel that the Bad Chaps gave up the chase.

And then, all of a sudden, as Uncle Wiggily was near his bungalow he and Bunty heard a voice calling:

"Hold on! Wait for me!"

"Dear me! Who can that be?" wondered Mr. Longears.



The past year has been an extremely successful one for the Pontiac six, and the fruits of this success are seen in the new series Pontiac, announced this week, which incorporates numerous improvements and refinements at no increase in price. Campbellford

CAMPBELLFORD, January 16. — Charles Davidson returned yesterday from attending the General Motors convention held in Toronto last week.

Charles Whitehead, St. Catharines, is visiting his parents, Victoria Street.

Joseph Abbott, St. Catharines, is also a guest.

John I. Adams is confined to his bed through severe illness.

The secondary attraction at the art exhibit held in the High School last Thursday and Friday was greatly enjoyed by the majority of the townspeople. On Thursday evening the pupils put on a very attractive program in which they were assisted by some of the senior local talent. On Friday evening, the Assembly Hall was turned into a ball room. There was a small additional charge for dancing. The music was by Leonard and his orchestra.

With the thermometer going lower every hour, the fans are assured of good keen ice for the game with Tweed to-night. This will be the first game in the Trent Valley League to be played here this season, and will be well worth seeing. The first time these teams met, the local players came out on the long end of a six-one victory, but one of their players has since been ruled out of the league for the entire season, and this may make some difference.

LEADERS HAVE NARROW ESCAPE

Many First Teams Win By Close Score in English Soccer.

LONDON, England, Jan. 16 (Canadian Press Cable).—An aggregate of 650,000 people saw the matches in the third round of the competition proper for the historic English Football Association Cup in England and Wales Saturday. Gusty and drizzly weather prevailed for most of the games. The round was not productive of the usual sensations associated with cup ties, though at half time it looked as if several of the first division teams were in danger. However, their superior form enabled them to pull their games out of the fire. Notable escapes were those of Leicester City and Liverpool. The former were playing on the grounds of Hull City and only got the winning goal in the closing stages of a strenuous affair. Liverpool were entertaining Darlington and squeezed in a winning marker a few moments from time. Charlton Athletic looked a beaten team as Bury had them one down near the end, but the London team staged a heroic rally and it won them the reward of the equalizing tally and a draw. Northampton managed to get on even terms with Sunderland seven minutes from the whistle and tie the game. Perhaps the most dramatic game was that between the first division Birmingham team and Peterborough and Fletton, a small club in the Midland Combination. At half time Birmingham had a deficit of one goal to three. After the turn round Bradrod did the hat-trick for Birmingham hitting the target for the third point in the last few seconds. Bolton Wanderers won from Luton Town by the odd goal after a poor display.

Reports from the various matches indicated that the style of play as a rule was of the typical cup-tie type—rough and unscientific. Several "incidents" occurred, the most notable of which was the ordering off the grounds of Stevenson and Henderson of South Shields for talking back to the referee. The fast and overkeen games also produced a number of injuries. The casualty list included: Benton, Blackpool; Dixon, Hull; Howarth, Arsenal; McGiffen, Darlington; James, Preston North End; and Tunstall, Sheffield United. Grey, the Manchester City goal keeper had his right cheek fractured and was assisted off the field and taken to hospital. Austin deputized for Grey between the posts and played a magnificent game, having much to do with his team's close victory over Leeds United.

Criticism of the matches deals most prominently with the dismal failure of Newcastle United, at present League champions. The Novocastrians were completely overplayed by Blackburn Rovers, who ran away with the game in the second half.

The best scoring feat in the ties was that of Hanson, who netted four times for Manchester United against Brentford.

The record gate for the day were the 50,000 who saw the Arsenal defeat West Bromwich Albion at Highbury, London. Other good gates were: Manchester City versus Leeds United at Manchester, 40,000; Millwall versus Derby County at New Cross, London, 40,000; Blackburn Rovers versus Newcastle United at Blackburn, 30,000; Portsmouth versus West Ham United at Portsmouth, 32,000 (a record for the grounds). The smallest attendance came out for the Southport-Fulham fixture at Southport. The home team rather unexpectedly won out by three goals to nil.

Senators Down To Fourth Place in Canadian N. H. L.

BRUINS RALLY IN THIRD TO WIN 4-2 TUSSLE

Lengthens Hub Team's Leadership in American Wheel of League.

SENATORS IN 4TH.

Teams Put Up Hard Battle in the First and Second Periods.

OTTAWA, Ont., January 16 (Canadian Press). — A stirring rally in the final period gave the Boston Bruins a 4-2 victory over Ottawa's Senators in a ruggedly fought National Hockey League intersectional fixture here on Saturday night. The win served to lengthen the point leadership which the hub-team holds in the American wheel of the league, while it tumbled the locals into the fourth place in the Canadian section of the circuit.

The tussle was hard fought, especially in the first and second periods, during which the Ross clan twice gained a one-goal lead, only to see the advantage quickly wiped out with rallies and subsequent tallies by the world's champions. In the third period, however, when the ranks of both sides had slowed up considerably from the previous gruelling pace, the beantown men suddenly spurted and notched a pair of counters to give them the winning margin.

Nets First Goal.

The opening goal for the Bruins was netted by "Speedy" Oliver after a three-man rush sent into the Ottawa goal zone that had been weakened defensively when Hec. Kilrea was chased to the pen for tripping. But the Boston lead was short-lived, for Kilrea had just returned to the ice when he trailed the speeding king Clancy into the Bruin territory to pick up a rebound and slap it past Goalie Winkler.

The blonde Kilrea was also responsible for the titleholder's second tally. Early in the middle period the visitors assumed the lead a second time when Frederickson flipped the puck from the side of the Ottawa cage, and as it struck the Ottawa netman's outstretched stick it ricochetted into the twine. Right after scoring, however, the big Boston centreman tangled sticks so viciously with Frank Nighbor that the Senator centre ice star had to retire with a badly bruised wrist. Frederickson was given a minor penalty, and he was joined in the box by Shore, the latter, tagged for undue roughness. Left two men short, the Bruins were pushed far back, and when Kilrea went down abreast with Finnigan to accept a perfect pass, the weakened Bruin ranks could not stop them, and Hec went through for his second counter.

Colbra Rinks Winners.

The winning rally came in the middle of the final frame right after the regular Boston front rank returned to the play after a five-minute rest. They speeded seemingly at will past the tired Senators and finally when Shore brought Goalie Connell out of his net to make a save, "Chubby" Galbraith went in unnoticed to collar the rebound and shoot it into the unattended cage. Two minutes later Shore let a long cross shot go from the right boards to catch the upper corner of the local citadel for the final goal.

One thing the game did for the Senators was to prove that they have an able relief centre man in Len Grosvenor, youthful home-bred recruit of this season. When Nighbor was rendered hors de combat for fifteen minutes with his bruised wrist, Grosvenor subbed for him and gave an effective display of aggressiveness and back-checking. He was roundly applauded by the gallery of some 6,500 fans in attendance.

LEAFS DEFEAT N. Y. RANGERS

Toronto Shows Team Play and Speed in Big Fixture.

SCORE 6 TO 1.

"Hap" Day, Speedy Defence Man, Nets Three Goals.

TORONTO Jan. 16—Displaying the best hockey they have shown Toronto fans this season the Leafs handed the New York Rangers the worst defeat Lester Patrick's team has suffered for many months when they trimmed it 6 to 1 at Arena Gardens Saturday night before a large and enthusiastic crowd.

The Rangers were not outplayed as much as the score implies but faultless goaltending by Roach and some startling teamplay by the Toronto attack accounted for the margin. It was a wide open game, with both teams concentrating on agressive thrusts at the opposing net, and the Leafs combined better, created more openings and beat the Rangers at their own style of play.

There was a snap and dash about the local players that was a revelation to those fans who saw the same team in action against Canadiens a week before. Duncan was back in his accustomed place on the Toronto defense and Jerry Lowery, promoted from Ravinas, was at left wing in place of Keeling. Although Duncan has only partially recovered from the injury that put him out of the Canadien game, his presence gave the Leafs the necessary confidence, and Jerry Lowery fitted in so well on the front line that Keeling was not missed. In fact, Keeling may have a hard time breaking in again as a regular if Lowery's performance is a sample of what can be expected from him in the N.H.L.

Day Scores Three Goals

It was another big night for "Hap" Day, captain of the Leafs. The speedy defense man netted three goals for the Leafs and played a fine aggressive game throughout. He got both counters that gave the locals a two-goal lead coming out of the first period. His spirit was contagious for the rest of the players were strongly infected with the goal-getting mania and Day's performance was nearly equalled by Herberts, Cox and others of the Leafs. Carson, Lowery, Bailey and Rodden did not shoot any goals, but they were just as prominent in the attack, and Carson in particular had hard luck around the net when he seemingly had Chabot at his mercy.

While most of the goals were earned, Chabot did not look particularly good on a couple of them, although, considering the number of shots he stopped, the percentage that eluded him was small.

TRIO MUST DEFEND TITLES

Within 30 Days, Under Order Issued By National Boxing Association.

THREAT OF SUSPENSION.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Jan. 16.—(Canadian Press.—Boxing champions in three divisions— Mickey Walker, of the middleweight, Joe Dundee, welterweight title-holder, and Sammy Mandell, lightweight king, yesterday were ordered by the National Boxing Association to sign for defence of their titles within 30 days or suffer suspension in 25 member states.

Furthermore, the trio of champions must agree to decision in bouts of qualified contenders of the N.B.A. or risk vacation of their respective titles," President Thomas E. Donohue of the association declared in an ultimatum that has the approval of all states enrolled in the organization. California and New York State alone among the leading boxing centres, are not members of the association.

"Existent regulations regarding certain boxing champions were brought to the attention of the individual states by the association. President Donohue said, and the edict was decided upon unanimous. Contracts must be signed by February 16.

"The members of the association feel, with me, that a period of six months is sufficient for any champion to engage in whatever non-title matches he desires, and that the public demands action from him, as far as the defense of his crown is concerned, at the expiration of that time, President Donohue said.

Tex Disappointed In Sharkey-Heeney Bout Plans Another Elimination Tournament

NEW YORK, January 16 (Canadian Press). — "Terribly disappointed" at the showing of Tom Heeney and Jack Sharkey in their draw bout at Madison Square Garden, Tex Rickard on Saturday decided to stage a final "elimination tournament among five men, preliminary to two championship features this year."

Acting immediately in the plan, Rickard signed Sharkey to meet a suitable opponent on March 12, and engaged Heeney for a bout on March 1. He came to figure with Johnny Risko, the Cleveland Baker boy, to fight Jack Delaney, retired light-heavyweight champion, on February 10. The fifth entrant in the tourney is Paulino Uzcudun, of Spain. All matches, Tex declared, will be 15-round affairs, with the losers definitely eliminated from further consideration as potential title challengers.

From these five battlers, Rickard hopes to draw the first opponent for Tunney with Jack Dempsey standing out as the champion's second challenger. The elimination tournament victor will probably fight Tunney in June. Dempsey's third fight with the big marine is tentatively set for next September at the Yankee Stadium. Rickard is considering a match in London between Heeney and Dempsey next summer.

FOUR TOURNAMENTS ADDED TO GOLF LIST

Dozen Title Events Scheduled For Chicago Next Summer.

CHICAGO, Ills., Jan. 16.— (Canadian Press.)—Four championship golf tournaments were added to the list to be held in Chicago next summer along with the national open and the Walker cup competition, making a dozen title events for this city.

The Western Amateur championship Saturday was assigned to the Bobolink Club for August 20-25, while the Western open was set for July 25-28 at North Shore Club. The Women's Western was awarded at the same time to Indian Hill Club, but selection of the date was deferred. Also the Western junior was credited to Chicago, with time and links to be announced later.

Outside Chicago, there will be only four national meets: The National Amateur at Braeburn, Boston, September 10-15; Women's National, Hot Springs, Va., Sept. 24-29; National Public Links, Philadelphia, July 31-Aug. 4; and the Professional Golfers' championship, as yet unplaced.

Leading Scorers

GLASGOW Scotland. Jan. 16. — Canadian Press Cable. — A record for the league soccer scoring was set up on Saturday by J. McGrory, the Celtic player, during a match between his club and Dunfermline Athletic; McGrory hit the target successfully on 8 occasions.

Games in the Scottish first division on Saturday did not alter the relative positions of the first three teams in the averages, Rangers, Motherwell and Celtic. Rangers won from Airdrie, giving them a terrific beating by seven goals to two. Motherwell could only draw with Kilmarnock and so drop back still further behind Rangers, Celtic reduced their deficit to Motherwell.

Scorers in the first division games were:

Aberdeen, Bruce twice; Smith, Love, Cheyne and Black.

Airdrionians, Muir, Gordon; Rangers, Fleming, twice.

Cunningham, Craig, Muirhead, Archibald, McPhar.

Bo'ness, Oswald, Cochrane, Hibernians, Dunn.

Celtic, McGlory, eight times, Johnson.

Cowdenebath, Lindsay, Johnstone—(though his own goal.) Chambers; Hamilton Academicals Deck.

VARSITY HERE WEDNESDAY TO PLAY THE PETES

Students Will Provide Opposition in Senior Battle This Week.

LEAD THE PARADE.

But Petes Determined To Throw Them For a Total Loss Here.

The drop in temperature is welcomed by nobody more enthusiastically than by the Peterborough Senior hockey club, who are now getting an opportunity to work in some practice for their next game which brings the Varsity team on Wednesday night.

This clash should measure up as one of the most exciting of the season. There is no love lost between the two outfits and in addition to that fact, the Petes need a win to keep in the running, and they are hopeful of taking a fall out of the Students, who at present lead the Senior race. The game in Toronto was a good deal closer than the score indicates, and on the local ice the Petes figure they can throw the Varsity teamwork out of gear and spill the beans by trimming the leaders.

Varsity have a fine goalie in Murray Snyder, and a hard-checking defence in Kirkpatrick and Carrick, the former a mixer who wants to battle all and sundry. The Students line is smart and well drilled.

There are likely to be changes in the Peterborough lineup, for Manager Wright is planning a shake-up that he expects will strengthen the team.

In any event it will be a scrappy battle, easily one of the features of the season.

PAIR WIN BY SMALL LEAD

Beckman-Debaets Victors in Chicago 19th International Bicycle Race.

TWO LAP GAIN.

CHICAGO, Ills., Jan. 16.— (Canadian Press.)—Tony Beckman of Irvington, N.J., and Gerard Debaets of Belgium, last night won Chicago's 19th international six-day bicycle race with a lead of two laps over the team of Bobby Walthour, Atlanta, and Freddie Spencer, Newark, N.J.

One of the casualties of the race was Reggie McNamara, the champion six-day rider of the world, who was competing in his fifty-fifth six-day race. He fell and broke his collar bone Friday. Debaets began the race with his Belgian partner, Goosens, and Beckman started out as a partner of Fred Madden, but both Madden and Goosens were injured and forced out.

Ten of the 30 riders dropped out before the end of the long grind because of injuries in bad spills and only 15 minutes before the finish Debaets went sprawling into the inside rail on the back stretch. He recovered in a few minutes and five minutes later fought to protect his lead from the desperate spurt by Bobbie Walthour. The two leading teams gained a lap on the field in the last three minutes of the race.

Prize money of nearly $10,000 was distributed yesterday among the twenty riders who finished the race and they left for the East.

MAROONS GAIN SECOND PLACE CANADIAN N.H.L.

Defeat Pittsburgh Pirates 4-0 at Montreal With Crippled Team.

STAR PLAYERS OFF.

Victors Unleash Faster Attack in Third Period to Score Three Goals.

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 16 (Canadian Press).—A crippled Montreal Maroon squad obtained revenge for a recent humiliating 4 to 0 defeat at the hands of the Pirates in Pittsburg by beating the same Pirates at the Forum Saturday night by a similar 4 to 0 count. The Maroons were crippled by reason of the loss of two players' services for the game. Siebert, regular defence man, was under suspension for one game, having incurred three major penalties, while Bill Phillips, first string right winger, is out of the game with an injured back.

The victory, combined with Boston's win over the Senators at Ottawa, sent the Montreal team into undisputed possession of second place in the standing of the Canadian section of the N.H.L.

The game was far from a brilliant display. The disrupted local team failed to show consistent cohesion, while the Pirates did a lot of skating which got them nowhere. The first two periods produced rather sluggish hockey. The Maroons scored one in the first period, while the second session was scoreless. In the third period Montreal pepped up the game by unleashing a faster attack which netted three goals.

Montreal were full value for their win and Worters had to give a good goaltending display to keep the local team from netting more than the four counters they did get. On the other hand, the fast-skating Pirates streaked around the ice, but seldom got anywhere near Benedict. Most of their skating was done without the puck. Only on few occasions throughout the game did they get by the Maroon rearguard and on each occasion, they were outguessed by Benedict.

The Pirates made their best scoring bids in the second period when penalties weakened the Maroons at various stages. They were unable to take advantage of extra man-power, however, owing to a strenuous defence put up by the remaining local players.

Nels Stewart led the Montreal attack with two goals, one in the first period and one in the third. Smith and Ward each scored in the third session.

Stewart's first goal came when the local left winger sniped his own rebound following a passing bout with Dutton and Carson. Dutton carried to the Pirate defence and passed to Carson on the left wing. Carson then shot the disc over to Stewart. The latter shot but Worters blocked the drive. He failed to clear, however, and Stewart rushed in and banged the puck into the net.

Hooley Smith came to life in the third period. Eleven minutes after play started he rushed the opposing defence. Both Pirate defencemen rushed at him. Just as the three of them came together, he slipped the puck over to Ward who was uncovered on the right wing. The Montreal sub, who packs a wicked drive, shot straight and true and the Maroons were two up. Forty-five seconds later, Smith dashed past the Pittsburgh rearguard, circled the net and slipped one past Worters into the corner of the net. Less than four minutes later, Stewart and Dutton staged a passing bout to beat the opposing guard, and Stewart scored his second goal of the night.

Close to ten thousand persons witnessed the game.

The teams:

Montreal.—Benedict, goal; Dutton and Munro, defence; Smith, centre; Carson and Stewart, wings. Oatman, Ward and Touhey, subs.

Pittsburgh.—Worters, goal; Burke and McCaffrey, defence; Milks, centre; Darragh and Cotton, wings; McKinnon, Smith, Drury, White, and McCurry, subs.

Officials. — Cooper Smeaton and Alex. Romeril.

BOSTON TIGERS DEFEAT PHILLIES

Retain Leadership in Canadian-American League By 3-1 Victory.

BOSTON, Jan. 16 (Canadian Press) —The Boston Tigers defeated Philadelphia 3 to 1 in Saturday night's Canadian-American Hockey League game, and retained their place at the top of the league. The game was fast and clean, with few penalties. Redding scored for Boston in the first period. Taylor and Mackey scored the other two goals in the second period. Robinson scored for Philadelphia in the last period.

GRADS DEFEAT LONDON TEAM

O. H. A. Intermediate Champions Go Down To Defeat Goals to One.

LOU HUDSON HURT.

LONDON, Ont., Jan. 16. — Toronto Grads, Canada's Olympic hockey team defeated the London 13th Battery O.H.A. intermediate title holders by the score of 9 to 1 before a crowd of 2500 spectators at the London Arena on Saturday night. Judging by the brand of hockey played by the Grads they will undoubtedly win honor for the Dominion at the Olymic games to be played in Switzerland in February.

Hockey enthusiasts of London and western Ontario who turned out to get a glimpse of the Olympic players were greatly impressed with the showing. The forward line worked smoothly, while Ross Taylor and "Red" Porter provided a powerful defence.

"Red" Porter and Dave Trottier were the leading goal getters, scoring three counters each while Taylor, Hugh Plaxton and Fisher contributed with one goal each. Ross Somerville scored the only counter for the Battery.

Porter was the outstanding player of the game. He played wonderful defensive hockey, in addition to making the occasional rush. On several occasions he stickhandled through the entire London team to fire at the Gunners' net. He was given a great hand by the spectators and cheered for his clever playing. Trottier combined with his teammates and was always effective.

Lou Hudson Hurt.

Lou Hudson was injured in the first period when he collided with the boards after being checked by Reynolds. Hudson retired from the game but his injuries were not of a serious nature and he will be able to start in the next game.

RANGERS PASS DETROIT IN RACE

New York Team Wins From Cougars 2-1 on Their Own Ice.

CANADIENS WIN.

DETROIT, January 16. — A packed Olympia saw a hockey game last night that would have rendered 100 per cent. satisfaction but for the fact that the home team lost. New York Rangers and Detroit Cougars offered 12,000 fans a puck-chasing classic as the hirelings of Lester Patrick copped a 2 to 1 verdict to jump ahead of the local talent in the race for division honors. The Rangers had to fight an uphill battle and keep fighting after they had taken the lead to do it. Carson Cooper gave Detroit the first goal early in the initial canto when he grabbed Noble's pass at the New York blue line and hit two inches of the net that Chabot didn't have covered.

That lead held good until two minutes from the end of the middle session. Then William Cook, often termed the right-winger in the business, stepped through the centre of the defence to knot the count with a lone tally. He faked a pass and had Holmes at his mercy before he shot.

It fell to the lot of a pair of the Patrick kids to break up the party. Murdock broke all alone three minutes after the final canto started, and deliberately waited until Paul Thompson caught up to him. Then he flipped the disc across the wing, and Thompson went on at full speed to pick the opposite side of the net.

CANADIENS WIN AGAIN.

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, N. Y., January 16. — If Howie Morenz, the flying forward of Canadiens, wonder team of the present National Hockey League race, could have been chloroformed or shaken out of the line-up in some other manner, the New York Americans would have had a chance to break the winning streak of the league leaders last night. They carried through the first period in the lead, but Morenz came into his flaming own in the last two spasms of fighting, scored three goals, two of them without any assistance from his teammates, and the final score was three to one.

No one can say the Americans, tailenders, and who should by right be despondent, didn't fight hard. They did, and put up a far better battle than the opening clash with the same team back in November. But they couldn't hold Morenz in check. Whenever he gets loose he is a threat, and he proved a double one last night before one of the biggest crowds of the year. Close to 12,000 cheered the combatants, and there was not a quiet moment in the three periods.

We are not going to say a word about "7th Heaven." The hard boiled critics of New York and the trade press have said all that can be said about it. The only trouble is we can give you only a line or two from each review. It would take this four page press sheet to print half the glowing tributes paid this production by reviewers.

DOG SAVES BOYS BUT DIES IN FIRE

Hamilton Youths Roused By Dog's Barking Early Sunday.

HOUSE BURNED.

HAMILTON, Ont., Jan. 16.—Nelson and William Morrison, 421 Jackson Street West, well known ball players, had a narrow escape from death when they were trapped by flames in their bedroom yesterday morning. They owe their lives to a faithful dog, which, surrounded by flames, sounded the alarm but lost its own life.

Nelson Morrison suffered lacerations of the hand when he broke the window glass that he might escape. So close were the flames when the fire was discovered that William Morrison was burned slightly about the face. The boys jumped from the second-storey window and called the fire department. Mrs. E. Morrison, their mother, occupied the front portion of the home and was not in danger. She was rescued when the fire department arrived.

The blaze started in a kitchen pantry and, apparently, it had been burning for some time before the occupants of the house were aroused. Smoke from the fire had filled the building and in a few minutes more the boys would probably have been overcome.

Nelson Morrison was aroused by the constant howling and barking of the dog. Deciding to jump out to investigate he found himself in a hot room with dense smoke pouring in and flames cracking about him. He lost no time in calling his brother and then smashed the glass and jumped to the street. Access to his mother's room was cut off by the tongues of fire and one boy called her from the front of the home, while the other son sent in the fire alarm. Efforts were made to reach the dog, but the blinding smoke and terrific heat made rescue impossible and its howls grew weaker. Its body was found at the foot of the stairs.

The cause of the fire is not known. The damage was estimated at $1,200.

MANY INJURED.

Details Lacking Regarding Casualties of Buenos Aires Cyclone.

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 16 (A.P.).—A cyclone yesterday struck the town of Pilar, 40 miles northwest of Buenos Aires.

Due to the disruption of telegraph and telephone communication, details regarding casualties and damage are not available. It is known, however, that many persons were injured and that there was extensive property damage.

Pilar has a population of 2,000 inhabitants.

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND.

ALADDIN.

Two large audiences have to thank the members of the "Aladdin" Company for one hundred and fifty minutes of delightful entertainment at the Grand on Saturday. This colorful pantomine with a cast chorus and production direct from the old country, was bright, clever and always enjoyable, featured by clever dancing, singing that was pleasing rather than powerful, a wealth of comedy and some very delightful scenic effects. It was capably staged and presented by a cast fully adequate and capable.

Bertha Russell the "principal boy," was a memorable Aladdin, winsome and charming in appearance, wtih a voice that was full of music. Miss Russell was indeed an engaging figure, scoring heavily in everything she did. Some of the most enjoyable song numbers of the pantomine fell to her lot and her rendition of "The Street of Chinese Lanterns," and "Why? Because I Love her," left nothing to be desired. Lillian Barnes as Pekoe, and Florence Cameron as "The Princess" both sang charmingly.

The comedy portion of the production was in good hands with David Lee as the Widow Twankey and Fred Wolgast a scream, as Abanazar, the Wizard. These two capable funmakers made their every moment on the stage count heavily in laugh production and they had their reward in the hilarity that reigned out in front. Wolgast had a voice that was funny no matter what he said.

The specialities introduced were above the average. Harry Gilmore did some capital work as the cat, the Lorenzi brothers staged a laughable bit of burlesque boxing, and the four Wards "quartetted" to excellent advantage, adding a dance number to their second number that was as successful as their vocalism. The Rosebud dancing shows, too, carried off a big share of the honors. Their work was clean cut and snappy throughout, and the precision of their routine won the audience.

"Aladdin" was from all angles a pleasing success and Peterboro would welcome more of the same theatrical fare. And by the way, we are going to get some soon, for F. Stuart Whyte, whose productions were so greatly enjoyed a decade ago, is bringing us a brand new edition of "Dick Whittington," the first showing of that particular pantomine in Peterboro. Mr. Stuart-Whyte gave us in a memorable cycle of handsomely staged productions, "Aladdin," "Robinson Crusoe," and other pantomines, and his return to that field, after a long absence, will be appreciated by those who remember the general excellence of all his presentations.—F.D.C.

AT THE REGENT.

"AFTER MIDNIGHT" SHOWS WHAT LIFE IS REALLY LIKE

Few motion pictures have ever gotten under the crust of life far enough to show picturegoers what life itself is really like.

"After Midnight," Norma Shearer's new starring vehicle for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, now playing at the Regent Theatre, has not only penetrated the crust but has delved deep into the core of life.

For some reason story tellers have always insisted on writing things that never happen, never could happen and even sound illogical in their telling. Monta Bell, who directed "After Midnight," and who wrote the original story, has told a simple story in a simple manner—thereby giving it magnitude and greatness.

A Different Role

He has given to Norma Shearer the character of a young girl whose one great enemy is life. He has witten his story and transplanted it to the screen with nothing of the startling nor illogical in it. Miss Shearer is a young girl whose path is beset by circumstances—not physical heavies.

Lawrence Gray gives a good portrayal of the romantic male role and Gwen Lee sophisticated Gwen, bursts out with a flame of acting that shows all she needs to become a star is opportunity.

NO MORE PILES

Pile sufferers can only get quick, safe and lasting relief by removing the cause—bad blood circulation in the lower bowel. Cutting and salves can't do this—an internal remedy must be used. Dr. Leonhardt's Hem-Roid, a harmless tablet, succeeds because it relieves this blood congestion and strengthens the affected parts. Hem-Roid has a wonderful record for quick, safe and lasting relief to Pile sufferers. It will do the same for you or money back. McDermid & Jury, Bond's Drug Store and druggists anywhere sell Hem-Roid with this guarantee.

District Churches

WOOLER UNITED CHURCH

WOOLER, Jan. 16.—At the United church on Sunday morning the choir sang, "Are you ready for the Kingdom." The responsive reading was from the ninety-second psalm. Rev. H. B. Neal chose his text from the twelfth verse of the ninety-second psalm, "The righteous shall flourish like the palm tree." God's greatest blessing to mankind was the gift of trees, forest-covered earth, stately oak, and pine. The cedar of Lebanon, was part of Solomon's temple. The Psalmist tries to find something for people to follow in the characteristics of the palm, the king of trees. Sixty to one hundred feet in height, graceful, upright, they have three hundred and sixty different uses. The produce, two hundred to four hundred pounds of dates in one season. The seeds are fed to camels, bark for wood. So in strength, we grow in usefulness to the human nature. It is a symbol of victory; ancient monarchs returned, waving palm branches as an emblem of victory. An upright individual may grow from within, grows and develops. His life shall be upright emblems of Christian life, evidences of good fruit, which shall inspire men to higher and nobler life, the righteous shall flourish like the palm tree.

In the evening service, the message was taken from second Samuel, 18th chapter and 33rd verse—David mourning over the death of his son, Absalon.

PRESS ADOPTING HOSTILE ATTITUDE

Japanese Newspapers Comment on United States' Naval Program.

TOKIO, Jan. 16 (A.P.).—The vernacular newspapers are generally adopting a hostile attitude toward the recently announced United States naval program. Asahi sarcastically remarks: "America recommends to France an extension of the treaty outlawing war, yet she recommends for herself an expension of naval building."

The United States is warned by Hochi that she is antagonizing the whole world in carrying out a huge naval expansion program to satisfy her vanity, while Jiji, after lauding the spirit prompting America's reply to France, asks: "But does not the propcsal to carry out the naval expansion disclose the game America has played at the expense of the world?"

The same paper, after considering the expansion proposal as definitely aggressive on the part of America, remarks: "There are few things so ridiculous as the remark made by America that she desires only to bring her naval strength to a high standard regardless of other powers."

JAPAN AGREES WITH U. S. NOTE

Willing To Enter Discussion Toward Treaty For Promotion of Peace.

STATEMENT UNOFFICIAL.

TOKIO, Jan. 14 (Canadian Press). Japanese authorities said unofficially today that Japan agreed in principle with the latest United States note to France on the proposal to renounce, and Japan was willing at any time to enter upon a discussion looking toward a general treaty for the promotion of world peace.

THE BOOKS OF 1927

It has been suggested that more publicity might be accorded in the press by the library to books obtained for the Public Library and in response to that suggestion an attempt will be made in this article to draw attention to some of the salient features of the books purchased for the Library during the past year.

In the matter of fiction there is not very much to be recorded. Many books have been purchased, but it would be hard to pick out three of a really outstanding character, which could be recommended to readers as containing something of genius, yet entirely free of filth. I use the word 'yet' deliberately because a great many people seem to be obsessed with the idea that the greater laxity in regard to manners or morals a writer shows in his work the greater is his cleverness and knowledge of life. When writers of high calibre succumb to the general demand for prurriency in fiction it seems to bode ill for society. But just as the great middle-class of any country is the real backbone of the community so the great body of writers who halt midway between talent and genius, numbering among them such men as Eden Phillpotts, Stanley Weyman, George Gibbs, and others, are saving the situation in fiction. They are well backed up by a formidable array of lesser lights whose talent for arousing the interest of the public lies in the realm of adventure. Writers like Sabatini, Wren, Oppenheim and Fletcher appeal to the majority of readers in any community and it is in books by authors like these that the reading public of Peterborough seems mainly to be interested. Detective stories may not be high-class but they are usually clean and as the finale of such tales generally shows vice punished and virtue triumphant there is nothing much to be said against them on the score of hurtfulness.

In other fields the Library has obtained some first-class books and it is a pleasure to record the arrival of such works as the two volumes of the Life of King Edward VII., the Creville Memoirs, the Life of Queen Mary, Langton's Early Days in Upper Canada, and Romantic Rascals, the last named, however bizarre its title, being full of interesting matter, and giving amongst many others the lives of such interesting characters as the Tichborne Claimant and Cagliostro.

Besides the usual yearly reference books and almanacs the Library now possesses the new Chambers Encyclopaedia, the latest volumes of the Encyclopaedia Britannica and that most interesting source of historical information concerning the early Canadian missionaries, The Jesuit Relations.

Readers and lovers of religious books will find splendid material in the Man Nobody Knows and the Book Nobody Knows, in the Christ of the Indian Road (of which we possess six copies) and in a distinctly powerful book by an Anglican clergyman named Studdert Kennedy, entitled "Lies."

In the realm of philosophy we have several books on psychology and a fine one by Will Durrant called The Story of Philosophy. An encyclopaedia of Old Testament History will be found of great help to Bible students as will the Expositor's Bible in several volumes, edited by the late Sir W. Robertson Nicoll.

The Useful Arts section has been enriched by several first-class books, possibly the most useful being Spon's Workshop Receipts, and Water-power Engineering.

The Peterborough reading public has always evinced a great taste for works of travel and the outshining books in this respect have been Trader Horn, The Revolt in the Desert by Lawrence, and Mother India. Spender's Changing East has also found many readers.

As regards things Canadian we have been specially fortunate in getting many useful and valuable books. A few of the number are given here. The Canadian Citizen; Houses of Romance; A Canadian Manor and its Seigneurs; Canadian Art Movement; Canadian Footprints; Evolution of French Canada; Study in Canadian Immigration; Mercantile Law of Canada; Digest of Canadian Mercantile Law; Brief Canadian Biographies; and the Dictionary of Canadian Biography. There are of course many other books in various classes which should appeal to the dilettante reader or to the student.

Readers are reminded that lists of freshly arrived books are always pasted in the library and can be found on the catalogue cabinet.—F.M.D.

FAMOUS LOVE ROMANCES — Dante and Beatrice (I) — By Nicholas Afonsky

The love story of Dante Alighieri, greatest poet of Italy and one of the greatest poets of any age or place, is the story of a dream of love. Once only in their lives did Dante and Beatrice meet. But the memory of the beautiful girl dominated the poet's thought and life until the day of his death.

Dante was born in 1265 in Florence, then one of the greatest cities of the world. His father, it is thought, was a lawyer. As a boy Dante, sensitive to beauty in every form, taught himself, as he says, "the art of bringing words into verse." He spent much time composing poetry, and reading it.

One day, when he was nine, his father took him to a fete in the garden of his rich and noble neighbor, Folco Portinari. They were wandering about under the trees when the father pointed out young Beatrice, about Dante's age, the daughter of their host. This first sight of his love he never forgot.

In the "Vita Nuova", in which Dante tells the story of his high and holy passion for Beatrice, he describes the little girl as he saw her that day. "Her dress on that day was of a most noble color, a subdued and goodly crimson, girdled and adorned in such sort as best suited her very tender age."

OSHAWA PLAYS PETES TO-NIGHT

Local Juniors Are Confident of Conquering the Shamrocks.

GAME SHOULD BE FAST.

Oshawa Shamrocks, last year's Junior O.H.A. semi-finalists, will be here to-night to take on Lew LeBarr's team in a Junior O.H.A. scheduled game at the Brock street arena. Both teams, after a week's rest, are anxious to get back on the ice and a real struggle is anticipated. The Petes have to win to keep in the running, and after their showing in Oshawa, when they held the Shamrocks scoreless for the first 53 minutes of play, they are confident of a victory to-night.

The Oshawa team is practically in-tact from last year and in the schedule so far this year has not dropped a game. The game starts at 8.30 sharp.

The line up for to-night's game will probably be:

Peterboro: Goal Mein and Gillespie; defence, LeBarr and Calladine; centre, Jones; wings, Kenneally and Allin; subs, Cripps and Shields.

Oshawa: Goal Leveque; def. Harrington and Spanton; centre Little; wings, Rowden and Black; subs, Gray, Whitten and Burr.

Referee: "Ginger" Edgar of Bowmanville.

JOLLY JINGLES By Graham Hunter

COOLIDGE ARRIVES AT HAVANA FOR PAN-AMERICAN CONFERENCE

United States' Delegation Given Salutation as Convoy Enters Harbor.

PLANES CIRCLE BAY.

League of Nations Officials Interested in Conference Which Opens To-day.

HAVANA, Jan. 16 (AP).—The stately Texas, one of the United States' newest and largest battleships, accompanied by the cruiser Memphis and convoyed by six destroyers, glided into Havana harbor with President Coolidge and his official party at 3:55 yesterday afternoon, amid the saluting of cannon at Fort Cabanas and the screeching of sirens and whistles.

The warships bringing the United States delebation to the Pan-American Conference were sighted on the horizon at 2:10 and anxiously watched from all vantage points by thousands of persons at Morro Castle and on roofs of buildings. For a number of miles the Texas and her convoy came in at full speed in order to reach the dock on schedule time. At the mouth of the harbor, a quarter of a mile off Morro point, the ships came to a halt for the formation of a convoy of three destroyers to head the procession. The Texas followed them, then the Memphis, and the three other destroyers brought up the rear.

The firing of salutes opened again when the United States ships were opposite the famous Morro Castle. The national and presidential salutes were fired from Fort Cabanas, while the 16-pounders of the Texas boomed forth a salute to President Machado and to Cuba. The Memphis and the destroyers joined this chorus with smaller guns.

Planes Circled Overhead.

As the ships came to rest in Havana Harbor, the first United States war vessels in the port in many years, a graceful salutation was rendered to the Coolidge transport by three of six Cuban army planes, which had been circling over the waters throughout the day escorting the officials.

Banking into a side slip, the planes dipped before the Texas, on which the presidential colors were flying. These planes had been reporting regularly the progress of the Texas and her companion vessels throughout the day.

Colorful Spectacle.

A cloudless sky, placid blue sea and cooling tropical breezes combined to make the arrival of the presidential party a colorful spectacle. The beautiful Avenida Malecon, which stretches the entire distance of the Havana harbor, was thronged with holiday crowds eager to glimpse President Coolidge and his party when they disembarked. Small boats, steam and sailing yachts and official launches with their gayest flags and bunting flying, dotted the harbor and approached as near the Texas as they could.

A half hour before the battleship steamed majestically into the harbor, President Machado, accompanied by the official reception committee, arrived at the specially-constructed pavilion at Port headquarters. The party included Vice-President and Mrs. Dela Rosa; United States Ambassador Noble B. Judah and Mrs. Judah; the Cuban ambassador to Washington, Colonel Orestas Ferrara, and Mrs. Ferrara; President Vazquez, of the Cuban Senate, and Mrs. Vazquez; all members of the Cabinet and Supreme Court, United States embassy officials and the highest ranking officer of the Cuban government.

When the Texas and her escort of seven warships neared shore, Messrs. Judah and Ferrara, accompanied by Colonel Julio Morales Coello and Colonel Rasco, aides to President Machado, boarded the official launch and went out to meet the distinguished visitors. They were taken aboard the super-dreadnought just as she sailed past the pavilion. Colonels Coello and Rasco officially greeted President Coolidge in the name of the Cuban executive and Mr. Coolidge thanked them in a brief reply.

Party Land.

After the Texas berthed, and her gangplanks were made secure, President and Mrs. Coolidge, Secretary and Mrs. Kellogg, Secretary and Mrs. Wilbur, Ambassadors Judah and Ferrara and President Coolidge's aides and Colonels Coello and Rasco, disembarked and were greeted at the dock by President and Mrs. Machado and the official reception party. The entire assemblage walked to the pavilion, where automobiles were waiting and then began the parade to the presidential palace.

President Machado and Mr. Coolidge rode in the first car followed immediately by Mrs. Machado and Mrs. Coolidge in the second car. Seven other automobiles carried the remainder of the party over the beautiful Avenida de las Niscenes through Havana's most colorful and picturesque seaside section to the palace, where the Coolidges were installed in their nine-room suite.

Soon after they entered the mansion President and Mrs. Coolidge were escorted by their hosts to the main balcony of the palace, where they were greeted by a wildly cheering throng. After acknowledging the ovation by a wave of his hand, Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge retired to their quarters to prepare for the official entertainment programme which will occupy every minute of their time until they leave on Tuesday.

OPENS TO-DAY

GENEVA, Jan. 16 (AP).—The Pan-American Conference, which opens at Havana to-day, will be watched by officials of the League of Nations with much interest with the view of obtaining expressions of sentiment that will serve the League in handling matters of a broad international nature.

League officials give three reasons why they hope the conference will be a success. The first is that the Pan-American Union is pursuing the same general objectives of peace and international co-operation as the League of Nations. The second is that many members of the League and three members of its council are represented in the Pan-American Conference. The last is that the Conference is attempting to do on a regional basis what the League is trying to do on a world-wide basis, such, as for instance, the codification of international law.

It is predicted in League circles that Latin-American members will be in a position to suggest useful steps for the co-operation of the Pan-American Union and League, at the next session of the Assembly.

OLD SOCIETY IS RECALLED

St. George's Society Was Organized By Englishmen Here in 1870.

LIST OF MEMBERS.

In searching through some old papers a few days ago, Edward Courtney, 533 Armour Road, found a copy of the by-laws of St. George's Society, organized in Peterborough in 1870. The booklet is imprinted, "Review Steam Book Printing Office, 1870."

On the back of the book is a notice to Englishmen and the descendents of Englishmen inviting them to become members of the Society. It is pointed out that the annual subscription for ordinary membership is $1 or 5 shillings a year, and that these subscriptions are applied to the relief fund of the Society. Life subscriptions costing $10 were to be invested and the interest only from such investment applied for relief work.

Another service offered through the Society was the placing of applicants for employment and employers are requested to apply to the Secretary for clerks, porters, mechanics, laborers. The Society's office was over Kidds' Book Store on George Street.

It will be interesting to many people who are descendants of those who organized the Society in 1870 to find the names of their forefathers in the following list of members at that time. ANSWER TO ENQUIRY REGARDING COUPONS

A Three Dollar Coupon Book is Good For 22 Weeks, a Six Dollar One for 44 Weeks.

In answer to a telephone inquiry this morning regarding the charge for coupon books with which to enter the contest for those in the habit of paying the newsboys by the week, we wish to point out.

If a subscriber wishes to continue to take The Examiner from a newsboy, he buys a coupon book from The Examiner Office containing 22 weekly coupons for $3.00. This entitles him to 22 weeks of The Examiner by handing the newsboy a coupon each week. These 22 weeks, if paid for at 15c per week, would cost $3.30, but The Examiner gives the newsboy credit for the full $3.30, or 15c on each coupon when it is brought in. The $3.00 paid for the 22 coupon book does not entitle the holder to one half year subscription which he can obtain on paying the amount direct to The Examiner Office, nor does the $6.00 paid for a 44 week coupon book entitle him to a full year's subscription, unless he pays at the office and has our own boy deliver the paper to him, thereby doing without a coupon book altogether.

ST. JOHN'S CHOIR WORK REVIEWED

Business Discussed and Officers Elected at Annual Meeting.

W. GRAY PRESIDENT.

The annual business meeting of the choir of St. John's church was held last Thursday evening, and was marked with a splendid attendance. W. Gray, the president, was in the chair, and the various reports were received and business incidental thereto was transacted in a snappy manner.

The work performed by the choir during the past year, which marked the centennial celebration of the church, was alluded to by F. G. Mann, the organist and choirmaster. He spoke in glowing terms of the assistance rendered by the choir and outlined his program for the present year, particularly mentioning the work for Lent and Easter

Although contributing quite freely to the church building extension and the centenary tablet, the choir fund indicated a most healthy condition.

Much valuable music has been added to the choir library during the past year and some money had been expended on the choir robes.

In this regard much praise is due Mrs. J. J. Howden, the choir mother, whose untiring energy alone made the maintenance of this department possible at such a small cost.

Several new adult members have been added to the roll, and a healthy increase in the boys' ranks was also noted.

Mention was also made of the vocal successes obtained by some of members especially the boys in the musical festival held last fall under the auspices of the local Kiwanis Club.

The annual choir picnic was discussed and on being put to a vote it was found that the old order changeth, preference being shown in favor of a half day picnic. Due recognition was made of the substantial grant given each year by the Wardens for this purpose.

A committee was appointed to make a report regarding this at an early date.

The Vicar, Dr. Blagrave, congratulated the choir on their work and thanked them most heartily for the assistance which they had rendered in the services of the church.

A pleasing feature was the presentation to Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Mann of a fernstand as a token of the high esteem in which they are held by the choir, to which Mr. Mann fittingly replied when expressing his acknowledgment.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Hon. Presidents, Rev. R. C. Blagrave, D.D., and H. W. Morphet.
President, W. Gray.
Vice-Pres., H. Hayter.
Sec.-Treas., Miss R. Quartermaine.
Choir Mother Mrs. J. J. Howden.
Librarians, H. Hayter and W. Lloyd.
Social Committee: Mesdames, D. J. Eldred, G Wesley and Miss W. E. A. Melton.
Membership Committee: H. Spencer and Mrs. W. E. A. Melton.
Sick Visiting Committee: Mrs. H. Burrows, Miss A. M. Price and Miss F. Hutchinson; Messrs Cooke and Gore.

At the conclusion of the business the choir was entertained to a healthy repast for which due praise was given the ladies of the social committee and others who assisted. This was followed by dancing.

NEW PUBLICITY IS ATTRACTIVE

Six Large Transparencies Being Used By Trent Waterways Association.

MADE IN PETERBOROUGH.

Perhaps the most attractive form of tourist publicity yet devised locally was to be seen this morning in the council room of the Chamber of Commerce—six hand colored illuminated transparencies depicting various Kawartha Lakes and Trent Waterway scenes calculated to arrest attention where a less more usual means might fail.

These transparencies are the property of the Trent Waterways Development Association, and will be shipped for exhibit at the National Motor Boat Show in New York City, January 20-28. Such a method of advertising has been well known to the railways, who have, for some years, found them useful in advertising famous resorts.

The initial investment is heavy, though the transparencies, which are interchangeable, may be used for many years in different locations. The pictures are by the Roy studio, the transparencies by the Canadian Government Motion Picture Bureau, and the cases were made by the Peterborough Canoe Company.

The regular monthly meeting of the Peter Robinson Chapter, I.O.D.E. was held in the green room of the Y.W.C.A. on Saturday afternoon, when nomination of officers was the main business of the session. The regent, Mrs. J. McNabb, presided. Reports were given by the secretary, Miss Maida Conner, and the treasurer, Mrs. B. Moore.

In speaking of the charitable work done by the Chapter, Mrs. McNabb said that the society would like to do more in the way of local relief, and referred to Miss Burgess' committee for this purpose. She said that Mr. J. Abraham, who had called Miss Burgess on several occasions with regard to needy families, had complimented the Chapter on its interest in the work, and had remarked that it was the best of all the societies who co-operated with him in such ways, as it was not necessary to call a special meeting and have a lot of business gone through, when urgent assistance was required.

A letter was read from the Armenian Relief Association, informing the Chapter that the work carried on by this organization had been taken over by the United Church of Canada and also referring to the recent establishment in Syria of a colony which will take care of Armenian refugees in future, and obviate the necessity of bringing them to Canada and other places, where they have found a home in late years.

As Peter Robinson, the young ward of the Armenian home at Georgetown who has been looked after by the Chapter for some years, is now in a position to earn his own living it was decided that the donations of $200 yearly to this organization might be discontinued and the money devoted to relief work at home.

Mrs. McNabb read a report of the Provincial Chapter's meeting in Toronto, which asked for donations to several memorials to deceased officers. It was decided to send $5 as a donation towards a memorial for the late Mrs. Clarke Murray, foundress of the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire, this memorial to take the form of a portrait of the deceased lady, to be hung in the Archives Building at Ottawa.

It was also decided to contribute the requested sum of 50 cents towards a tablet to commemorate the memory of Mrs. John Fessenden, foundress of Empire Day, this tablet to be placed in the church at Ancaster.

Other donations were those of $100 to the War Memorial Fund, $5 for cheer donated to the Navy League at Christmas time, $100 to the Well Babies' Clinic and $10 toward the local relief fund.

New members to the Chapter were welcomed, in Miss Meta Meredith, Miss O. Dawson and Miss Isabel Connolly. Mrs. R. C. Cummings, formerly of Lindsay, was also greeted as a new member.

The bridge party to be held by the January-February group, headed by Mrs. W. Belleghem and Miss Mayme Montgomeary, in the Empress Hotel on February 10th, was mentioned.

Nomiantions for officers then followed, tellers being appointed in Mrs. D. Loucks and Miss E. Richardson. Elections will be announced at the next regular meeting of the Chapter.

WEDDING BELLS

GAWLEY-ARMSTRONG.

Havelock, January 12.—A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Armstrong on Wednesday forenoon at ten o'clock when their eldest daughter, Debra Florence, became the bride of Dr. Robert James Gawley of Chapleau, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Gawley of Toronto. Rev. G. E. Lougheed, B.A. of Knox Church, officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, looked charming in a French period costume of phosphorus blue taffeta and carried a bouquet of sweetheart roses, lily-of-the-valley and baby's breath.

Following the ceremony, a wedding breakfast was served. The bride's table was centred by the wedding cake and decorated with narcissus, pink carnations and pink candles. The repast was served by Mrs. P. Pincombe, Mrs. H. W. Roche, and Mrs. H. F. McNichol.

Later, Dr. and Mrs. Gawley left for a honeymoon trip to Ottawa, Montreal, New York, Atlantic City and Washington. On their return they will reside in Chapleau. The bride travelled in a frock of grey georgette, embroidered in silver with orchid corsage, French coat of grey suede trimmed with grey squirrel, and hat to match. The groom's gift to the bride was a three-stoned diamond dinner ring.

The out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Gawley, Mr. Ernest Gawley, Misses Grace and Marguerite Gawley, and Mrs. Catherine Rose of Toronto.

ST. PETER'S CATHEDRAL

The dedication and blessing of the Shrine to Saint Therese, the Little Flower of Jesus, was the main event at St. Peter's Cathedral yesterday. This shrine, dedicated to the youth of the parish and of the diocese, commemorates the fragrant life of the young Carmelite of Lisieux, whose short existence on earth was given up to the rigorous routine of the cloister, whose love of God transcended all other feelings and whose one request at death was that she might spend her heaven in remaining close to the earth, to help those who asked for her intercession at the throne of God. This youthful French saint was born in 1873 and entered the Carmelite convent of Lisieux at the tender age of fifteen years. Attacked by tubercular trouble, she died in 1897. Her Beatification took place in 1923 and she was canonized on May 17th, 1925, only twenty-eight years after her death.

These facts, with many others, were recounted by His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, at the dedicatory services last evening, when the Cathedral was packed to capacity for the occasion. The Bishop also referred to the angelic character and life of the Little Flower, to the many miracles attributed to her intercession, and to the fact that she wished always that she might stand as an intermediary between heaven and earth, for penient sinners.

The dedication service was very beautiful. A procession of little girls with white veils, of surpliced altar and choir boys, and of vested priests, with the Bishop in full canonicals, opened the service, proceeding from the vestry door to the shrine of the Little Flower placed at the right hand of the sanctuary railing which surround the high altar and the altars of the Blessed Virgin and the Sacred Heart. The Sodality of the Cathedral occupied the front pews. After the sermon, Benediction followed.

The shrine is in the form of a small altar, placed against the wall. It is made of the same marble composition in pure white, with Italian marble pillars, which is used for the other altars, and a flat crucifix rises above the figures which form the main portion of the upper section. These are life-size representations of the Little Flower, kneeling in profile before the Queen of Heaven, who holds the Infant Jesus on her knee. The little saint is clothed in the brown habit, white mantle and black veil of the Carmelite Order, with rosary and crucifix pendant from her girdle, and her face bears the marks of the intense ascetism and physical suffering which marked her life on earth. With hands outstretched, she kneels before the Blessed Virgin, who, with smiling countenance, white robe and blue mantle, holds toward her the little Saviour. Both of these figures bear golden diadems above their brows. Beneath the feet of the Little Flower are roses, and a shower of roses falls from a long white drape wound about the crucifix, these flowers typifying the "shower of roses" or spiritual favors which was promised by Saint Therese after her death, to those who would invoke her intercession.

Faces of seraphim, with winged heads, peep out from the bars of the crucifix, which bears in its centre a representation of the Holy Face of Jesus, which was one of the main objects of adoration of the Little Flower during her life on earth.

The entire altar is colored to simulate the natural hues of the figures, robes and flowers portrayed, while the white vase bears a large central "T" in black, surrounded by a wreath of white marble roses. Yesterday, vases of roses and a profusion of amber lights added to its loveliness.

And I think of how she died,
To think she could not say good-bye

Honest and true to the end of her days,
Forgotten by some in this world she may be,
But dear to our memories she always will be.

ALDERMEN WANT INFORMATION ABOUT GAS PLANT BUSINESS BEFORE DISCUSSING PURCHASE

Ask Hydro for Statements and Permission to Have Audit and Valuation.

DISCUSS SEWAGE DISPOSAL

Start Additional Works in the Spring—Leave Full-Time M. O. H. to Board of Health.

More information was the slogan of the Aldermen last night. They sat as a committee of the whole Council and appointed a committee to get more information about the revenue, expenditures and value of the gas plant, which the Hydro-Electric Power Commission wishes to sell to the city. As a Board of Works they instructed City Engineer R. H. Parsons to get information from Dr. A. E. Berry of the Provincial Department of Health before going ahead with the construction of digesting tanks and drying beds to complete the sewage disposal plant.

There was a full attendance of Aldermen last night to discuss these two important matters. The committee of the whole sat first, with His Worship Mayor Denne in the chair. He introduced the matter by reading the letter from the Commission asking the city to take up the question. Ald. Greene immediately wanted to know how the prices of gas compare in other cities of the same size as Peterborough. He was told that they are about the same. Ald. Macdonald pointed out that the consumption is decreasing, and the Mayor replied that if the city can buy the plant at a reasonable figure it should be able to reduce the price and get more consumers.

The figures supplied by the Commission when the matter was discussed before showed the capitalization of the plant on the books to be $477,000. The expenditures for 1925 were about $65,000 and the revenue $110,000, leaving a surplus of about $45,000 to be applied on the capital charges. Ald. Greene remarked that some industries have cut down their use of gas since that time and a new statement should consequently be obtained.

To a motion that the Commission should be asked for the figures for 1926 and 1927, Ald. Hamilton suggested that there be added a request for permission to have the books audited independently if the city so desires, and this was added with another for permission to have a valuator go over the plant. The request to the Commission will also ask for the lowest price.

The question of a full-time Medical Officer of Health was left over until the Board of Health can meet. Ald. Ackerman, after advising that the directors of the Chamber of Commerce had endorsed the idea, announced his intention of compiling a survey of the whole matter, to find out in dollars and cents how the city is going to finance the health facilities. Ald. Huffman pointed out the necessity of getting in touch with the Board of Education, and the Mayor informed the Aldermen that the Deputy-Minister, Dr. Bell, had assured a deputation of the department's co-operation in the work.

Ald. Ackerman advised that the Board of Health should go to Oshawa, which, he said, has a very good system in operation.

The Aldermen decided definitely that re-surfacing on pavements must be considered as local improvements and paid for in that way. City Clerk Armstrong's comparison of the pavements to a suit of clothes, as both must be expected to wear out and new ones paid for, seemed apt to the Aldermen. The pavements replaced had lasted longer than the debentures issued for their construction. Ald. Greene added that those who wish to do business on the front streets, where they wear out faster, must expect to pay more. As it was stated, that other cities charge general re-surfacing such as was done on George, Water and Alymer streets to the property affected, it was decided that Peterborough will do the same.

Drying beds to be ready by the middle of April and digestion tanks to be started about that time were required by the city by the Department of Health for the completion of the sewage disposal plant. On this matter Ald. McIntyre was emphatic that the department's engineers must give advice before the city spends any money, as he seemed to fear that they would be arbitrary about the plans. He recalled that they had insisted on the plant now in use, which they had passed as a complete plant, and now more had to be added. The Mayor demurred, pointing out that the department had said the plant should not have been started without its knowledge. Ald. Phelan replied to this that the engineer who had handled the matter at that time but who is now not with the department, had been definite in his instructions and had angered many of

Water Famine Faces New Westminster

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C., January 17 (Canadian Press). — New Westminster was faced with a water famine yesterday as the result of a huge landslide one mile this side of Lake Coquitlam which, it is feared, broke the twenty-four-inch main which feeds the local reservoirs.

Several industrial plants were closed yesterday morning, and, unless relief can be secured by linking up with Burnaby, all plants will be forced to close.

Richmond municipality also is without water, but efforts are being made to secure a supply from Point Grey.

Only four million gallons of water were in the upper reservoir here. Queen's Park reservoir was empty. The sole supply yesterday morning was from Burnaby through a six-inch main, but this would meet only domestic needs.

Cable Conference Opens At London

LONDON, January 17 (Canadian Press Cable). — The empire wireless and cable conference opened here yesterday afternoon under the chairmanship of Sir John Gilmour, M.P., Secretary of State for Scotland. Great Britain was represented by Sir John Gilmour and the Right Hon. Sir Herbert Samuel, Financial Secretary to the Treasury. All the other Dominions and India were represented and also the Crown colonies.

Yesterday's meeting was chiefly concerned with procedure, the principal thorny question being whether regular communiques should be issued to the press or a single statement be issued at the end of the conference. It is understood that the present proceedings will be confidential, as the discussions will include questions of strategy apart from the immediate subject of an agreement between the cable and the wireless companies.

Considerable correspondence has passed between Canada and Great Britain and the other Dominions in reference to the agenda of the conference owing to the differences in the relationship of local telegraphs between Canada and the other Governments, but these difficulties have now been smoothed out.

BOARD OF HEALTH WOULD HAVE SCHOOL BOARDS REPRESENTED; COUNCIL TO SEEK LEGISLATION

Educational Authorities Vitally Interested in Health Matters, Members Think.

FEW CONTAGIOUS CASES.

Ald. C. H. Ackerman Elected Chairman—Will Consider Full time Official.

The local Board of Health at its meeting this morning decided to recommend to the city council that it petition the Provincial Legislature at the coming session of parliament to amend the Public Health Act so that the Board of Education and the Separate School Board may appoint representatives to the municipal health board.

Mayor Denne in discussing the question thought that both the Board of Education and the Separate School Board should be represented on the local body as these two bodies have to deal with many children and their health is most important to the success of education in the city.

Mayor Denne's suggestion was endorsed by Alderman Ackerman and J. J. Turner the other two members present at this morning's meeting.

Alderman C. H. Ackerman on motion of the Mayor and Mr. Turner was elected chairman of the local Board of Health for 1928 to succeed ex-Alderman Hancock Dr. T. W. H. Young was unable to be present as he was attending an executive meeting of the Ontario Medical Association. A. T. Reynolds, the other member, is ill.

Sanitary Inspector Stapleton reported that there are at present eleven cases of infectious disease in the city. There are four cases of scarlet fever and one of chicken pox in the Queen Mary hospital and one case of diphtheria, and five of chicken pox are quartined in their homes.

The chairman and Dr. Young were authorized to arrange for an inspection of the Queen Mary Hospital by the board before the estimates for the year are struck.

The city treasurer was asked for the outstanding accounts of the Queen Mary Hospital and the Sanitary Inspector was asked to furnish a list of the property owners who had been ordered to instal sanitary conveniences.

The chairman asked the co-operation of the board in considering the appointment of a full time M.O.H., and said he would call a special meeting, when he would have the necessary information regarding the situation and the changes necessary in appointing one.

Dr. Waite's milk report revealed that two samples had a slight sediment and in another the percentage of bacteria was high. It was moved by Mr. Turner and seconded by the Mayor that the M.O.H. notify these vendors.

During December one case of sleeping sickness had been admitted to the Queen Mary Hospital. The Sanitary inspector reported that the patient had been able to leave the hospital yesterday.

Aviators Try Again For Endurance Record

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 17.—(Canadian Press).—The trimotored Fokker monoplane 'Spirit of California" took off from Mills Field here at 8.09 a.m. to-day on another attempt to break the world's endurance flight record. Capt. Kingsford Smith, British air ace, and Lieut. George Pond, United States Navy, piloted the plane.

Before the take-off 1,535 gallons of gasoline were poured into the monoplane's tanks. It was forced down once before owing to exhaustion of the fuel supply. The fliers must stay in the air 53 hours 22 minutes 31 seconds to break the world's record.

REPORTERS WAIT PATIENTLY BUT GHOST R EFUSES TO WALK

Creaking of Chair Only Sound Heard in Keating House During Night.

FAMILY NOT SATISFIED.

Men Eat, Sleep, and Talk, But No Ghost Has Shown Up at Four.

THE NIGHT—BY THE CLOCK.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 17. — The citizens of the town who were inclined to treat the ghost story with a pinch of salt will unless there are some further indications, be the ones who laugh last. After an all night vigil, not one indication was observed of anything uncanny, inhuman, or even unusual. Those who waited to give the spectre a royal and hospitable welcome were flatly disappointed. Armed with a battery of cameras and every necessary item of equipment, the group of reporters set in bored expectation which was doomed to disappointment.

Acting on descriptions given by Keating and his wife several chamical tests were made in the high school laboratory by a capable instructor. In the limited time nothing of a satisfactory nature could be discovered. Several colors and as many fumes were generated but the desired combination was not forthcoming.

Former Owner Visits

The previous owner of the farm, Ross MacComb, was a visitor to the Keating family, and was firm in his statement that he has yet to hear or see anything out of the ordinary. Anything further he would not mention.

But the facts are still the same, and the Keatings are as anxious as ever to have the matter thoroughly investigated. Every courtesy was shown to the reporters, from a generous supply of fuel for the stove in the supposedly haunted room to the generous offer of lunch just before the family retired, certain that there were enough able bodied men in the house to give the ghost the necessary reception.

Lunch is Served.

But the press had anticipated a long drawn out affair and had provided a generous supply of sandwiches and coffee.

At two a.m. the lunch was served, and the topic of conversation immediately turned to ghost stories in various parts of the world Occasionally there was a pause while all ears strained to catch the faintest sound. But the only "knocks" were the creaks from the chair in which a reporter of generous proportions reclined comfortably as the time drew near for the transport to arrive to take them back to Campbellford it was not difficult to hear cars driving up to the door.

Dog Stays Away.

The dog has not been seen all night. He may have taken French leave. But the wind continues to howl and the snow comes driving with it. There is not a star in the sky. Although the night should have been ideal, but the spook simply refuses to perform in public, or at least before partial strangers. On two separate occasions there have been no signs of the ghostly habitue. On the first occasion there undoubtedly were mysterious raps heard, but these may have originated from a score of sources. Again, they may have been the final communication before the apparition went into another term of solitary confinement in the unknown world.

Family Still Alarmed.

The fact that there have been no spirit manifestations, is not necessarily conclusive proof that no such being presents itself on occasion. In spite of its failure to appear during the last forty-eight hours, the Keatings are far from satisfied that no more will be heard of it. They still maintain that it will again put in an appearance, but until such time there is nothing to be seen or heard. It has every aspect of being a game of patient waiting and the ultimate reward of virtue.

THE NIGHT—BY THE CLOCK.

(By W. J. Ellis)

Well, dear readers—they always start that way—I'm supposed to give you the ghost story, bit by bit, round by round, or what have you?

You've probably read plenty of description of this place—it's got all the earmarks of a ghost story setting. In fact, all that is lacking is the ghost. Oh, well, it won't be long now. We spect-re to show up any time.

What's that? You question the gender of this particular ghost? So do I.

• • •

We hope to see through this ghost tonight—he's transparent, you know, but so far he's been quite an agreeable one. In fact, he hasn't knocked once. One of the boys suggests that with those iron shoes, he may steel up on us.

• • •

We arrived here about 11.20 p.m. The barrel-shaped object hadn't put in an appearance and so we moved in for the night.

Bulletin of the Wait—Not Wake

It is almost midnight—in fact every minutes it's getting later. When the clock strikes twelve, I'm going to start.

12 Midnight—

No ghost—but the night is far from being an old dog yet. There's a good fire in the little box stove. Maybe if we wait—

• • •

Still waiting

• • •

12.20 a.m.—

First local disturbance comes in unexpected form. Ross McComb enters—he's a former owner of the farm.

A silence

The former conversation is resumed.

12.30—I repeat; No ghost.

12.45—There should be something happening soon now. The fire's burned pretty low and all seven members of the party are huddled around it. If we don't keep the stove warm, it won't keep us from freezing.

1.30—Second verse same song—No ghost!

The hour is one: Wanted — One Ghost. The boys are beginning to lose faith in him. Silence may be golden for some folks, but it's not productive of much story material.

• • •

You know, I hate to mention it, but at the hotel this afternoon—no, yesterday afternoon—there were three cigarettes lighted by one match. So there's another point in the spectre's favor.

1.15 a.m.—In the last quarter of an hour the ghost stock has taken an awful slump. Risking a great deal, but being here to demonstrate that even pressmen can be independent, let me tell you that one of the boys has dropepd off to talk it over with the sandman. A frame-up, including dimmed lights, quick flashes, and rattling of paper is "all shot" by the blissful one, who wakens with a far-away look—he may have dreamed—but that is another story.

1.30 a.m.—There's a sideboard over by the west wall. In the centre of its upper portion there's a frightfully smashed mirror.

But lo! alas and bedarned! Not a single "man, beast, or demon" to corroborate its awful significance. Say, what kind of a party is this?

1.45—Can you imagine anything so ridiculous. Somebody suggests eating. He should be condemned to death — for failure to suggest it sooner.

Coffee, cheese, and meat sandwiches, not spirits or devilcake. There's one thing uncanny—the way that lunch is disappearing. I, well, if you insist——!

2.15—Devotion to duty is a great thing. Just beyond my left elbow is a reporter—on closer inspection, there are two of them—both trying to run off some "copy." Think of it! And not a single sight, sound or smell of the spectre.

2.45—The ghost has the sympathy of the gang—To think that the poor blighter has to chose nights like this to stay out in the cold while we wait for him by a warm (?) fire. False modesty, I calls it.

?????—!!!

There was a sound! Seemed far away, and plaintive, as of a child crying. How it resembles the voice of a child!—Fooled you that time—it was the baby crying in another part of the house. It's a free country. If the kid can't cry in its own house, where in the dickens can it cry?

2.58—Temus figits (That blamed French will pop out).

3.15—He must be coming. It's getting windy outside, and for the first time the awful loneliness of the place impresses these modern Sherlocks. Now don't get me wrong. I did not say Shylocks. Still, there is another hour or so to go. He may blow in.

3.45—Ho! Hum!

3.49½—A series of consecutive Ho Hums.

4 a.m.—That settles it. Our car has come. The spook has failed to spook, not a knock knocked and if anyone can produce a barrel-shaped object that wriggles and rotates, clangs or clanks, he should consult with Mr. Ferguson re a change or two in the contents of his great irrigation scheme products.

And as Tiny Tim remarked—"I cannot tell a lie, Father, I did not see the ghost."

MEDIUM CAUSE OF APPARITION, LADY SUGGESTS

Some Member of Keating Family May Have Unconscious Psychic Powers.

PROPOSES REMEDY.

Affected Person Could Be Found By Trial and Given Nerve Treatment.

Unconscious mediumistic powers as the cause of the phenomena at the Keating farm house in Seymour township are suggested by a local lady, who writes as follows:

"As I have studied psychic phenomena for a number of years in a humble, amateuristic way, I was much interested in your recent account of the case in Seymour.

"The affair bears all the earmarks of mediumistic phenomena, the knockings and scratchings and mist-like appearances being typical of many such authentic cases which have been investigated by the London (England) Society for Psychical Research. The misty substance, called ectoplasm, is believed to be soluble in white light (hence never seen in broad daylight, and to show to the best advantage in red light. It has been photographed very satisfactorily by scientists and has been seen to emanate from the body of a medium. I refer particularly to experiments made in investigating the strange powers of that celebrated medium Eusapia Paladino, a Neapolitan woman. But I have never heard of the magnifying power of this ectoplasm as evinced by the appearance of Mrs. Keating's hand when she immersed it in "the ghost." If this is indeed a new discovery to science, it is one of great interest and probable value.

"When a reliable psychist investigates such cases as that in Seymour he usually finds that a member of the afflicted family is an unconscious medium. Mediumistic powers may be regarded as somewhat abnormal and are frequently developed after an illness or in a time of nervous strain. If the members of the Keating family went away one at a time, the 'ghost' would, if my theory is correct, disappear with one of them, and if he or she, during this absence, indulged in a complete nerve rest, the 'ghost' would not return.

"On sending in this letter I feel as silly as if I sent in an announcement of the correct spelling of 'cat.' My excuse is that although my knowledge is limited to the ABC of the subject, it is amazing how many people have overlooked even that. And it seems a great pity that a family should suffer such horror and a farm house such depreciation in value when the situation might be bettered if the family knew that their experiences are not unique but indeed have hundreds of parallels and there is no cause for such anxiety as would be natural if the appearance were regarded as a lost inmate from the next world.

"On the other hand a psychic explanation is advisable only when a physical one is impossible and it should be remembered that sleet on a window pane creates a convincing illusion of scratching, for instance, and the phenomena might be explained in as ordinary a way."

PREMIER FERGUSON OUTLINES HIS THEORY OF GOVERNMENT AT ROTARY CLUB LUNCHEON TO-DAY

Should Contribute to the Moral and Social Happiness and Material Progress of the People.

PAYING FOR SERVICE.

Premier Points Out That Public Must Understand That They Have To Pay For What They Get.

Members of the Peterborough Rotary Club and many guests listened with rapt attention at the weekly luncheon to-day to Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Premier of Ontario, expound his theory of the science of government, sound a call to men capable of public service to come forward and play their part, discuss some of the problems with which governments have to deal, urge the necessity of a national spirit on the part of Canadians and make an eloquent plea for loyalty to the British Empire.

The Premier's address was eloquent, convincing and non-partisan, and he was followed with a close attention that was the best possible tribute to the effect his remarks were creating on his hearers.

Hon. Mr. Ferguson was welcomed by Past President Fred L. Roy and was introduced by Rotarian V. J. McElderry, who pointed out that the destinies of Ontario were largely in the hands of the honored guest of the day and that these hands were energetic and capable. Rotarian McElderry referred to the great possibilities before Ontario, particularly in the northland, where he was sure coal and iron in commercial quantities would yet be discovered.

The Premier, received with a hearty round of applause, expressed his appreciation of the opportunity to be present and to meet so many citizens of Peterborough. He was, he said, particularly interested in the great work that service clubs were doing in the Province of Ontario.

In casting about for a subject for his address, Mr. Ferguson remarked that he had come to the conclusion that it might be well for him to discuss some of the problems with which governments had to deal. He laid down as his theory of government, whether municipal, Provincial or Federal, that administrations should seek to promote the moral and social happiness of the people and to make it possible for them to achieve material progress.

In reading the biographies of the great men of the early days of Canada, the Premier said that he had been impressed by the patriotic zeal of these prominent citizens and he wondered if the men of to-day were animated by the same unselfish spirit and desire to serve. He doubted it very much. Yet there never was a time when the assistance of good men was more needed in the public service. It was true that other avenues that offered opportunities for material wealth or opportunities for service in a private capacity were now available and claimed many capable men, yet there were thousands of bright-minded men in the country anxious to serve and yet hesitating to come forward. To them the Premier pointed out the need of their services.

Mr. Ferguson then passed on to discuss some of the features of government administration. He emphasized the fact that some of the most vitally important departments of the Provincial Government were non-revenue producing.

The Department of Education was the first mentioned by the speaker. Education was the very foundation of social happiness and progress and there could be no curtailing of the programme by which it was hoped that every child in the Province of Ontario would be given an opportunity to get a fair start in life. The development of citizenship and personality were aimed at in the programme, and surely no one would want to see any of this programme eliminated.

The Department of Health was another vitally important branch of government service from which no revenue was to be obtained, yet this work must go on because health was the basis on which all other personal development must necessarily rest.

The great system of provincial roads were demanded by the people and must be continued and enlarged.

The problem in these and other services was: Where is the money to pay for them to be obtained. Ontario spent $10,000,000 a year in education, $2,000,000 in agriculture, and large sums on other public services which the public insisted on having and which must be provided if the high standard of living conditions was to be mantained in Ontario. And it must be maintained," the speaker declared. "I would not want to see it lowered."

Getting the Money

Discussing the financing of these services, Mr. Ferguson pointed out that only a portion of it could be obtained from the natural resources of the provinces, mines, forests, power, etc. As for the rest, it must be obtained through taxes and Mr. Ferguson emphasized his belief that so far as possible public services should be paid for by the people to whom

Noted Barrister to Retire From Practice

LONDON, January 17 (Canadian Press Cable). — Sir John Simon, K.C., will retire from practice at the Bar on Thursday, thereby closing perhaps the most brilliant legal career known in several generations. Sir John, who is in his 55th year, was called to the Bar in 1899, and was made a King's Counsel in 1908. He was one of counsel for the British Government in the Alaska boundary arbitration in 1903. His income in recent years is reputed to have approximated £50,000 annually. Sir John has been a frequent advocate before the Privy Council, leading in practically almost every big Canadian appeal since Lord Finlay ceased to practice. He appeared for Newfoundland in the Labrador boundary case recently. His last brief on behalf of a Canadian party was the appeal of the Montreal Jews against the decision of the Supreme Court upholding the Quebec Court of Appeals in its ruling that persons of the Jewish faith could not be appointed to the Board of Protestant School Commissioners, and that the Board was not obliged to appoint Jewish teachers in its schools.

SAYS CANADIAN PRODUCE LOSING HIGH RANKING

Mrs. H. M. Aitken Addresses Ottawa Gathering on Canada's Market Standing.

AUSTRALIA GOING UP.

Losing World Trade Through Failure to Maintain Produce at High Quality.

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 17 (Canadian Press).—Canada is losing her world markets through failure to maintain her produce at a high quality, Mrs. H. M. Aitken, of the Institute Branch, Ontario Department of Agriculture, declared yesterday in addressing the Ottawa branch of the National Council of Women. Discussing her impression of Canada's standing in the various countries of Europe which she recently visited, the speaker stated that she had found in England a prejudice against this Dominion. On the other hand, Australian goods were being widely advertised. "The prediction of the late Sir Wilfrid Laurier, that the twentieth century would be Canada's has not yet been fulfilled," Mrs. Aitken said.

Wheat Deteriorating

As substantiation of her statement that Canadian produce was losing its former high ranking, Mrs. Aitken told the Women's Council that Canadian wheat is deteriorating. "last year alone growers of the Dominion having lost $9,000,000 because of dirty wheat."

Canadian butter which was sent to the Dairy Show in England was not of uniform quality and was salted too much, the speaker continued.

Mrs. Aitken pointed out, however, that Canadian peaches and eggs had gained a coveted position. For a long time Canadian peaches were spoiled in transit to England because of improper packing, but this year, for the first time Alberta peaches sold for three shillings a box more than the best South African peaches, she said. Canadian eggs now topped the market largely owing to the careful system of grading which has been introduced.

"We are growing too fond of expensive living. If there were more simplicity, better production and grading, nothing could wreck the prosperity of this country," Mrs. Aitken concluded.

THRONGS CHEER U. S. DELEGATES AT CONFERENCE

Coolidge Says Would Encourage All Peaceful Efforts For Closer Harmony.

GREETINGS EXCHANGED.

All American Republics Are Represented For First Time in History.

HAVANA, Cuba, January 17 (Canadian Press). — In his inaugural address at the opening of the Pan-American Conference yesterday, President Coolidge of the United States dwelt upon the equal status of the 21 American Republics represented at the conference. He emphasized the need of goodwill and understanding, and assured the delegates that the United States Government was ready to encourage all peaceful efforts that would bring the American family of states into closer harmony.

Mr. Coolidge's words were applauded time and time again, and on occasion, the delegates would rise from their seats and cheer, with cries of "Viva!"

President Machado of Cuba, in his address of welcome, spoke with no less emphasis on the desirability of fraternal understanding among all people, universal peace and the spiritual and moral unity of the nations of the world.

"No person, nor anything," said the Cuban President, "can now oppose the tide that impels the destinies of the Western Hemisphere towards its definite brotherhood under the shelter of the juridical standards that are indispensable for the maintenance of peace."

21 Republics Represented.

For the first time all the 21 American Republics are represented at the conference, and for the first time the President of the United States has attended the gathering, the sixth of the kind ever to be held.

Cuba gave evidence of its intense interest in this conference and the honor it felt in the presence of President Coolidge by whole-souled enthusiasm and the evident desire of President Machado and the Cuban people to pay befitting tribute not alone to the President of the United States, but to all the delegates gathered from far and near.

The National Theatre, where the conference was opened yesterday morning, was crowded to the doors, and all about its precincts crowds were gathered to see and cheer the statesmen who during the coming week will bend their efforts toward a better understanding between the countries, as Senor Machado expressed it, that have been destined for fraternal love by geographical position and history.

Streets Decorated.

Through streets bright with flowers and garlands of green, President Coolidge and President Machado drove to the theatre. The same enthusiastic greeting which met Mr. Coolidge on his arrival here on Sunday and his progress through the city, stirred a responsive chord in him yesterday, and when he stood up to deliver his speech at the opening of the conference, he plainly showed his emotion and evident deep pleasure.

Mrs. Coolidge, with the wife of General Machado, occupied a box off the platform, where the Presidents of the two Republics were seated, with Frank B. Kellogg, United States Secretary of State, and the Cuban Secretary of State. Mrs. Coolidge, on entering the building, was nearly lost in the crowd, but was rescued by her bodyguard and Senor A. Machado, who came hastily to her side. She was greatly amused over the incident.

FIGHT OVER NEW BOOK INEVITABLE

Sir William Joynson-Hicks Predicts Opposition to Prayer Book.

LONDON, Jan. 17. — A new fight over the revised prayer book is inevitable. Sir William Joynson-Hicks, the home secretary, the Bishop of Norwich and Sir Thomas Inskip, the solicitor general have already indicated that they are going to fight to the death in their opposition to the revision, even if watered by the bishops.

Sir Thomas says that unless the substance of the revised book is changed, the impressions of the book will not be altered.

"It would be treating the members of Parliament as if they were children," he added.

Sir William declared that the bishops do not realize that the vote in the commons was an expressed determination not to allow the Church of England to lean towards Catholicism.

CHILD CAUGHT COLD -PNEUMONIA FEARED

Worried Mother Grateful as Clinic Shows How to Give Quick Relief at Home

A safe, sure method of treating colds—so pleasant children love it—is now being recommended for home use by physicians because of its splendid record in hospital, private practice and in so many Peterboro homes.

Vast numbers of Peterboro mothers here have found that this method brings the same quick, sure and lasting relief that came to little Estelle, eight-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Walker. She caught a severe cold while out playing on a drizzly day. Next morning her chest was tight, nose stopped up and temperature was high. By noon congestion was settling in her bronchial tubes.

Mrs. Walker called her doctor. He immediately ordered the child to bed and prescribed hourly doses of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral—a concentrated mixture of ingredients which hospitals have found to be the quickest, safest and surest to end colds. With the very first pleasant swallow she felt its comforting, healing warmth—from her nose passages deep down into her chest. Relief began immediately and in a day or so all traces of the cough and cold were gone.

Doctors find that this hospital medicine does far more than stop coughing instantly. It goes straight to the seat of a stubborn head cold or chest cold. Absorbed through and through the whole system, it quickly checks phlegm, heals irritation and drives out the cold from the nose passages, throat and bronchial tubes.

Even sick children love the flavor—and mothers who have once tried Cherry Pectoral have been delighted to find that it keeps the whole family free from colds and coughs all winter, if used according to the hospital directions in each carton.

CONFESSES TO SLAYING OF KIDNAPED GIRL

Michigan Contractor Arrested For Murder of 5 Year Old Dorothy Schneider.

UNDER CLOSE GUARD.

Identified By Farmer Who Had Unwittingly Assisted Him Escape Posse.

FLINT, Mich., Jan. 17.—(Canadian Press.)—Adolph Hotelling, deacon of an Owosso, Mich., church and contractor, arrested in Owosso yesterday confessed to the brutal slaying of 5 year old Dorothy Schneider, kidnapped and killed at Mount Morris, near here, last Thursday.

Hotelling confessed to sheriff's officers after he had been positively identified by Archie Bacon, farmer, who unwittingly had assisted him to escape after the killing by removing Hotelling's machine from a mudhole.

The knife with which he told officials he had dismembered the child's body was found in his clothing and an old Dodge sedan car in which he drove to the Mount Morris woods with the little victim prior to carrying out of the deed, was found in a garage where attempts had been made to change its appearance by repainting.

The man was rushed to the local jail by officials and according to police immediately went into hysterics, raving about his cell and tearing his hair.

Boasted To Companions.

The arrest, made in Owosso followed information given by carpenters employed in construction of a Flushing, Mich., school house, who declared the man bragged that when the rewards offered for the capture of the girl's slayer was large enough he would supply the necessary information to lead to the arrest.

Deputy Sheriff's Mark Tailthorpe, Henry Munger and Thomas Kelly, of Genesee county sheriff's office, made the arrest. On the trip by automobile from Owosso, deputy sheriffs said Hotelling attempted to cut his throat with the pocket knife he had concealed.

Fear Mob Violence.

Every precaution was taken by city and state police to prevent possible violence from Flint citizens, who have demonstrated during the last few days extreme agitation. Squads of police armed with tear bombs were posted at strategic points, as Captain Oscar Olander, commissioner of state police, Chief of Police C. J. Seavarda and Sheriff Frank Green secured the man's confession.

Dorothy was kidnapped when on her way from kindergarten. An alarm spread by her mother and school officials started a search which resulted in discovery of the mutilated body partially submerged in the waters of a creek in a seldom-frequented section near here. The alarm broadcast started the most intensive hunt in the history of this state with every available member of the state police, Flint city police force, and county officers working night and day to apprehend the slayer.

Planes Used in Search.

Under orders from Governor Fred E. Green, Olander, commissioner of state police took charge under the central command the state was scoured. The assistance of the army first pursuit squadron was secured and three airplanes from Selfridge Field flew low over the terrain searching for the automobile driven by the slayer.

Scores of reports were received from many sections of the United States, adding to the burden of officers checking the "tips."

The confession yesterday followed the funeral and burial of the child on the slope of a hill not far from the spot where she was killed.

Hotelling, formerly a deacon of a local church, was installed as an elder Sunday night. He had presided at a communion in the morning.

Hotelling came to Owosso from Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., nine years ago. Recently he had been out of work and according to his wife, had driven his automobile last Thursday afternoon to look for work. He is the father of five children, including two married daughters.

Mrs. Hotelling insisted that if her husband confessed the murder, he must have been tortured into doing so. "He never did anything wrong in his life before," Mrs. Hotelling cried.

Hotelling returned from his trip to Flint, his wife declared, about 4.30 o'clock Thursday afternoon. There were no spots on any of his clothing, she said, and he had expressed horror at the deed.

The confessed slayer was arrested at his home and, according to witnesses, expressed fright when taken into custody.

BURIED ALIVE IN COAL SHAFT

Nine Miners Entombed When Caught Behind Fall of Earth.

DETAILS LACKING.

HAZLETON, Pa. Jan. 17.—(Canadian Press.)—Nine men are entombed in the No. 8 mine of the Lehigh Valley Coal Company at Sheppton, about ten miles west of this city since 2.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon when they were caught behind a fall of earth. No details as to the conditions or safety of the men can be obtained at present.

The mine is in an out-of-the-way location and with all the roads in the region heavily coated with ice due to a sleet storm that is still raging, officials of the coal company and reporters were having difficulty in reaching the scene of the cave-in by automobile early last night.

Conflicting reports have reached the offices of the coal company in this city. One report is that a breast of coal caved in and imprisoned the men, while other reports are that two pillars of coal collapsed and brought down the top of earth and rock and that it may require several days to reach the men.

BURNBRAE CHURCH PROSPERED IN 1927

Congregation Has Surplus After Meeting All Obligations—Membership Growing.

BURNBRAE, Jan. 17.—Practically a complete congregation attended the annual meeting of the Burnbrae Presbyterian Church, held in the church auditorium on Thursday. The church being one that remained Presbyterian by a very small majority when the vote on the union question was taken, it was not the simplest matter to keep it up to its former status, but the general trend of the reports submitted by the various organizations of the church were very satisfactory and show a decided improvement in the church affairs generally. Having long enjoyed the reputation of being one of the most successful churches in the district, the members are greatly pleased to see their church again closely approaching that state.

Before entering into the business of the meeting, the Rev. D. A. MacKenzie was elected chairman and Charles Johns, secretary. The reports which followed were most satisfactory. As a whole they were the best yet presented at any meeting held to date, and displayed an enthusiastic spirit of co-operation that tends toward success. All members were filled with a sense of harmonious optimism and determination to go forward to even greater service for Christ and His church.

After reading the report of the church session, Mr. MacKenzie stated that the people of Canada had every reason to be thankful for their many material and spiritual blessings of the past year. The session paid fitting tribute to the splendid work done by the various church organizations and expressed their appreciation to the choir and all church workers for their faithfulness and services. During the year, sixteen new members have united with the church and the congregation now embraces more than fifty families, making a total membership of approximately one hundred and twenty-four. Considering that this is a rural church, the membership may be considered as unusually large.

The treasurer's report shows that after spending about $168.00 for repairs to the sheds and church, meeting all obligations in connection with the salaries of the minister, caretaker, choir leader, organist and treasurer, the bank balance is $921.80, to be carried over into the New Year.

The Ladies' Aid Society, after spending a considerable sum in redecorating the basement and purchasing supplies for the church kitchen, shows a surplus of $596.11, at the end of the year. The Women's Missionary Society gave $120.27 to the work of missions during the year. The Women's Missionary Society gave $120.27 to the work of missions during the year. The Mission Band of twenty-nine members received a special prize from the Kingston Presbyterial for its high standard of proficiency in the work. The donation to missions for the year was $35.00.

The Sunday School report showed a membership of sixty-five, and one thousand verses of Scripture memorized. There were nine diplomas and certificates awarded for the memorizing of Scripture and the Shorter Catechism. The donation of the Sunday School to missions for the year was $18.00.

The donation of the Young People's Society to missions was $25.00, and the report shows that it enjoyed a good attendance at the meetings all during the year. The amount asked by the Presbytery for missions was raised by the congregation, the total contributions being over five hundred dollars. The cemetery report showed a balance on hand of $35.00.

After all the business for the year had received proper attention, the Ladies' Aid Society served lunch and the meeting ended with a most enjoyable social hour.

Roig Freed By Jury On Charge of Arson

HULL, Que., Jan. 17 (Canadian Press).—Following the return of a "no bill" in the case of John Roig of Paugun Falls, Que., by the Grand Jury of the Court of King's Bench here yesterday, Roig was released by the court of a charge of arson and was immediately liberated. The man was arrested in November following a fire at Paugun Falls, which destroyed six frame buildings.

NEW SYSTEM OF GRAIN GROWING GREAT SUCCESS

Seeds Sprouted and Transplanted—Method Receiving Careful Attention.

INCREASE YIELD.

New Scheme Introduced From China By Way of Germany.

LONDON, Jan. 17. — Much prominence is being given here to a new corn growing method by means of which it is hope that the present average yield of 32 bushels per acre, will reach 130 bushels and that where barley and oats are grown the increase will be proportionately greater. In this connection it is believed that the party of Canadian farmers who arrived at Plymouth recently on a tour of several European countries in search of new agricultural ideas will be particularly interested in the experiments which are about to be made.

System of Transplanting.

The scheme which is being introduced from China by way of Germany, consists of the development of the potentialities of grain and corn by first planting in a carefully prepared seed bed, then transplanting in ordinary corn land by machinery, thus saving nine-tenths of the present hand labor.

Huge Output.

It is said that a single ear of corn winnows out anything between 30 and 40 stems, while grains are heavier by 30 per cent. Moreover it is claimed that if this method of transplanting was practised throughout Britain, the country would cease to depend on foreign supplies of corn, and that agricultural prosperity would be restored.

It is pointed out that the idea is by no means new the idea having been in practice in China for at least 4000 years. Experiments along similar lines in Britain however are new.

He announced his intention of getting to work on them immediately.

Daily News Says There is Wave of Feeling Against Anglo-Catholicism.

LONDON, Eng., Jan. 17.—(Canadian Press Cable).—The Daily News, one of the chief organs of non conformity in Great Britain, which showed a favorable attitude towards the new Book of Common Prayer of the Church of England before its rejection by the House of Commons following its adoption by the House of Lords, says it is steadily growing more evident that the fateful vote of the House of Commons has raised an issue far wider than the merits or demerits of the new book.

"The feeling in the country now represents a great backwash of opposition to Anglo Catholicism in particular and Roman Catholicism in general", The News declares.

Marsh Weir also fell and broke a rib. Although his injury is not quite so painful he will be laid up for some time.

CAMPBELLFORD DEFEATS TWEED 1-0 IN OVERTIME

Only Score of Game Comes After 18 Minutes' Extra Play.

TEAMS EVENLY MATCHED.

Play is Fast With Goalkeepers Contributing Greatly to Low Scoring.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 17.—Campbellford's fast stepping team entered in the Trent Valley Hockey League opened the local season auspiciously last night when they came out on the long end of a 1-0 count in an eighty minute battle with the 1927 League champions, from Tweed. Howell, their hard working left winger, did the trick two minutes before the close when he went down his own rail and lifted a shot that the goalie mussed up. The rubber finally came to rest just inside the Tweed doorstep and the official behind the net signalled the counter that meant the game for the home towners.

New Rink Opened.

Not only did last night's fixture open the hockey season here, but it also marked the christening of Davidson's new arena. It was only fittings, therefore that ceremonies of considerable importance should mark the occasion. While the two teams stood in a line on their respective blue lines, the Campbellford band, Mayor G. A. Kingston, President George Townsend of the Trent Valley League, and other noted citizens gathered in the centre of the rink. A brief address by his worship Mayor Kingston, band selections, and the facing off of the puck by Campbellford's chief magistrate and the game was on.

The invaders well matched the yellow jacketed locals and the first few minutes of play gave rise to the prediction by those "in the know" that the game would be hard fought throughout. With a confidence gained from possession of the League championship of 1927, the Tweed lads went right out to make themselves as troublesome as possible, were accorded an equally determined opposition, and the result was the afore-mentioned eighty minutes of more or less uncolorful but heartbreaking battle with neither coterie able to capitalize on the chances that came at unexpected intervals.

Goalies Were Good.

When a game is so close, it is usually an indirect tribute to the work of the net guardians, or at least, such was the case here last night. Fox, the local iron man, was in great form and though he handled perhaps a slightly lesser number of shots than Quinn, brought the Campbellford fans to their feet time and again, by his splendid saves.

Quinn, presiding over the other cage, turned in every bit as creditable a performance and the shot that beat him was just the break that was bound to come. Lady Luck, and not any margin of the play, turned the tide.

The Play.

From the face off the blue sweatered visitors broke away and Houston tried Fox with a lift from the blue line. Both teams seemed reluctant to open up play and, as a result, the rubber was usually to be found in the centre ice area with the puck carrier failing to get by. There was no organized combination at this early stage and only occasionally were the boys with the big sticks called upon to show their wares.

However, Ingram drew a penalty for an accidental trip, and, playing five men to six, the Cams upset the dope by staging an attack that caused their opposition considerable concern, particularly when M. Geraldi took a trip to the fence for an accidental trip. Ingram came back and the home lads tried hard to capitalize. Close back checking prevented any fast breaks. Houston drew a rest for heavy checking, and the period ended without a score.

Second Period.

Both teams speeded up at the start of the middle session, and it looked as if the tally sheet would come into use. Quinn and Fox were called upon repeatedly to save and the two visiting defencemen were benched for some heavy work. Inexperience around the net on the part of their rivals prevented a score against them. Blute had particularly hard luck when he and Ibey went right in on Quinn, only to be stalled. Ibey and Cowell were getting in some neat back checking, the latter being particularly effective with his poke check. Blue warmed the bench, M. Geraldi followed him, and with the ice less crowded the fans saw the best hockey so far. Failure to follow in for rebounds was the charge laid at the door of both outfits. The period ended without a single counter having been notched.

Third Period.

The third stanza was productive of thrills aplenty, with the Cams starting out in whirlwind fashion. They drove in on the invaders and peppered shots from all angles, but that boy Quinn showed all the qualities of an iceberg and a puck magnet combined. He batted them, slashed them, caught them, and kicked them right back, and held the fort generally while his team mates were untangling themselves. Then play evened up, and from retirement, Fox was called upon to defend his twine box on an increasing number of occasions. There was not much to choose from between the two teams in the dying minutes.

Overtime.

The overtime sessions saw both teams tiring badly, and taking desperate measures to register. Solo rushes featured, and on several occasions the goalies had to come through with something real sensational to keep their outfits on even terms. An unusual incident occurred about halfway through when Houston steamed one in the general direction of the enemy territory. The disk picked out an open window, and without a last farewell disappeared into the night.

Cowell came back on the ice after a temporary lay-up for repairs, and he showed the fans that he had a final kick when he went along his own beat, grabbed a loose puck, and drove it at Quinn for the million dollar goal that gave the home team a start on the right foot, toward the top of the ladder.

MILLBROOK MEN ARE INJURED

Alan Mitchell Has Leg Hurt While at Work—Fred Winslow Thrown.

HORSE STARTS QUICKLY.

MILLBROOK, Jan. 17. — Alan Mitchell, who is working on the new power line being put through from Ottawa to Toronto, and is at present employed in the neighborhood of Markham, was home over the week end following an accident. The motor truck in which some of the officials and a number of the employees were proceeding to their work, was run into by a car coming from the opposite direction, the driver, apparently drowsy after being all night behind the wheel, coming so close that his fender caught the side of the truck. Some of the men were sitting with their feet over the side on which the car struck, and Mr. Mitchell among others had his leg injured.

He expected to return to his work in the early part of this week.

Mr. Fred Winslow met with a painful accident two days ago. When he was leaving the mail at J. E. Allen's on a return trip from the village, his team suddenly started off thowing him backward off the wagon. Retaining one rein in his hands, Mr. Winslow was able to turn the horses into the ditch and bring them to a stop.

Fortunately no bones were broken, but the severe bruising and shaking up mean some days of enforced rest. Dr. H. A. Turner gave the necessary medical attention.

BISON SLUGGER IN BROOKLYN INFIELD

Bisonette Booked to Play First Base for Robinson's Dodgers.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17. — Wilbert Robinson, 61 year old manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, hopes to have something beside a pitching staff to keep him in the race for the 1928 National League pennant.

Consistently brilliant hurling exhibitions by the Dodgers' well balanced staff went for naught last season because the team could not hit and the infield left something to be desired from a fielding standpoint. The Dodgers finished last in the league in both fielding and batting.

Few if any pennant dreams accompany the portly Mr. Robinson's nightly sleep, but he hopes that these new additions will enable the Dodgers to finish higher in 1928 than the sixth that was their lot last season.

With Vance, Petty, Doak, Elliott, McWeeney, Ehrhardt and Clark to call upon, Robinson is assured of as good pitching as any manager in the league will get. The first string catchers generally are rated as the best receiving corps in the circuit.

The outfield, too, seems to be pretty well taken care of. The starting infield probably will see either Bissonette or Babe Herman at first base; Jay Partridge at second; Bancroft at short and Riconda at third.

Ivan Chatowsky, aged 145, and Olga Mariewa, 131, of Moscow, the oldest couple in the world, are engaged to be married.

WAS SO NERVOUS and SHORT OF BREATH COULD HARDLY SLEEP

Mrs. Louise Baglin, Golden Lake, Ont., writes:—"For several years I was greatly troubled with my heart. I was so nervous and short of breath I could hardly sleep at night, and if I did sleep for a while I had bad dreams.

"I managed to keep at my work, somehow, until I began to have dizzy spells which got so bad I had to give up. I used many kinds of medicine, but found no help until I got a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. After the first box I found a great change, and after two boxes I was as well as I could be.

"I told my mother, who had choking sensations, about them and they helped her greatly."

Price 50c. a box at all druggists and dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Chamberlin Fails In Third Attempt

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N.Y., Jan. 17 (Canadian Press).—The third attempt of Clarence B. Chamberlin and Roger Williams to wrest the world's duration flying record from Germany failed yesterday when they were forced down by ice forming on their monoplane after being in the air about three and a half hours.

Chamberlin said he was willing to start a fourth attempt with Williams in two weeks and if necessary he said he would change the dates of his national lecture tour, which is to start this week at Philadelphia.

The fliers dumped 330 gallons of gasoline, landed at Mitchel Field at 4.25 p.m., notified their backer, A. R. Martin, of the sudden termination of their attempt, then flew their plane to a Curtiss Field hangar a mile and a half away to be berthed.

Through 1,300 miles of ether from Hamilton Bay, Labrador, to Hamilton, Ontario, S.O.S. signals, spelling distress at sea, flickered the other night to be picked up on a rude, homemade radio receiving set in the home of Mrs. Roy W. Parke. She recognized their import and on the Morse code being deciphered by a friend familiar with it it was flashed to the Atlantic coast and patrol craft rushed to the aid of the stricken ship, which was towed to port. There is no report of the message being picked up by any radio stations or other private equipment.

The Great Adventure

THIS year, again, five hundred Peterborough youngsters will stride gallantly forth to meet and conquer the threatening ogre of living expenses.

Without experience, with few set preferences in merchandise—and with enthusiasm as their only ally—they will demand from the merchants of Peterborough the inevitable requisites of home-making.

Two hundred and fifty boys will set off for two hundred and fifty jobs with high purpose and renewed determination.

Two hundred and fifty girls, wondering a little, will plan two hundred and fifty homes . . . . and seven hundred and fifty meals a day.

Together, they will excitedly ponder the spending of thousands of dollars.

What kitchen utensils? What furniture? Which curtains? The selection of a rug becomes a problem of infinite dimensions. The buying of a vacuum cleaner is a great adventure! Silverware. Linen. China. Glassware. New food products to meet their divergent tastes . . . . which they stoutly maintain are exactly alike!

Young hopefuls. More alert than any generation the world has ever produced. A generation of readers, trained to recognize advertising as a source of information and a guide to values.

They want two hundred and fifty talking machines . . . . pianos . . . . radios . . . . cars. Some will be able to buy them now. The rest will choose them now.

During this year, the first of wedded life, advertising will give them established preferences in merchandise and in places where they buy it. Familiar store names will spring to their lips . . . . laying the foundation for the buying habits of a lifetime. Next year they will be added to those other thousands who patronize advertising stores as a matter of course.

And The Peterborough Examiner, supreme in its field, is the only medium by which Peterborough merchants can reach these young people just starting The Great Adventure.

RECEIPTS INCREASE.

The income tax collections for the first nine months of the present fiscal year indicate a condition that should give those ardent admirers of the income tax, the Canadian Council of Agriculture, something over which to think.

These figures show an increase of nearly eight million dollars for the period, despite the slash in the tax made in the last Budget.

This showing is a repetition of the experience of the United States where a reduction in the income tax was followed by an increase in the collections from this levy.

The increase noted in the revenue from the income tax in Canada in spite of last year's cut confirms the predictions of many people who pointed out that such a condition could not fail to follow.

The results should encourage Mr. Robb to do some more pruning of the income tax when he brings down his next Budget.

THAT SEYMOUR GHOST.

There is nothing that stirs up the community so much as a lively ghost, and it is natural therefore that the reputed appearance of a striped and barrel-shaped spook in a Seymour farm-house is arousing much interest.

Enterprising newspapers—and that, of course, includes The Examiner—have experts on the job who can be trusted to follow the ghost to his lair and make him say "Uncle."

There is nothing the average newspaperman would like better than to interview one of these spectres and get a first-hand story of conditions across the styx.

One thing is certain, however, these spirits are not those of departed members of the theatrical profession.

That is evident because none of them want publicity—they shun the curious reporter and his notebook, and up to the present no newspaperman has succeeded in pinning one down in a corner and forcing it to answer questions.

If this Seymour spook is of a different type we expect our men on the spot will have a message from him—but we're not making any promises.

Somehow we've got a feeling that the demon will be missing until the scribes fold up their tents and depart.

A FINE ANNUAL.

One of the finest reviews of Canadian conditions during 1927 that has reached The Examiner office is The Monetary Times annual, a copy of which has just arrived.

This issue is of particular interest, dealing as it does with the year of Canada's Diamond Jubilee.

It contains special articles and reviews covering practically every important field of finance, industry and natural resources in Canada.

Supplementing these are numerous statistical compilations which give at a glance the progress of events in the Dominion in 1927 and previous years.

Charts and graphs of various kinds illustrate many of the reading pages.

It is evident that The Monetary Times has endeavored to reflect conditions existing in all parts of the Dominion, and in this connection several special articles dealing with conditions in Ontario have been included, including a special review by Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Premier of Ontario.

This annual number would be worth preserving as an indication of Canadian progress and prosperity, and it reflects credit upon those who were responsible for its preparation.

THE HAMILTON CASE.

Because a prisoner arrested on a charge of being implicated in a Hamilton bank robbery blames whiskey for the crime, The Globe remarks: "If whiskey did it, was it our whiskey, the whiskey which we as citizens of Ontario, through our lawfully appointed agents, sold to Johnston or his associates in crime?"

With all due respect to our esteemed contemporary, there is a good deal of poppycock in the article from which this quotation is made.

The Hamilton bank robbery may have been different in this respect from other crimes, but from all we have read and heard of bandits, robbers and gun-men, whiskey has never been the cause of their criminal actions but merely an accomplice in the crime.

The average bandit fills himself up with whiskey or dope or both to give himself nerve to go through with the job, and if The Globe has been keeping its ears open it would know that this is almost always the case in the United States where prohibition is supposed to prevail.

Why worry then about where the whiskey came from in this Hamilton robbery?

If those implicated needed a stimulant for their nerves before they tackled the crime, they would have got it anyway whether whiskey could be legally sold or not.

TIME'S LESSONS.

(An Editorial for Young People from The Hamilton Spectator.)

Another year has gone by and it is well to reflect upon its lessons, for it is impossible to go through a whole year without adding very much to our store of experiences and the wisdom which comes with those experiences. In every individual life, if we will look back and think, there have been many occasions during the year now ending when opportunities came, of which perhaps the fullest advantage was not taken. So much depends upon the right use of time, that we should always be on our guard not to waste it, and especially not to misuse it. Take time by the forelock, says the old adage, and all who do this are sure to find happiness and success. What is meant by taking time by the forelock? Simply to grasp opportunities directly they appear. Twelve months is a long time, if day by day we employ the hours profitably. It is not the mere passage of the hours which makes up life, but the way we spend those hours as they go by. "We live in feelings, not in figures on a dial," says the poet, and the truth of that fact is not always properly appreciated.

Here we have before us the prospect of another new year, with all its pleasures, its inevitable disappointments and its opportunities for progress and increased enjoyment. What should be our attitude at this time? Not to dishonor the occasion by excitement and efforts at forgetfulness, but rather quietly to remember and to resolve. We have made mistakes in the past year; do not let us repeat them in the coming year. We have neglected to make the most of ourselves; the time is given us to redeem those lost opportunities and to do better in future. Let us make up our mind that the year 1928 will be a profitable year for us—we could form no better resolution than that. Abandon bad habits, and form good ones; where we are weak, let us strive to be strong. Of our own will it is not, perhaps, possible to accomplish all that we desire; but we must draw on those spiritual forces which are always ready to help us when called upon. If we order our lives aright, it will be surprising what progress we shall have made towards the goal by the time another new year comes around. Hold high ideals and endeavor to live up to them, and nothing will be able to prevent this coming year being for us a happy and a satisfying one.

WHY BOYS AND GIRLS LEAVE THE FARMS.

That was an instructive and timely address given by Mr. W. J. Bell, B.S.A., the Principal of the Kemptville Agricultural School, at the Dairymen's Convention on the subject of "Why Boys and Girls Leave the Farms." It is a most important subject not only from the point of view of agricultural production, but also from that of immigration. Is it likely that when good intending immigrants, those most suitable for going on the land, see Canadians leaving their farms, that it will be any inducement for them to settle here? So far as the British immigrants are concerned it would be more likely to make them think of Australia which is already a most formidable competitor for this class with Canada.

Mr. Bell stated that one great reason for the exodus from the farms was the want of money. That we take it means the farmers cannot afford to start their sons on farms of their own. This supports the idea which we have often suggested that some part at least of the money which is annually spent by the Dominion on attracting and settling the people of other nations here should be devoted to finding capital for these farmers' sons to start farming on. That such an idea is feasible is proved by the success of such a plan in settling returned soldiers on the land, many of whom had not been trained to farming. How much more successful would these young trained farmers prove to be. This is a subject which might very well be aired in the Dominion House, and the Provincial Legislatures, as well as in the Press.

Another reason given by Mr. Bell was that there is a lack of social life on the farm. He stated that an occasional social evening or a dance be provided for the young people on the farms. In too many places the dance is the only social activity afforded, and the young people of today need more than that. He felt that fathers and mothers on the farms must be prepared to give financial aid to bring more social entertainment for the young people, as well as providing sports for them in both winter and summer. "We have got to waken up," said Mr. Bell, "or we will hear a great deal more about the boys and girls leaving the farms." Mr. Bell has every opportunity to watch what is going on, and consequently his warning should be regarded. We should like to suggest that the "community spirit" might be more fostered. Why not more community halls? Again, why should not winter sports be more encouraged? We lately suggested that the game of squash is one which is greatly increasing in favor in Great Britain, and as it requires only a small covered indoor space to play it in it would be most suitable for rural districts. We imagine an old barn could soon be made into a decent court. In the summer time the community spirit would attend to baseball, lacrosse and tennis.

Yet another reason given by Mr. Bell is that congenial surroundings are often lacking. To beautify one's home and its surroundings should not only be a duty but a pleasure, and one which should prove very interesting. Trees, flowers and shrubs very soon change a dreary outlook into a beautiful one, and farmers have the land, equipment and fertilizers to do this work with. And Mr. Bell is right when he says that the young farm people frequently have a wrong impression regarding the so-called pleasures of city life, at least that is the impression we gather from his remarks. We are quite sure that there are many city people who would prefer to be on the farms they have left for some reason or another. But it is a truth that life either in the city or on the farm can be made as you wish to a very great extent by yourself, by the exercise of good judgment, industry, energy and the limitations of your desires.—Kingston Whig-Standard.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

It is interesting to note that the Seymour ghost is described as barrel-shaped. A lot of spirits come in that form.

There are five brothers on the United States Olympic hockey team. Wonder why the U. S. authorities didn't choose the seven Sutherland sisters?

These descriptions of new models of automobiles mean nothing to the man on foot except a hint that he'll have to step lively at all times.

If Mr. Robb's next budget is not a success it will not be because he is not being given plenty of advice.

Opportunities to tell Premier Ferguson that he is visiting the home of the big Peterborough Industrial Exhibition will not be lost today.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Jan. 17 (Canadian Press).—The export trade in grain here yesterday was very quiet, there being little demand from foreign buyers at prices that could be accepted by exporters. A moderate amount of business was done in coarse grains with spot and country buyers and prices were unchanged.

Little business was done in Spring and Winter wheat grades of flour but values ruled firm.

The undertone to the market for millfeed remained firm under a continued good demand. The inquiry for standard grades of rolled oats was fair and prices were maintained.

A fair amount of business was transacted in all grades of eggs, and prices were unchanged. The receipts were 1,008 cases.

The trade in potatoes showed no improvement, the demand being only for odd cars to meet immediate wants. The undertone was steady. Sales of car lots of Princes Edward Island Green Mountains were made at $1.15 per bag of 90 lbs; Prince Edward Island White potatoes at $1.05 per bag of 90 lbs; New Brunswick Green Mountains at $1 per bag of 90 lbs in bulk, and New Brunswick White potatoes at 95c per bag of 90 lbs. in bulk, ex track.

A stronger feeling developed in the market for imported beans and prices were advanced fifteen cents per bushel. Car lots of choice white hand-picked sold at $2.80 per bushel, ex-track, and smaller quantities at $2.90 per bushel, ex-store.

The butter market was without any special feature to note owing to the fact that buyers continued to show little interest. Prices ruled steady. The receipts were 300 packages.

The demand from all sources for cheese continued of a limited character and values were unchanged. The receipts were 46 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Ills., Jan. 17 (Canadian Press).—Unexpected decrease of the corn visible supply together with unfavorable weather for the movement of corn, led to higher prices yesterday in the corn market. Failure of a predicted cold wave to appear tended meanwhile to make wheat values easy.

Closing quotations on corn were strong ¾ to 1¼ cents net higher; wheat finished irregular, ¼ cents net lower to a shade advance, with oats showing ½ cent to ⅞ cent gain, and provisions varying from five cents decline to a rise of 10 cents.

Corn prices began to mount as soon as business opened. At no time during the day, even for a brief interval, were they more than ¼ cent under Saturday's close. The final figures yesterday were at the top level reached. Buying was fairly general, toward the end of the day in particular, based to a large extent then on the visible supply falling off both in corn and oats.

Surprise was especially shown over announcement that the corn visible supply had been reduced 103,000 bushels. A decrease is rare at this time of year, and most traders had been looking for an increase yesterday of about half a million bushels. The total corn visible supply in the United States is now 28,570,000 bushels, against 37,065,000 bushels a year ago. Attention was also given to the fact that the Liverpool corn market yesterday closed 1¼ cents higher and that some United States corn was sold yesterday to England. Oats as well as corn had a strong undertone, the oats visible supply decreasing 1,092,000 bushels.

There was considerable spreading of trade between wheat and corn yesterday, wheat being sold and corn simultaneously brought. Besides, world shipments of wheat were large and the amount on ocean passage showed an increase of 3,616,000 bushels as compared with a week back. Export demand yesterday for wheat from North America was slow.

Provisions held about steady, notwithstanding that hog values were lower.

A Thought

WHAT'S WRONG.

Occasionally you hear a business man ask: What's wrong with business?

Then you hear someone say that business generally is prosperous, and right on the heels of this remark someone else asks: But where are the profits?

The next fellow assures you that the total business for 1927 will exceed all previous records, and then he will be followed by the conservative chap who inquires: But how about my line?

It would require many pages with a raft of research work to explain the true business situation, but here is one thought that may help you to solve your own problem.

The difference between dull times and an equal period of prosperity is less than 10 per cent.

During a depression, wise people curtail their expenses while the unwise continue to wonder: What's wrong?

Are you wise?

SPRINGVILLE W.M.S. HEARS FINE READING

Importance of Succession in Leadership Stressed in "Call Joshua."

SPRINGVILLE, Jan. 14.—The regular monthly meeting of the Springville W.M.S. was held on Wednesday in the basement of the church with a splendid attendance.

In the absence of the President, Mrs. Melville Johnston, due to illness in her home, the meeting was successfully conducted by the Vice-President, Mrs. J. Grandy. This was the first meeting that Mrs. Johnston was not able to attend since she became President at the beginning of the year 1927 and consequently it was the first time that Mrs. Grandy has been called upon to fill her office as Vice-President.

The meeting was opened by singing "More Love to Thee O Christ." This was followed by silent prayer, in which the Vice-President requested that the President and her family be remembered and which was concluded by the repeating of the Lord's Prayer in unison.

The Scripture lesson from I. Corinthians, the 13th chapter, was read by the Rev. A. H. McConnachie. Suitable and interesting explanations were made of the different verses and outstanding words and groups of words. This lesson, chosen by Mr. McConnachie, is Paul's psalm of love. It is of interest to note that Paul, the persecuted, should write of love, which is the essence of Christianity. Love of Christ and love of fellowman are the heart of the Christian life; take these away and men no longer have Christian faith. The church of to-day is failing to preach this great truth of love, he said.

This most interesting reading was followed by the singing of "All the Way My Saviour Leads Me."

The roll was then called by the Secretary, Mrs. A. Hunter, and was responded to by Bible verses. The minutes were read and adopted.

The business of the meeting was transacted, Mrs. Hunter being appointed to take Mrs. Johnston's place as delegate to attend the Presbyterial.

A short reading, "Call Joshua," was given by Mrs. Hunter. The text, "And the Lord said unto Moses, Behold thy days approach that thou must die call Joshua," was enlarged upon. The directness of the Lord's statement to Moses was compared with the caution exercised by man in telling a person he must die. "Behold thy days approach that thou must die." Neither was there any avoidance of the delicate subject of succession—"Call Joshua." Above everything, the Lord placed the on-going of the work which Moses had begun. When Joshua received his commission from the Lord, Moses was not found wailing because he had been laid on the shelf and his work was not appreciated. Deuteronomy 31 14 paints a picture which should be on exhibit throughout the ages. It protrays the co-operation of age and youth in leadership—"And Moses and Joshua went and presented themselves in the tabernacle of the congregation." On the same day, Moses wrote a song and taught it to the children of Israel. His song was not of lamentation but of loyalty. To Joshua he gave the personal assurance, "I will be with thee."

God does not count that man's responsibility ends with the days of his life. He is a debtor also to the days after death. No call is more needed in the missionary leadership of to-day than the Joshua call. Why should one deal evasively with himself? Only short-sighted leadership evinces at the inescapable certainty of approaching death. Even for the youngest the working days are few. At the very beginning of any important work there should be training for the leadership which provides for its continuance. There is no glory to the man whose work falls in crumbling ruins when he leaves it. Age should call youth. Experience should enlist and train inexperience. Together, age and youth should present themselves in the tabernacle for the blessing of the Lord. There is no danger of youth running riot if, when Moses presents himself before the Lord, he calls Joshua to go with him, and if, when Joshua faces his tasks, Moses blesses him with the assurance, "I will be with thee." No leader has a right to die until he has called Joshua.

The meeting was brought to a close by the singing of "Onward Christian Soldiers," followed by prayer led by the Rev. Mr. McConnachie.

The ladies present remained for a meeting of the Ladies' Aid. The election of officers took place, resulting as follows: President, Mrs. A. Hunter; Secretary, Mrs. S. S. Staples, and Treasurer, Mrs. William Whitfield.

Mrs. William Whitfield, who has been an efficient treasurer of the Ladies' Aid for many years, read her 1927 report, giving the financial standing of the Society for the beginning of the new year, 1928.

A vote of thanks was extended to the ladies who so willingly gave of their time and strength to clean the church.

Other business discussions followed, and were settled satisfactorily to the majority present.

At the close of the Ladies' Aid meeting many paid their membership fees to the W.M.S. for the new year and envelopes were given out for the monthly collections.

For military reasons, the destination of the reinforcements and the number in the various detachments into which they were divided were kept secret.

8. Contestants may send in a different answer to the puzzle with each remittance, but if one of your answers is correct the money sent in on your other answers will not increase the total value of your prize, and not more than one regular prize will be paid to one family.

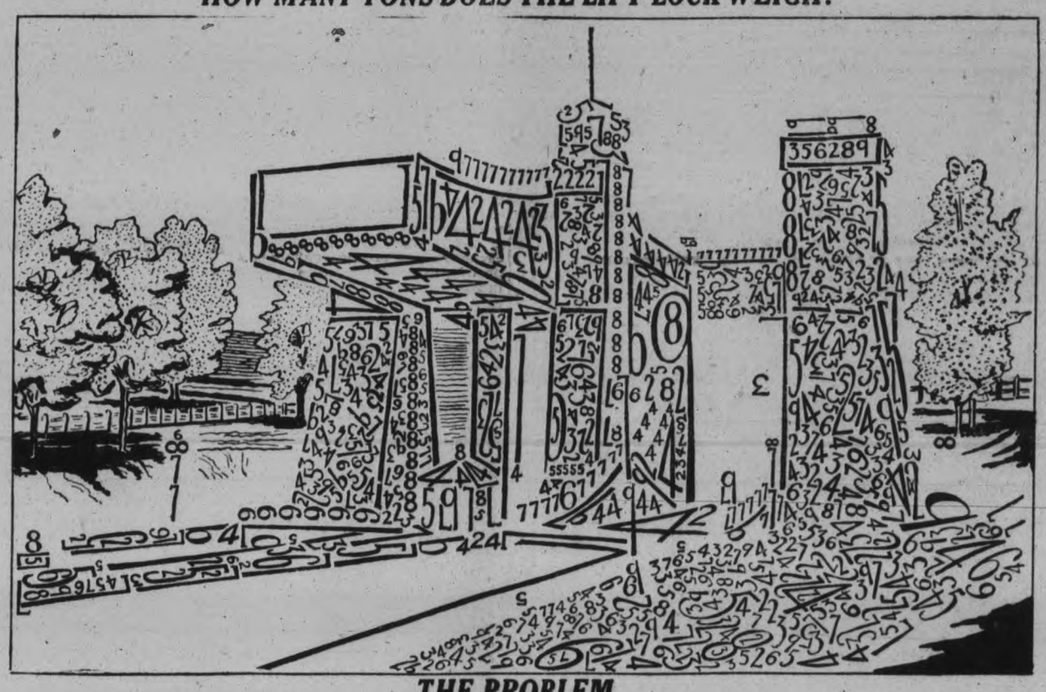
HOW MANY TONS DOES THE LIFT LOCK WEIGH?



THE PROBLEM

The problem is to add together all the figures shown above, which, when added together, represent the total number of tons that the Lift Lock weighs.

The puzzle is entirely free from tricks or illusions, every figure is complete and stands alone. The figures range from two to nine. There are no ones (1) or ciphers (0) in the puzzle. The sixes are curved, while the stem of the nines are straight.

We wish it clearly understood that every figure can be plainly seen. There is nothing hidden in the trees or shadows, but the problem of adding these is a real test of accuracy.

Remember, each figure is added separately. For example, 9777 is counted 9 plus 7 plus 7 plus 7, or, in other words, simply add them as if each figure stood one above the other in a single column.

REMEMBER, NO ONE KNOWS THE CORRECT ANSWER UNTIL THE CONTEST CLOSES

To ensure this we had Mr. E. M. Elliott, County Treasurer, and Mr. Frank Adams, City Treasurer, each erase one or more figures from the original drawing, which they carefully noted and sealed in an envelope and gave to the manager of the Royal Bank for safe keeping until the contest closes.

A TIP ON HOW TO WIN

Take a pencil and put down the numbers as you stroke them out, then add them up. Some suggest that you cut the chart into dozens of pieces, then check them from all sides; or if you wish, try blotting them out with colored ink or pencil. Others think the best way is to pick out all the twos, threes, fours, etc. Any they miss the first time they find later. Or suppose you try taking a combination of figures which, when added together, makes a total of ten. For example, 5 and 3 and 2 make 10. Tens are not only easily added together, but there is less danger of making a mistake.

Important Points to Remember

1. Everyone has the same opportunity. A person sending in only $3.00 in subscriptions has the same chance of winning the first prize as a person sending in more money. The advantage of sending in more money is to increase the value of the first five prizes.
2. This is a contest for Peterborough district, and 50 people from Peterborough or the surrounding district, which The Examiner serves, will win the prizes.
3. Don't forget to answer all the necessary questions on the solution blank.
4. If you collect a subscription from a friend or neighbour, that person can also submit an answer to the puzzle without further payment.

THE JUDGES

In order that each Contestant shall have fair and impartial treatment, we have arranged with Mr. Roland Denne, Mayor of the City and Alderman Nagel Phelan to act as judges for the contest. Any complaints in this connection will be referred to these judges whose decision will be absolutely final.

INSTITUTE MAY CHANGE CLASS

Few Wish To Take Cooking Course at Warsaw—Report Read.

WILL HEAR HISTORY.

WARSAW, Jan. 17.—The regular monthly meeting of the Warsaw Women's Institute was held in the Institute rooms, on Thursday afternoon. The president, Mrs. George Weller, was in the chiar. It was reported that there were not likely to be enough attend the cooking class to make the class worthwhile. Several had asked for a class in basketry, and it was decided to find out the necessary details, and if feasible, to arrange for one.

The department has asked that where possible, two or three branches club together for the summer delegate, but after a little discussion, it was decided that Warsaw, Lakefield and Norwood, were too far apart, and if any two clubbed together, there would be many who could not attend; therefore Warsaw would ask for a delegate to come to the Warsaw branch.

The plowing match is to be held at Warsaw this year. The Institute will put on a supper, and District representative Nelson is to be notified.

Mrs. Thomas Cooper, one of the seventeen members of the confederate board, read the resolutions that had been brought up at the board meeting.

Mrs. Weller gave a report of the convention. She was much interested in Mrs. Lang's address on "Laws for Women and Children," and told the members Mrs. Lang's book, with the revised regulations could now be bought. The new regulations themselves, can be had for ten cents.

Music in the schools was well demonstrated by a class of pupils, not picked ones, just the ordinary pupils of the class, who had a certain definite amount of singing each day.

One of the speakers urged the necessity of French as well as English, as it is very necessary to understand more than one language when away from home. Another spoke of agriculture as moving forward. He considered Christian ministers of first importance, and the next are the Agricultural ministers.

Dr. Helen McMurchy spoke very strongly on the care of mothers and children, and especially of pre-natal care, as a very large percentage of infants could be saved did the mothers have proper pre-natal care. The department has issued "mothers' books," which should be in every young mother's hands, she said.

Another speaker urged collecting and keeping the traditions of the townships, and a cash prize is to be given for the best scrap book on the early history of the township. This is open to any one in Ontario, and there is no reason why some school boy or girl in Dummer could not win. Dummer has good history enough.

Miss Whitton gave a word picture of the League of Nations' Hall at Geneva, its position and architecture, the places of each of the members, and their manner of doing business.

Miss Whitton, and a lady from the United States have devoted many years to child welfare and social problems, and they felt they should be on some of the committees, which were being chosen from mothers, and they saw to it that one of them would be. Other countries are ahead of Canada in providing for child welfare. In Italy, bachelors of twenty-five years and over are annually taxed five dollars towards the child welfare fund.

Another speaker, on the subject of amusements, said that the Institute represents the community, and it is up to the Institute to see that amusements are good. If the mother thinks any form of amusement is not what it should be, she should not let the daughter go alone, but should go with her and see to it that whatever is being done is properly done.

Hon. Mr. Martin gave an address on "Increase and Export." The law now is that weeds must be destroyed, and it is up to the council to see that they are. There has been so much chicken thieving, that it would be well to have no less punishment than imprisonment.

At the February meeting, Mrs. A. F. Choate, first president of Warsaw Institute will give a paper on the history of the Institute since its organization.

Mr. Putnam has written to Mrs. Choate, asking her for a report of the early doings of the Institute.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

A PROFESSIONAL MAN'S HOME

By E. S. Blanchard, B. Arch.

This dignified modern residence is designed primarily for the professional man who practices from his home. To be a successful solution to the problem before the architect, it is required that while the two parts of the house must be directly connected, there must be no possibility of clashes between the two functions which the building accommodates.

That this has been well accomplished is readily evident from a study of the plans. The matter of communication is provided for by a single doorway between the office and hall, and which rather inconspicuously placed as it is, is not likely to be inadvertently opened by the casual guest. As this is the only connection between the professional, and residential rooms, it will be obvious that with the provision of an entrance from the verandah, the privacy of the home is assured.

Entering through this door, the patient, or client, would find a good size waiting room, with a corner fireplace, cupboard, and bookshelves, and having a door giving direct access to the office.

The home-comer, however, would enter through the front vestibule into a square hall, at the sides of which, glazed doors open into the dining room and living room. A bay window with opening box seats, birch floor, and a fireplace with a brick hearth, are items which give the living room its distinction.

The second floor extends over only about one-half the ground floor area, but nevertheless provides three bedrooms, a bathroom with separate toilet, and an abundance of clothes, and linen closets.

Erected with frame walls, and a hot water heating system, this dwelling cost slightly less than $6,000.

Readers desiring further information regarding the plans and specifications of this house should communicate with the architect direct. Address Mr. E. S. Blanchard, B. Arch., Charlottetown, P.E.I.

Sisters over the skin

Kipling's famous "Colonel's Lady and Judy O'Grady," who were "sisters under the skin," are sisters over the skin as well in these days when the latest and most authoritative fashion news is available to every woman in the advertising columns of her newspaper.

Today no woman's clothes need proclaim the thickness of her pocketbook. The advertisements which meet the eye of the woman accustomed to social secretaries and liveried chauffeurs, and guide her in her selection of a wardrobe—likewise greet and guide the young lady who earns her own living. And both may be thankful that advertising has forever banished the dowdy, frumpy "female."

Where will the waistline be? Bows at the cuffs, or not? "V" neck or square? How long—or how short? What materials does Paris favor? What colors are "being worn"? Those questions are answered for everyone—in the advertisements. And with the answers are coupled the names of manufacturers and merchants who make and sell materials, trimmings, accessories, on which you can rely. For those advertised names are advertised only because they are reliable. Otherwise you would probably never hear of them.

You can follow the advertised styles with assurance—and buy by advertised names with profit

New York was very quiet to-day, most stocks showing slight declines. Radio, which we have said was a purchase below 100, sold over that figure after opening at 98½. Hupmobile was the favorite in to-day's trading, selling up over 31. Yellow Cab, which we have said was a buy, did not react, and we consider it still to be a purchase around 33.

The oils were strong and have not yet come into their own. We look for much higher prices for them in the near future.

The reaction should not go much lower except perhaps in a few issues, and would advise holding for much better prices.

The mining market showed some liquidation in several issues, while some held quite strong. Sheritt Gordon was strong at 6.60 bid at close. The worst now seems to be over in the mines, and we think advantage should be taken of the low prices now prevailing in many of the better issues.

The Montreal and Toronto markets were not active, most stocks showing very little gains or losses. Coast Copper predominated a large number of sales being turned in and making a new high of 55. Shredded Wheat was again irregular, making a low of 72, but closed slightly above that figure. Nickel was active, but did not move much either way.

Mining Men Consider Market Is In Good Position

At the opening of this morning's market prices were a little easier, particularly in those stocks which have been showing a certain amount of strength during the past few days, such as Mining Corporation, Bidgood, and Barry Hollinger. Wright Hargreaves appears to meet much resistance at prevailing prices of around $6.00 per share, while Teck holds well around $10.00. It is interesting to note that the expansion and progression reported from these mines is directly opposed to the present market action.

Other market leaders remained quite steady.

Abana was quite firm around $3.35 per share, and we are informed that developments underground at the Abana property promises the development of one of the largest high grade copper gold mines of North-West Quebec. The Abana company is expected to be producing some time during the year 1928.

The bright spot of this morning's market was the Sudbury Mines, Limited, a new issue which made its first appearance on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange to-day. Sudbury Mines is a company holding what are considered promising properties in the Sudbury Area.

There was little change from yesterday's prices in the lower priced stocks. There appears to be a bullish sentiment on Street regarding outlook for mining stocks, and many mining men express the opinion that the mining market is in good technical position for a good upward movement.—F. G. Oke & Co.

Corn Stronger To-day Featuring Exchange

CHICAGO, Jan. 17 (Canadian Press).—Corn developed greater activity and strength than wheat today in the early dealings. Scantiness of country offerings of corn, together with unfavorable weather and bullish Argentine advices, tended to stimulate corn buyers. Opening at ¼c decline to ⅜c advance, corn soon made a decided general upturn. Wheat and oats were also firmer, wheat starting at ⅛c to ½c gain and then hardening a little more. Provisions held steady.

Opening prices were: Wheat, March 129¼, May 130¼. Corn, March 89⅞, May 92½. Oats, March 55; May 56⅝.

General Downturn In Mine Market To-day

TORONTO, Jan. 17. — (Canadian Press.)—The market on the standard mining exchange experienced another shaking down to-day, registering losses in almost the entire list before the noon close. Bidgood came down below the dollar mark again and closed at 89 bid. Wright Hargraves sold off 24 points at 5.75. Teck Hughes was off twenty to 9.85. Mining Corporation after a firm start sold back below 4.50 for a twenty cent loss. Kirkland Lake weakened to 2.44, Beaver to 2.00, and Barry Hollinger to a dollar. Howey went back five at 1.65. The higher priced issues held their ground. McIntyre was steady, Hollinger ten higher, Dome Mines down fifteen cents, and Noranda up five.

In the quarter and fifty cent stocks losses ranged from one to five points and the penny issues sold off slightly.

Reaction In Toronto Affects Many Stocks

TORONTO, Jan. 17. Canadian Press. — Some reaction set in on the Toronto stock exchange this morning and trading decreased in volume. Shredded Wheat was the weakest issue, losing four at 73. City Dairy lost 3½ at 51½ and building products eased ½ at 37. Fractional losses were sustained by Massey-Harris Christie Brown, Brazilian, Brompton, and Canners common and first preferred. Oils tended easier, with British American and International Petroleum easing fractionally, while in the liquors Walkers suffered a point and a half drop at 64. Firmer issues were led by the active Pure Gold Manufacturing, which gained one at 26. Nickel, Page Hersey and Alberta Pacific Grain showed gains but of less than a point.

New York Trade Light But Upturn Resumed

NEW YORK, Jan. 17. Canadian Press. — Selling pressure was lifted from to-day's stock market and prices moved up moderately. Trading, however, showed a marked reduction in volume, less than 1,000,000 shares changing hands in the first three hours. Except for a reported struggle for control of Lehigh Valley Railroad, which was without marked effect there were no business developments of importance during the day.

The renewal of call money at 4½ per cent. had a tendency to dampen bullish enthusiasm, although money brokers reported that the undertone of the market was easy. Time money and commercial paper rates held steady.

Metal Market Firm With Prospects Good

TORONTO, Jan. 16.—In a summary of the iron, steel and machinery markets, Canadian Machinery and Manufacturing News makes the following comment this week:

Nineteen-twenty-eight opens auspiciously, with a considerable number of new projects announced, executives al of one mind as to the excellent outlook, and steadily-increasing purchases in the metal markets. The year just past, while excellent in some respects, was very unsatisfactory in others, and it is very likely that this year will see a more even operation of the various units of industry, with no such striking high-lights and shadows.

Vice-president J. D. Jones of the Algoma Steel Corporation announces that plans are well advanced for an enlargement of the corporation's plants at Saulte Ste. Marie to cost from $10,000,000 to $12,000,000. The Corporation has had for some time under advisement the idea of further diversification of its products. The company hope to import only sufficient coal to make coke for the blast furnaces while gases and wastage from subsequent operations will furnish the necessary fuel for the melting of steel and reheating.

Down in the Maritimes, the British Empire Steel Corporation is reported to have sufficient business on hand for the rolling mills to last for the next six months at capacity, while negotiations are in active progress for heavy tonnage orders which, in all probability, will be booked from time to time during the coming months. The company now has 87,000 tons of rail business on its books, and is negotiating for further rail orders in Chili, Jamaica and India.

A number of small orders for locomotives have been placed recently, including four engines for the Alberta Government with the Canadian Locomotive Co. at Kingston. Purchases of street-cars and buses have been considerable, too, so that the car and locomotive builders are in fair shape.

It will probably be a record year for automobile builders. General Motors of Canada report $70,000,000 of new business in 1927—the greatest year in the history of the company. They spent in the 12 months $27,000,000 on raw materials in Canada. It is announced that the Windsor plant of the firm, closed for some time, will be reopened this year.

Orders for the first half of 1928 are being placed freely in the markets, and specifications against contracts are heavy. Prices are firm and unchanged.

What the owners say is the finest and best equipped mining brokerage office in Eastern Ontario has been opened up by the F. G. A large, well-lighted blackboard carries a list of 90 active mining stocks and quotations are continuously received from the Standard Mining Exchange in Toronto over a special wire, recording the doings of the market.

There are plenty of comfortable chairs and the whole office takes on the aspect of a real trading exchange.

The F. G. Oke Company deals exclusively in mining stocks and renders to its clients a complete service from the Standard Stock Exchange, boarding the sale and price of every stock as it is sold on the Exchange.

Mr. Rishor told The Examiner that there would be no hold-up when deals are put through, and the seller will get immediate payment for his selling, and he referred all clients to the Royal Bank for the company's financial standing.

Heard, played in duet with the small musician. This little girl was also a feature in her excellent piano playing, of the concert given recently at the Salvation Army Temple, and her teacher is being complimented on her success.

FIREMEN BUSY ALL NIGHT LONG

Six Big Blazes and Many False Alarms Keep Washington Brigade Out.

HELP SUMMONED.

WASHINGTON, January 17 (Canadian Press). — Five extra alarm fires, interspersed with several minor ones and a few false alarms, threw the national Capital into a state of turmoil last night and early to-day, and led the police to believe fire bugs were at work. The blazes, the first of which began shortly after midnight, continued until after nine o'clock this morning, bringing apparatus from many nearby Virginia and Maryland cities and towns to aid the exhausted Washington crew, and starting a wide search for suspects believed to have deliberately set fire to places and to have turned in false alarms to divert the fire fighters.

So far as the officials know, there were no casualties during the night, although a score of firemen were overcome by smoke. First estimates of the damage ran into hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Hurried investigations by the fire marshals and police led to the belief that one or more fire bugs started the major fires. They were not certain about the half-dozen others, nor could they explain the numerous false alarms that disorganized the fire fighting machine and kept the firemen on a constant procession during the night.

The fifth major fire broke out at six o'clock this morning in the lumber yard at Fourteenth and West Streets. Five alarms summoned the tired firemen, who had been on the go all night. The fire tied up traffic in the north-west residential section, and thousands of workers were forced to walk or take automobiles to their places of business.

Inspection of the burned areas showed that the fires had done several hundred thousand dollars' damage. Four minor fires broke out after nine o'clock this morning, including one at the Hungarian Legation, where a blind was burned, but none resulted in great loss.

Goal—Snyder.
Defence—Carrick and Kirkpatrick.
Centre—Stewart.
Right wing—Harley.

REMIER FERGUSON

those services were of the most use. People who had members of their families taken care of in institutions for the mentally dificient should pay for their maintenance there if they were in a position to pay. The people who could afford to go to the higher priced shows could afford to pay through the amusement tax for what it cost the government to protect such places. And similarly in the case of provincial highways, the same principle should apply. Should the cost of these highways fall upon the man living in a back township who never saw a highway once a year, yet alone use one or upon the man who merely used the highways occasionally to drive his family to church or into Peterborough to shop? Or should it fall upon the man who, for his own advantage and profit, used the highways daily?

Mr. Ferguson declared that he felt that the cost should be met in proportion to the manner in which the highways were used and damaged, and maintained that the gasoline tax was the most equitable and fair in existence in the province. The revenue obtained from this source was not yet as much as it should be and the Premier gave plain warning that the time was not far distant when it would have to be raised.

The Government believed in providing as economically as possible the services demanded by the people, and they in turn must understand that the services they ask for must be paid for.

Mr. Ferguson then proceeded to urge the development of a national spirit among Canadians. In the consideration of its problems the attitude of a provincial government should be to consider, not only the effect upon this our, province, but upon the country generally. Canadians should learn to think nationally, he declared.

Finally there was the question of our attitude toward the British Empire. Mr. Ferguson struck a high note of patriotic sentiment here as he reminded his hearers of what they owed to that Empire, and how important the British Empire was to the progress of civilization. He asked his audience to picture the chaotic condition that would immediately ensue were that Empire to disappear, and stressed the duty of all Canadians, proud of their membership, to remain loyal and true to the Empire.

Rotarian S. R. Armstrong expressed the deep gratitude of the Rotary Club to Premier Ferguson for his kindness in addressing the club and for his inspiring and instructive speech, and the meeting thundered its appreciation of these sentiments.

The Premier was not yet through, however, for President George A. Gillespie of the Peterboro Chamber of Commerce presented the following resolution to him at this stage:

Resolution passed unanimously by the Executive of the Peterboro Chamber of Commerce Monday, Jan. 16, 1928:

"Whereas, resulting from the resurfacing last year of Highway 124, Peterborough to Port Hope—the improvement of the Lindsay-Peterborough Highway, recently taken over by the Department of Public Highways—and the decision of the Provincial Government, Department of Lands and Forests, to this year make necessary improvements to the roadway leading north from Lake Catchacoma to Gooderham, easterly from Gooderham to Bancroft, and westerly from Gooderham to Kinmount, considerable new trade and tourist business has been, and will be in the future, opened up for the district;

"Resolved, That the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce does hereby commend most highly, Premier G. Howard Ferguson, and his government for the interest they have shown in Peterborough and surrounding counties, and does further petition the government to proceed this year with the completion, east of Peterborough, of the proposed Sarnia-Ottawa Highway, forecast by the Department of Public Highways."

"Up to the present I had been impressed with the modesty of Peterborough," said Mr. Ferguson, jocularly in reply to the resolution. "Why, this is more than Denne wanted for the Peterborough Fair. As for this Sarnia-Ottawa highway, I was in hopes that the eastern portion of the road would be completed so that I could use it going to Ottawa. But that will not be for some time yet. So there is no hurry."

Then in a more serious vein, the Premier remarked that this second provincial highway back from the lake front had been favorably considered by the Government, and would be built. He could, however, not give any idea of what would be accomplished in the present year. The value of such highways, he pointed out, in bringing in more tourists was evidenced by the fact that 8,500,000 visitors from the United States had come to Ontario last year. There was reason to believe that this traffic would increase and would be followed by greater investments as American visitors would acquire summer homes on Ontario's chain of lakes, and help to bring prosperity not only to cities like Peterborough, but to the agriculturists as well.

At to-day's meeting Chairman Roy expressed his congratulations to Mayor Denne upon his elevation to the Chief Magistrate's chair, and assured him of the hearty co-operation of the Rotary Club in all his endeavors to better Peterborough. Rotarian Roy also welcomed the officers and members of the Kiwanis Club.

Photographs showing the results of treatment given a local boy through the Rotary Club's crippled children's work were passed round the tables as an illustration of what the club has been doing in this direction.

ST. ANDREW'S AID ELECTS OFFICERS

Mrs. F. L. Robinson Succeeds Mrs. E. H. Wood as President.

The annual meeting of the Ladies' Aid of St. Andrew's United Church was held yesterday in the Ladies' Parlor, with a fairly large attendance. The meeting, with the president, Mrs. E. H. Wood, in the chair, was opened by the singing of a hymn, followed by the Lord's Prayer in unison. The Scripture reading was taken by Mrs. Wood, with responsive reading by those present. The secretary's report was read and adopted, followed by the treasurer giving her report, which showed that a substantial sum of money had been turned in during the year. The secretary, in her annual report, mentioned the various meetings and social activities carried on by the Aid, and the work done around the manse and Sunday School during the year. The passing of one of the most faithful members and enthusiastic workers of the Aid was also mentioned and deeply regretted by the whole society. The retiring president then thanked the members for their hearty goodwill and co-operation afforded her during her term of office, and wished the incoming president the same good wishes and support for the year to come. Mrs. Wood also alluded to the co-operation of the group leaders and thanked them particularly for helping to make the year such a decided success. The election of officers then took place. The convenor of the Nominating Committee, Mrs. Wilgar, reported her slate of officers, which resulted in the following being elected by acclamation:

SENATE FAVORS TARIFF CHANGE

Approve By Heavy Vote Downward Revision of "Excessive" Rates.

HOUSE UNSETTLED.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Jan. 17. — Canadian Press. — By a vote of 51 to 34 the Senate yesterday went on record in favor of immediate downward revision of the "excessive" tariff rates.

Without power to initiate tariff legislation, the Senate formally transmitted a record of its action to the House, which is in somewhat perplexed mood on this question. Some farm Republicans there are prepared to ask for higher tariff on agricultural products, but administration leaders apparently are heeding the opposition of President Coolidge to any tariff legislation at this session.

The Senate acted on a resolution by Senator McMaster, Republican, South Dakota modified to provide for downward revision only of "excessive rate" which was not specified, the resolution was supported by 12 Republicans, one Farmer-Labor, and 41 Democrats.

Against Proposal.

The administration group voted almost solidly against the proposal but it was supported by only two Democrats.

Republicans supporting McMaster in his week's fight for the resolution generally complained of agricultural conditions, but opponents of the proposal insisted that downward revision of the tariff rates, even though other than those on agricultural products, could not assist the farmers.

The six days of debate found Republicans and Democrats generally again fighting the old issues of tariff with the farmer arguing that it principally was responsible for prosperity. This brought a sharp retort yesterday from Senator Robinson, the Democratic leader, who demanded to know where the "prosperity" was. Citing a list of bank failures, he declared there was no such thing as "prosperity."

Under the constitution the House has the exclusive right to initiate tariff legislation. There have been some indications however that some Senators might attempt to attach a rider to the tax bill to change certain tariff schedules.

ANGLICAN GROUP GIVES PROGRAM

Young People's Society Meets in Warsaw Town Hall.

CONGREGATION MEETS.

WARSAW, Jan. 16.—The Young People's Society of Warsaw, met in the Town Hall on Tuesday evening, January 10. The Anglican Guild was responsible for the program and entertainment, and did well. The president, Mr. Alex. B. Currie, was in the chair. There was a good attendance.

After the devotional opening exercises, Miss Mary Rose gave a very interesting paper on the Scots missionary, Mary Plasser, who had determined when but a young girl to be a missionary to Africa. She was called by the natives "the white mother," and did untold good. Her soul was in her work. Fred Crowe read a good paper on "The Opportunities of Youth." Following the paper, there was an interesting discussion, and another hymn was sung. Then came an interesting contest on advertisments. Those who were familiar with the Ladies' Home Journal came off best, as the pictures were mostly taken from that magazine.

After the meeting was regularly closed a social half hour was spent, when the young ladies of the guild served tea, sandwiches and cake.

The next meeting will be on Tuesday, January 24, in the United church basement. The United Church Young People will be responsible.

The U.F.O. Club was not well attended on Wednesday evening. There was some business which the president was very anxious to bring before the members.

Church Members Meet.

The annual congregational meeting of the Warsaw United church was held on Wednesday evening in the church. There was a fair attendance. After the opening exercises, the reports were read. The secretafy's report was read by F. Clements. The treasurer's report, which showed a substantial balance, was read by James Greystock. The only Sunday school report was Mrs. George Taylor's, on her organized class of twenty-four. Mrs. Arthur Edwards read the Missionary report, and Mrs. Taylor read the Ladies' Aid report.

Balloting for officers took place. Re-elected as stewards were Gordon Payne and James. Hawthorne, and elders, E. Hawthorne and Robert Somers; organist, Mrs. George Taylor.

Mr. Herrington explained that the work was entirely new to him. The blue-book of the New United Church is in press now, and will be ready for distribution about the end of the month. He could not find out definitely the new regulations, but read a letter authorizing him to carry on as he had been doing until he got the manual.

The using of envelopes was discussed and T. Clements, U. Payne and J Sargent were appointed to find the feeling of the congregation. Providing for the Anniversary services was discussed, and it was decided that Rev. H. B. Herrington should exchange pulpits with someone else.

Mrs. Herrington suggested that the Ladies' Aid buy the wood, but it was decided that, though the ladies had a right to do what they liked with their money, providing fuel was part of the managers' work.

Mrs. Herrington also suggested getting holders for the communion glasses after use: this, it was decided, would be a good thing.

Mr. Herrington explained conference and presbyterial expenses. There is an annual tax of eight cents per member for this purpose.

Arriving here enroute to Indore, he said the Hindu and the United States girl were still at Nuwara, Eliya, Ceylon and that the former Maharajah was suffering from a heart attack. He might take a fortnight to recover, and then go to France where he owns considerable property.

DRUGS EXCITE THE KIDNEYS, DRINK WATER

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irritation or Backache.

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble because we often eat too much rich food. Our blood is filled with acids which the kidneys strive to filter out; they weaken from overwork, become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache, or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or if you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, begin drinking lots of good soft water and get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flusing any time.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action, it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble, and checks the growth of the germs

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis, and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flue. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

NORTHERN MANITOBA OFFERS BIG DEVELOPMENT PROSPECTS WITH MINERALS AND POWER

C. N. R. Development Superintendent Tells Winnipeg Men About Area.

IN FLIN FLON DISTRICT.

Railway Being Built To Mines —H. B. Line Close To Falls.

Following are the extracts from address on "New Developments Across Northern Canada," given by Cyril T. Young, F.R.G.S., Superintendent of Development C.N.R., before the joint Boards of Trade, of Winnipeg:

"Having dealt with the possibilities of Red Lake and Central Manitoba and having shown the location of the powers on the Nelson and Churchill Rivers a total of 3,100,000 H.P., we come to that section north of The Pas and the Hudson Bay Railway known as the Flinflon-Sherritt Gordon district. Great credit is coming to all who took part in making possible the huge development which will occur in this section. I desire to say, modestly, that my small part in connection with it was the making of the report on the resources of the district, particularly the mining—this report favoring the immediate construction of an 82-mile line of railway to Flinflon and then on to Sherritt Gordon. From my twenty-five years' experience in mining, forestry and settlement, I stated that the country north of the Hudson Bay line, especially along the height of land between the Nelson and Churchill Rivers in this Sherritt Gordon-Flinflon section and northeastward towards Churchill is going to give Canadians another surprise in mining."

. . . .

"While, sir, the ore on these properties is not as high grade a copper ore, affording as large a net return, as the Rouyn, Quebec, ore, yet measurements and sampling show that each of these properties have to-day ore values indicated by diamond drilling three times the total of the developed ore in Rouyn area in 1927.

"Then when you take into your consideration the fact that Rouyn traffic has justified the forty-three-mile Canadian National branch line—that a second railway has been constructed and is now in operation into that camp—that there may indeed be a third; then, sir, the construction of this eighty-mile branch line feeder to the Canadian National Railways and Hudson Bay Railway from a point seven miles north of The Pas, into the Flinflon mine and smelter site, and its extension forty-five miles north-east to the Sherritt-Gordon across a promising section of country is only the balanced vision which is necessary to the development of any young country like Canada.

"When, sir, you realize that the total ore reserves of the Sherritt Gordon-Flinflon and Mandy mines far exceed $400,000,000 and are, therefore, over $100,000,000 in excess of the total ore mined to date at the mining camps of Cobalt, South Lorrain and Gowganda—and then recollect that mining at Cobalt laid the foundation for and started the heavy traffic on the Ontario Government Railway—and you further calmly analyze the part that mining, pulp and paper and power development is responsible for to-day, in the building up of Canada basically level—in creating home markets for farm and factory products—in balancing our yearly exports—in providing employment for university graduates and a full dinner pail to labor twelve months of the year—one cannot help but realize to the full the future of this immense new mining development north of the Prairies with its allied construction of pulp and paper mills at White Mud Falls on the Nelson, and decide, sir, that it is nation building of a high order of merit, and no small measure of statesmanship."

. . . .

"When I call your attention, sir, to its being reasonable to expect that the coking coal used in the Flinflon-Sherritt Gordon smelter will come from Alberta because good coking coal exists on our Coalspur branch, south of Edson; that the metallurgical process being adopted will require salt which should come from Saskatchewan near Fort McMurray north of Edmonton on their provincial railway; that the timber requirements for mining work will come from British Columbia, a concrete example of which is that the McIntyre shaft alone, at Porcupine, 4,000 feet deep, utilized 2,000,000 feet of B.C. squares in that one shaft alone; when, sir, you consider that the dairy products, the flour, the western meats and other food stuffs and mining supplies will be shipped from Manitoba and your two sister Prairie Provinces, to supply the towns and cities which will grow up hand in hand with the mining industry and with the allied cheap power and pulp and paper industries on the Nelson River; when you consider the mining equipment and electric power machinery which will come from the manufacturing centres of Ontario and Quebec then, sir, you begin to appreciate the fact that the opening up of these rich natural resources of mine and forest north of the Prairies will bring tremendous new opportunities for Canadians to acquire wealth and will create remunerative home markets."

. . . .

"This Development Department, sir, believes that the National Railways are practically co-partners in these northern developments along our newer lines of railway—that their success is our success—that their disaster would become our disaster—and be immediately reflected in the net earnings of that division of the line on which the new traffic is being created. The betterment of our railway situation has been no small factor in turning the blue ruin cry into one of balanced optimism across Canada to-day and forcing the knockers to decide to put all their little hammers in the hands of mechanics where they rightly belong."

. . . .

"And, sir, I firmly believe that if Canada without losing one bushel of her wonderful western wheat crop, can continue to develop her mining industry—already more than half the net value of the wheat crop annually; if she can continue to develop her pulp and paper resources to the limit of the market to absorb that paper, and again one-half of the net value of our annual western wheat crop; if she can continue to develop her cheap water power—that white coal which never goes on strike—then, I believe, she is moving along the right lines towards that destiny her rich natural resources entitle her to among the nations of the world.

"You men of Winnipeg interested in mining who afforded us the pleasure of your company in a visit to the mines of Northern Ontario, and you, yourself, President Marsh, who received such a royal home welcome as an oldtimer from Cobalt—learned of this wealth for yourselves—learned that the new gold camps of Porcupine and Kirkland Lake, really just started in mill production, have paid $70,000,000 in dividends—that Cobalt silver camp had paid $100,000,000 in dividends—that the copper-nickel mines of the Sudbury district have paid $100,000,000 in dividends and cannot help but realize the impetus that mining brings to any country; and that the diversified development of field and mine and forest may, indeed, very truly make the prophecy come true that the Twentieth Century belongs to Canada.

"What we in this country have to learn, sir, is that it is no crime but rather a virtue to be engaged in the production of mining wealth, that if we eliminate the prospector and miner you wipe out modern civilization—that we are living in a metal age to such an extent that the world has used more metals in the past twenty-five years than in all preceding time back to the days of the Pharaohs—that if we did not produce gold and other currency to put behind our Government notes the country itself would be bankrupt—that mining made Great Britain the world's commercial dictator and made the United States, through iron, steel and copper, the richest country in the world.

"And in paying earnest tribute to the Chairman of your Industrial Board of Manitoba who is also the Premier of your Province—to Professor Wallace, Commissioner of Mines—to your Manitoba Chamber of Mines—to the Boards of Trade here assembled, and will you permit me to add ex-Mayor Webb for his instructive address given us at the Empire Mining Congress here three months ago, I need not cumber speech with argument—it is enough for me to say that I join with you in your vision and knowledge of the mining wealth north of your Prairies and state from experience that your north country warrants the active interest in the prospector, the mining man, the business man and the capitalist.

"I congratulate the Dominion Government on changing this royalty basis and thereby warranting Sherritt Gordon and Flinflon owners to invest their millions because it is the investment of millions that turn the wheels of industry—makes possible a full dinner pail and keeps the young men, including university graduates, from crossing the border into the United States. Our first duty is to right conditions here to hold the virile youth of Canada and second, to bring in that type of immigrant which I know the Canadian National Railways under Vice-President Robb are bringing in at present to fill the demand for farm labor and aid colonization.

"And it is fitting that I should note here, sir, that the tide of immigration is again flowing our way. We are endeavoring to see that they come in as great numbers as procurable from Scotland, England, Ireland and the northern countries of Europe—that they come as friends and neighbors to mingle their blood with ours—to plant new homes on our plains and not seeking to plant strange new red heresies of doctrine and of faith, but honoring our constitution and reverencing our God, to confirm and not estrange the simple faiths in which we have been reared and which we are transmitting unsullied to our children."

. . . .

"I would, sir, be bankrupt in appreciation here to-night did I not pay earnest and sincere tribute to the Press of Canada for their vision in giving such informative publicity at present to the development of our rich natural resources—for their co-operation and leadership resulting in sowing new towns and cities in the place of theories and politics—for their effort of which we are all becoming more and more conscious—of their knowing no East or no West, but from coast to coast, endearing to us, with equal and patriotic pride, every foot of our soil, every province of our fair Dominion."

SICK STOMACH.

Suffered Agony for 10 Years Tanlac Brought Relief.

Few people are so fortunate as to escape an occasional attack of indigestion with nausea and headaches. But what must it mean to suffer for ten long years with a gnawing pain in the stomach and be compelled to live on dry toast. This was the experience of Mrs. Mary Bond, 23 Main St., East View, Ont. "The minute any food entered my stomach," Mrs. Bond write, "I would have such terrible pains that I could hardly move. Even sweet milk disagreed with me and I didn't dare eat any meat. Although I had doctored and taken all kinds of medicine, I had never been able to find anything to help me until a boarder recommended Tanlac. I have now taken five bottles of Tanlac and am delighted with the way it has helped me. I am feeling world's better—have a good appetite—whatever I eat now agrees with me—and I never have pains or indigestion. You can imagine how good I felt when I ate a nice big steak and didn't have a bit of trouble afterwards, after having lived on dry toast for almost a year."

If you are bothered with Stomach Trouble, don't delay. Get Tanlac at your druggist's today. Your money back if it doesn't help you.

ADDRESS ON ITALY MOST INTERESTING

W. R. Morris Gives Talk To Men's Club of St. John's.

The regular monthly meeting of St. John's Men's Club was held on Monday evening in the Parish House, Jack Cridland presiding. The business part of the meeting consisted in making arrangements for a men's banquet for the men of the congregation on February 20, for which the church women's associations will cater. A speaker will come from Toronto for the occasion.

After business W. R. Morris continued his address on his travels in Europe, the first part of which he gave two months ago. Mr. Morris commenced his address on Italy by referring to the three great epochs in Italian history, ancient, mediaeval, and modern, and then proceeded to recount his observations, illuminated by references to Italian art-craft, in Venice, Genoa, Florence, Rome and other centres.

Under Mussolini, Italy is prospering even though it be at the price of liberty. Prohibitions and restrictions abound and fines are freely levied for failure to recognise them. There are few, if any, beggars in Italy.

The address was greatly appreciated by the men and was of undoubted educational value.

SENTINELS GUARD PICTURE OF MUSSOLINI

Fascist sentinels are on constant guard over the huge photograph of Premier Mussolini. The likeness, shown above with the guards, has just been completed by the Italian photographer, Vaghi de Parma, and is on exhibition at Rome. It measures 6 metres in length and 4 1-2 metres in height.

THE RIGHT WAY TO BANISH FAT

Combat a cause which modern research has discovered. Turn food into fuel and energy, rather than into fat. Supply a natural element which your system lacks. That is the method embodied in Marmola prescription tablets.

People have used Marmola for 20 years—millions of boxes of it. They have told others the results. Now, in almost every circle, you can see the results in new beauty and new vim. Why not learn the way to attain them?

A book in each box of Marmola tells you the formula, also the reasons for results. You will know why the effects come, and why they are beneficial. Go ask your druggist—in fairness to yourself—for a $1 box of Marmola.

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

Faith, lying rigid with her eyes closed, felt and hoped that her heart had stopped beating, but it lunged painfully, and she knew that death, which she had been courting for three days, was not yet won. The whole shameful truth, which she would gladly have died to conceal, would come out now, for after what Fay had said, how could Bob and Cherry fail to blame themselves for her sudden, inexplicable illness?

"Good Lord, Fay! I don't know what you're talking about!" Bob seemed genuinely amazed. Was he going to bluff it out? But that was unlike Bob, Faith thought. "What do you mean—'when she got back home'? She didn't come home—"

"Oh, but she did!" Fay protested tremulously. "I needed her carving set and some dessert spoons and she offered to drive home and get them. When she got back to my house, she looked just awful, and she laughed so strangely! I asked her if you were still too busy to come for dinner and she said you were and laughed in the craziest way. Then while we were eating—she didn't touch a thing!—she looked as if she were going to faint and I offered to get her some spirits of ammonia, but she wouldn't let me; went to get it herself. And—and I never saw her again until now."

"Why didn't you tell me this when you telephoned me she had disappeared?" Bob's voice was terrible with anger, so that the nurse begged him to be careful, lest her patient be disturbed.

"I—I thought you and she had had a quarrel about your not coming to dinner with the family," Fay whispered. "I didn't want to make you feel worse and of course I thought you knew what had upset her."

"I didn't—and I don't, Bob said flatly. "I never dreamed she'd been home, much less that anything had happened there to upset her. And I don't believe it now. I think she must have had a narrow escape from an accident with the car, and it was such a shock to her nerves that—this dreadful thing happened."

"Wait, Bob!" Cherry cried shrilly. "Don't you remember—I thought I heard someone in the kitchen and you said it was just nerves? That must have been Faith, but why in the world didn't she speak to us? Bob and I were sitting on the couch in the living room—Why, Bob, she must have come into the dining room to get the dessert spoons out of the sideboard drawer. I can't understand why we didn't see her—"

"It must have been because she didn't want you to see her," Fay interrupted Cherry with surprising asperity. "Something that you two were saying to each other must have been a terrible shock to her. I don't mean to pry, or—or to insinuate anything—"

"I hope you don't!" Cherry flared. "She could have heard everything we said. I was going to tell her anyway, as soon as she got home, wasn't I, Bob?"

"What were you going to tell her, Cherry? It's evidently more important than you thought," Fay persisted.

"This is a queer place to tell it, and it's really awfully premature, but I suppose I'll have to confess," Cherry capitulated, a suggestion of the old flippancy in her voice.

Lyrics of Life - By Douglas Malloch

JUST AS OF OLD

The snow lies deep
On hills and streams,
And sound asleep
The whole world seems,
And yet I know,
In spite of cold,
The buds will blow
Just as of old.

I had a friend,
He went away,
For so will end
A summer's day.
Yet why despair?
The tale's not told,
And friends will care
Just as of old.

Some day the rest
Won't seem worth while,
The idle jest,
The fickle smile,
A friend will long
A hand to hold,
Faithful and strong,
Just as of old.

And when you do
Come back, my dear,
When winter's through
And spring is here,
Yes, when again
Our arms enfold,
You'll find me then
Just as of old.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

A simple black satin frock may be worn with a five-piece rhinestone set as shown above, or with entirely different effect with two crossing turquoise chains and turquoise earrings as shown below.

Three different sets of costume jewelry and one simple frock really serve the purpose of three different evening frocks, and women who want to travel with light luggage are taking advantage of this fact.

A simply draped frock of flesh-colored satin provides a good background for various sorts of costume jewelry, and since the French jewelers have not been able to persuade even their most fashionable customers that the wearing of inexpensive, imitation jewelry is demode there is no reason why the sets chosen to ring the changes with a gown of this sort should not be of trifling cost.

Another way in which to save luggage—and possible expense—in effecting a variety in evening dress is to have a single tunic with two slips. Our Paris correspondent tells me that these convertible gowns are in high favor in France. A single crocheted gown may have two slips, one plain and short and almost high necked, while another slip may be provided with a bit of a train at the side back, edged with the silver work, cut rather low at the neck. There are also lace tunics which when worn with different slips and jewelry sets give the effect of different gowns entirely.

In Paris the shoulder flower for evening wear has been almost entirely superseded by jeweled devices of various sorts. One very practical advantage possessed by these metal ornaments is that they do not become crushed under an evening wrap. The lovely shoulder flowers deserve an extension of favor, but for the frock you wear to the theater or opera when the wrap is hastily put on and off the jeweled shoulder ornament should certainly be chosen instead.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

WEDNESDAY JANUARY 18, 1928.

Kindly stars hold sway today, according to astrology, which finds that benefic aspects dominate.

The planetary government favors activity in all lines of business and promises success for those who use brains wisely.

It is a day when promoters may expect good luck, whether they are interested in developing political prospects or commercial enterprises.

The stars seem to favor the ambitions of men who have been for some time in places of the Sun.

This is read as an auspicious wedding day, the stars presaging fair fortunes as well as lasting loyalty.

There is a promising sign for those who make new acquaintances of opposite sex.

Warning is given by the seers that ventures in changing marriage customs before they are legalized will be especially unfortunate this year.

Both men and women may be peculiarly inclined toward romance at this time when age will be no protection against foolish sentimentality.

This should be a profitable day for theatres and all who are employed in them.

Good plays in which imagination and fine dramatic effects are achieved are foretold for the season which is to be record-making in certain ways.

The old are subject to depressing influences today, which is read as increasing tenacity to old traditions and discontent with new.

Writers today are most fortunate and they have the forecast of a year that is prosperous.

Persons whose birthdate it is may be concerned this year with governmental affairs. They may meet certain perplexities.

Children born on this day probably will have keen minds and the gift of eloquence. They should be careful of their eyes.

If you grease the aluminum pan in which you poach eggs or boil other food that may stick you will find the tendency decreased.

BE YOUR OWN JUDGE

The public has lost confidence in "Fur Sales" on account of gross mis-statements.

SO-CALLED REDUCTIONS

It's a common thing to read, "30 to 50% reductions on furs," which indicates an enormous mark-up of prices in order to make such an assertion possible.

The curious fact is, that many of the "reduced prices" quoted are just the modest prices at which Barrie's Furs are sold throughout the year.

BARRIE'S DIRECT SAVING

To you who are about to buy Furs, why not take this opportunity to satisfy yourself that the discount we give after the New Year on Furs is a direct saving, and our prices are as low or lower than most of the "sale prices" you see advertised so lavishly?

PRICES HIGHER NEXT SEASON

Next season's Fur garments will be higher as raw furs have advanced, ranging from 10 to 50% more than last year.

BUY YOUR FUR GARMENTS NOW

Might we say we advise present buying for next season's needs, and that our Furs are sold to you subject to our guarantee as to quality, workmanship and wearing expectancy, even though the prices are less.

SAINTS BEATEN IN HARD FIGHT ON LINDSAY ICE

Peterborough Youngsters Shy Regulars Make Best Showing of Series.

SCORE IS 4 TO 3

Saints Come From Behind Three Times to Tie Score and Finally Lose.

(By F. D. C.)

With two of their regulars, Frank Carroll and Terry Hall out of the line up the St. John's team made their best showing of the season against the Lindsay Midgets in Lindsay last night, Fred Martin's boys, who won the first game on their own ice, by seven goal, being all out to grab a 4 to 3 victory.

It was anybody's hockey game until the final bell, a fast hard fought but clean battle in which the Saints came from behind three times to tie the score and finally were beaten by a lucky marker that came after eleven minutes of the last period had elapsed.

The improvement in the playing of the Peterborough youngsters was a big surprise to the Lindsay crew, who looked for a repetition of the first game on Lindsay ice. Instead they found the Saints battling them every inch of the journey and they admitted afterward that the break they got on the winning goal gave them a win that was far from convincing.

The Midgets never shaded the visitors at any stage of the struggle and in the second period when the Saints got the only goal the Lindsay crew were so closely bottled up by the hornet-like checking of the visitors that they could not get away from their own blue line. The combination so successfully used in the first game was effectively broken up by this close checking and the Midgets could not get going with anything like the same momentum.

The result was a battle full of excitement and fast hockey. There was little or no rough play, each team drawing three penalties, for minor offences, and the pace never slackened for a minute.

Lindsay outscored the Saints 3 to 2 in the first period, and the visitors came back with the only counter in the second session sending the teams into the last twenty-minute dash on even terms. The argument was settled eleven minutes after the period opened when Forbert scooped in the lucky goal that put his team in front. It came from a face off ten feet out from the Petes' net. As Referee McCarthy dropped the rubber Forbert batted at it and the puck took a couple of crazy hops in front of Payne and bounced over the goaler's stick into the net. The Saints fought desperately to pull up even again but could not drive home another successful attack.

For Lindsay, the defence pair, Rich and Woods, were both good, not only defensively but in their offensive work as well. Up in front Forbert led the scoring brigade although he did not shine as much as usual because of the barrage of checking laid down by the Saints. Bain, a new sub used by the Midgets, looked good and both Hogan and Spratt turned in useful games.

The biggest offensive threats for the Petes were Jarvis and Johnston while the great checking of Cuthbertson and Hartley was a prominent factor in holding the Midgets. Jarvis, who was on the ice for the full sixty minutes without being subbed or penalized, played a whale of a game, scoring two of the prettiest goals of the night. Johnston, besides checking with good judgment rushed repeatedly and played his best hockey of the year. Carroll's place on the defence was taken by Frost who, after a nervous start, levelled away and did some fine work in the last two periods. Cuthbertson's poke check demoralized the Lindsay attack and he broke up rush after rush while Hartley was a hornet at all times. Jake Hall combined with Jarvis for the best piece of team play of the night and was good throughout. Dunkerley, the other sub, was hit in the face by the puck early in the game and was not used thereafter. Payne drew the goal-keeping assignment and made a good job of it, making some fine stops.

MORE MORE

It was fast hockey from the start and both goalers were early called upon to do their stuff, Payne blocking hard drives from Woods and Spratt while Jarvis tested McClory with a couple of steaming shots. The checking was close and both teams were having difficulty in getting away from their checks. Finally, however, Forbert went down the left boards on his low shot from the side went into the net off Payne's skate for the first goal.

The Saints got that one back in short order when Jake Hall stopped a Lindsay attack at centre and broke away with Jarvis teaming with him. A perfect pass as the defence was reached gave Jarvis a chance to go in on top of McClory and he made no mistake, picking the corner neatly.

A minute after Spratt put the Midgets in front once more when he grabbed a loose puck in Peterboro territory and beat Payne with a quick shot.

Rich drew a penalty for cross-checking Frost and while he was off Jarvis evened the count on a lone rush in which he circled across the mouth of the net and gave McClory no chance to save.

One again Lindsay flashed in front in quick style, Woods going down the side and drilling a nice one past Payne.

Early in the second session Johnston was penalized for a heavy body-check but the Saints held Lindsay out until he came back and then launched an attack that kept the Midgets on the defensive for the rest of the period. The Saints' forwards strung across the rink at Lindsay's blue line, stopped rush after rush and the Midgets could not get the puck away. After nine minutes of play Johnston recovered the rubber at the boards in Lindsay territory and worked over in front to drive a waist high shot past McClory, that sewed up the game. In the next few minutes the Saints had several real chances to take the lead for the first time in the series but McClory rose to the occasion and made some fine saves, a particularly outstanding one when Johnston stickhandled inside.

The third period was just as closely fought. There was no let up and it was rush and counter-rush as both teams fought determinedly for the goal that meant victory. There were close calls at both ends of the rink but finally, after more than half the period had gone, came Forbert's goal from a face-off, putting Lindsay in front 4 to 3. The Saints threw everybody up on the attack in the final stages but could not break through for another goal and finally had to accept defeat after a fight that earned them plenty of admiration from fans not usually given to seeing much good in Peterborough teams.

JARVIS-DAVIS ARE MATCHED

Will Meet at Toronto Next Monday in International Flyweight Bout.

ELIMINATION AFFAIR

TORONTO, Jan 17. — Playfair Brown is a fast worker. The Shamrock Club promoter no sooner gets one show off his hands than he has another arranged. His next fistic entertainment, which will be held in a week at the Coliseum will have as its headliners Ernie Jarvis of England and Willie Davies of Charlerol, champion of Pennsylvania and considered one of the foremost contenders for the flyweight championship. The bout will be in the nature of an elimination affair. Davies in his last time out took the measure of Alex. Burlie at Pittsburgh and before that boxed Corporal Schwartz, Tex Rickard's "champion of the world."

Jarivs needs little ballyhooing. The Britisher gave a fine account of himself in his championship essay with Belanger; his gallant recovery after a poor start making him lots of friends in this vicinity. It was his first bout in six months and under the circumstances his defeat was not to be wondered at. He should be at his best in his encounter with Davies. Since he boxed here the Englishman has been in active training in New York and should have little trouble making the weight which will be two pounds over the flyweight scale—114 pounds.

The Shipping Department of the Canadian Packing Company will play the Office staff a game of hockey tonight at Sacred Heart Rink, starting at 6:00 p.m. A good battle is expected as both teams will have strong line ups out.

You will find many things in the Classified Ads. of the Examiner.

CARDINALS BUY ROCHESTER CLUB

Important Deals in Baseball Are Approved by International League.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Jan. 17 (Canadian Press).—A three-cornered franchise shift in the International League, involving Rochester, Syracuse, and Jersey City, was approved yesterday at a special meeting of club-owners.

The effect of the change will be to drop Syracuse from membership and put Jersey City back into the fold for the 1928 season, but it involves a complicated series of business manoeuvres.

St. Louis National League interests, which controlled the Syracuse club, will acquire the Rochester franchise in the shakeup. In turn they will dispose of the Syracuse franchise to Frank Donnolly and his associates of Jersey City. As it works out, the new Rochester club, owned by the Cardinals, will be composed of the Rochester franchise and Syracuse players. The Jersey City club will have the Rochester players and Syracuse franchise.

All the ramifications of this deal have not yet been completed, but the club owners approved the general plan and expect details to be worked out shortly. It is the culmination of financial difficulties encountered by former Rochester owners, including Walter Hagen, the golf star, who relinquished briefly held interests and, it is understood, also lost a preliminary investment of about $25,000.

Since the close of the 1927 season, the International circuit has dealt with more franchise and club ownership changes than in many years. Earlier in the winter, the league ratified the transfer of the old Jersey City club franchise to Montreal. The Newark club also changed hands, passing into the control of Paul Block, publisher, who signed Walter Johnson as manager.

RICKARD WILL MATCH TUNNEY AND DEMPSEY

Promoter Plans to Bring Two Heavyweights Together in June or July.

AT YANKEE STADIUM

Winner Figure in Second Title Bout "Somewhere in September."

NEW YORK, N.Y., Jan. 17 (Canadian Press).—One word from Gene Tunney, a signature on the dotted line, and the ballyhoo over two heavy weight championship fights in 1928 will be on in earnest.

That is all that is necessary, Tex Rickard revealed yesterday, to start the "whoop-up" for Jack Dempsey's second attempt to regain the title and his third shot at the champion. But the picture is somewhat altered as compared with its original outlines for the promoter now plans to bring Dempsey and Tunney together first, at the Yankee Stadium, in June or possibly July. The winner will figure in the second title bout, "somewhere in September" preferably against Jack Sharkey if the Boston sailor can be re-built to challenging stature.

Reach Virtual Agreement.

Tunney and Rickard already have come to virtual agreement on a programme of two championship bouts. The promoter disclosed in confirming published reports that he got together with the titleholder and a corps of lawyers here January 7. The final draft of terms is expected to be signed at Miami, Fla., late this week. Rickard leaves Wednesday for the south.

The chief stumbling block in the way of the negotiations yesterday appeared in Rickard's refusal to guarantee Tunney any such sum as the champion drew for his match with Dempsey in Chicago last fall. "The racket will not stand two million-dollar purses" in one year, Tex said, explaining Gene must sign a new contract agreeing to a straight percentage of the gate receipts. The option Rickard now holds on the champion's services calls for a guarantee of $525,000 and 50 per cent. of the receipts over $1,000,000 for one match in 1928.

While the winner of the promoter's "do or die" elimination tournament between five heavyweights — Jack Sharkey, Jack Delaney, Paulino Uzcudun, Tom Heeney and Johnny Risko — will gain the nomination against Tunney or Dempsey next September, every effort will be made to build Sharkey to title calibre. The silent strong man from Boston, who was a distinct disappointment in a mauling draw with Tom Heeney on Friday night, will attempt to redeem himself in a 15-round go with a suitable opponent, probably Jack Delaney, on March 15. Heeney will tackle either Risko or Uzcudun March 1 over the same route.

Tunney Satisfied.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Jan. 17 (Associated Press).—Gene Tunney is pleased with the prospect of another title fight with Jack Dempsey this summer.

News of Tex Rickard's plan to match them in a 15-round bout in June or July with the winner to meet one of five challengers in September brought from the heavyweight champion yesterday the enthusiastic comment: "Suits me fine. Rickard's proposed programme is very satisfactory to me."

Tunney was interrupted in a round of golf by newspapermen who conveyed to him the despatches telling of Rickard's intention and continued his game with that brief statement, refusing to enlarge upon it.

The champion has been going through considerable light conditioning of late, playing golf, fishing and hunting. When here several weeks ago, he said he would return to start a period of light training for any possible opponent.

JUNIORS ARE WHITEWASHED BY MOTOR CITY

Oshawa Shamrocks Outskate and Outplay Locals for 8-0 Victory.

NO COMBINATION PLAY

Petes Rally in Final Period to Hold Visitors to One Goal.

Oshawa Shamrocks applied the whitewash brush to the Peterborough Hockey Club's junior team last night, and left Brock Street ice the winners by eight goals to nil. The Motor City boys outskated and outplayed the local chaps, and on the night's play they deserved the victory by a large margin.

The first was the worst from a local standpoint, and when the period was over Oshawa found themselves with five goals under their belt. In the second they added two more, and in the final period Arundell, the hard working Oshawa centre tallied the only goal. The locals had many shots on the Oshawa nets in the final frame, and were more hardlucked than outplayed for a part of this period. Leveque in the nets for the Shamrocks gave a splendid exhibition of goal-tending during the last period. In the first two periods he was not called upon to stop many goals.

No Combination.

The Petes refused to play combination, and Oshawa at their best played very little also. During the first period Black, the Oshawa left wing, ran wild, and notched three of the five goals. Mein in this frame made a very poor showing in the local nets, and let several easy ones slip by him. He was very poorly supported by the defence, and as a result the visitors had a great deal of the play, and for the most part kept the puck in Peterborough territory.

The line-up:

The Play.

The game started with both teams checking hard, but after four minutes of play on a pass Black to Rowden to Black the local defence were beaten, and the first goal went into the locals' nets. Rowden came back in a minute and a half with a beautiful solo rush down the right wing, and bulged the nets again. The Oshawa boys by this time were going strong, outskating the locals and checking them very hard. The Petes tried to retaliate, but failed, and Arundell beat Mein for the third goal. Shields was given a two-minute rest in the penalty box, and Oshawa, in a burst of speed, carried the puck to the mouth of the Peterborough nets, and although they had four shots at short range Mein managed to clear himself.

With Shields back on the ice, Black scored again in a scrimmage in front of the Peterborough net. Black was then sent to the penalty box, and during the next two minutes the Petes pressed hard and got their only shot of the period on the Shamrock net. With only two minutes to play Black scored the final goal of the period.

The poorest exhibition of hockey in the game was given in the second period, but the fans were given plenty of opportunities to see real good scrapping. Once there were more fans on the ice than on the benches when Jones got into a scrap with one of the Oshawa players. Ted LeBarr and Referee "Ginger" Edgar got into a dispute, and as a result the player was given four minutes in the penalty box. Little scored a goal. Black soon followed LeBarr for tripping, and with the teams evenly matched on the ice, Harrington in a lone rush scored the second goal. Calladine and LeBarr, the local defence men, were chased, and for a time the Petes were playing with the three forwards and the goalie. Whitten then started to hand out some rough stuff, and he was banished. The period ended with LeBarr being granted another rest.

The Petes played a better brand of hockey in the third. Ted LeBarr made some splendid solo rushes, and both he and Calladine had the Oshawa defence beaten several times with their stick-handling, only to have Leveque step in the way of the puck. Arundell scored the final goal, and after that the Petes went up five strong, and threatened the Oshawa goalie, who seemed to have the luck with him. Pat Calladine was sent twice to the penalty box, Cripps and Arundell once.

BOY WONDER OF TENNIS

Frank Shields May Aid in Recovering Net Supremacy.

WINS HONORS

One of America's young hopes for the recovery of the classic Davis Cup is Frank X. Shields, 17-year-old New York boy, who has been in tournament competition only two years, and has won the national indoor and outdoor junior champions.

He won each title by defeating Julius Seligson, Lehigh University, one of the best young players in the world.

Shields, who is a student at Columbia Grammar School, did not take up tennis until he was 13 years of age. He was a ball boy at the Silver Beach Garden Courts, Throggs Neck, L.I., and took to playing a little when he was not shagging balls.

When he entered Columbia, Frederick Alden, head master of the school, noticed his natural style and obtained for him a membership in the West Side Tennis Club at Forest Hills, where he attracted the attention of Dr. George King, one of America's high ranking players, who developed him into a class champion in two years.

THE NEED FOR PURE WATER

When the body is examined with the X-ray, the observer is impressed with the fact that only a small percentage of the whole body is made up of mineral elements, or what might be called solid material. The ordinary tissues are quite porous to the X-rays, the bones containing so much calcium being the most easily discerned. The difference in density of the different organs and tissues depends upon the proportion of water and mineral elements which they contain. Taken as a whole, the body is about two-thirds water, with a smaller proportion in the bones and a larger amount in the blood stream, which contains about eighty-eight per cent water.

Our bodies are really composed of different mineral elements which are literally suspended or floating in a mass of water. In order to have proper health, a proper balance must be maintained between the percentage of water and mineral elements.

Our bodies can be made only of material which enters the body through the mouth and is converted through digestion and assimilation into the various groups of tissues and organs. The solid mineral matter of the body can only come from different kinds of foods which contain these elements.

All foods, of course, have water in their composition, some, such as fruits and leafy green vegetables containing more water than solids. If enough of these foods are used it is almost possible to keep the body supplied with enough water, but because so many of the highly concentrated foods such as the carbohydrates and proteins are used it is a wise thing for every one to furnish the system with enough liquid so that the water content of the body is at all times approximately two parts to one over the more solid materials.

Many people choose drinking waters containing minerals, but any chemist can tell you that these minerals are inorganic and cannot in any way become a part of the tissues. Sand and rocks cannot be assimilated or used in any of the processes of metabolism!

Pure water does not contain mineral substances. But perfectly pure water is not found in nature. Even in pure foods there is a certain amount of organic minerals.

As early as the third century it was learned that the process called "distillation" will free water from all impurities of a bacterial nature, and from both organic and inorganic minerals. Distilled water is now being produced under the most sanitary conditions and sold by large companies at reasonable prices so that it is possible for every one living on any part of the North American continent to secure water which is absolutely PURE. Ordinary water contains many forms of bacteria, some of which are the direct causes of serious diseases. If every one would use absolutely pure water, such diseases would be cut to a minimum.

The amount of water needed daily varies according to the individual. One of the simplest methods of determining the amount needed is to use enough water so that the urine never becomes darker than a light straw color.

Unusual physical and mental exertion increases the body's need for more water to eliminate the natural toxins produced, so one must learn to vary his daily water supply in order to meet the need for increased elimination.

Questions and Answers.

Question: "Thank You" asks: "Is there any way that broken muscles and tissues of the bust can be strengthened? It was caused by too tight a binding."

Answer: It is quite normal for the breasts to drop down gradually after the birth of a child or even sometimes after puberty. Exercising the muscles of the chest will tend to strengthen the muscles lying under the busts, but this will seldom raise them to their original position. There is nothing injurious about this sagging, and you must not injure yourself by using treatments to eliminate a condition which is probably natural for your age.

Question: Mrs. W. B. L. asks: "Will you kindly tell me the difference between buttermilk and acidolhpilus milk, and what would you advise taking for an acid stomach or intestinal indigestion?"

Answer: There is some difference between buttermilk and acidolphilus milk, but not much difference in that which is commercially sold. Either of these milks makes an excellent diet to take for a short time, excluding all other foods; or, a pint of either milk may be used in place of a meal.

Question: Mrs A. McD asks: "What would cause my husband to have a pain under the left shoulder blade. Several years ago that lung closed for sometime when he suddenly stepped under a very cold shower. Could it be a result of that."

Answer: Pains under the left shoulder usually come from either heart trouble or from some lung disorder such as you mention. If the lung has remained collapsed it may still be possible to open it up by having your husband take deep breathing exercises.

Uncle Wiggily

UNCLE WIGGILY AND JACKIE'S DRUM

Uncle Wiggily tapped with the end of his red, white and blue striped rheumatism crutch on the door of the kennel house where the Bow Wow family of dogs lived.

"Oh, hello, Unkie Wig!" barked Peetie, who ran to open the door. "Merry Christmas! Come in!" and then, leaving the door open, away scrambled the little doggie boy in a great hurry, leaving the rabbit gentleman to hop in by himself.

"My! Peetie must be very busy this morning!" chuckled Uncle Wiggily as he walked along the hall. And then Mrs. Bow Wow walked out of the sitting room, where she had been washing the face of the clock.

"Oh, Uncle Wiggily, I'm so glad to see you!" barked the dog lady. "Did you have a nice Christmas?"

"Just lovely," answered the rabbit gentleman. "I got so many presents in the Blue Heron's lady's long stocking that I was able to pass them on to children who, somehow or other, were forgotten. So everybody was happy."

"Let me take a look."

"Talking about Christmas presents," sighed Mrs. Bow Wow, "I wish that so many hadn't come to our house for Jackie and Peetie, Oh, dear!"

"Why, what's the matter?" asked the bunny uncle. "Don't you want your little dog boys to have a good time? And I guess they must be having fun, for Peetie hardly opened the door for me before he ran away to play, I suppose."

"That's just it—I wish he wouldn't do so much playing on his Christmas,—sighed the dog lady—"As for Jackie's drum——"

"Hark, if you please," said Uncle Wiggily, politely twinkling his pink nose at the dog lady to make her stop barking. "I think I hear a noise."

"Ha! Noise!" whined Mrs. Bow Wow. "Noise is all I've been hearing since Christmas. Listen!"

"I was listening," answered the rabbit gentleman, "and what I heard was Jackie howling. Perhaps he is hurt. Let's both listen!"

So Mrs. Bow Wow and Uncle Wiggily both listened and heard Peetie bark:

"Go on, Jackie! Why don't you drum? I'm blowing my fife to play that we're soldiers, but you aren't beating your drum! Go on Wham it hard! What's the matter? You beat it rub-a-dub-dub yesterday, but today you aren't making a sound on it."

"I can't!" whined Jackie. "Listen, Peetie! I can't get any sound out of my drum! Oh, what you s'pose has happened? Somebody must have come in the night and taken all the rub-a-dub-dub out of my Christmas drum! Oh, dear!"

"I thought something had happened," said Uncle Wiggily. "We'll go look. Where are the little dogs?"

"Out in the kitchen playing soldier," was the answer.

Mrs. Bow Wow followed Uncle Wiggily to the kitchen and there they saw Jackie Bow Wow beating with his sticks on the head of his drum. But instead of any loud rub-a-dub-dub noise coming out, there was hardly any racket at all. Peetie's fife blew loud and shrill, so that Mrs. Bow Wow had to hold her paws over her ears. But Jackie's drum made scarcely a sound.

"What's the matter with it, Uncle Wiggily?" whined the dog boy. "Yesterday it made a dandy noise."

"Indeed it did!" sighed Mrs. Bow Wow. "Oh, no, I didn't do anything to it!" she made haste to say, as Jackie looked at her, suspicious like. "I never touched your drum."

"But something must be the matter with it," spoke Uncle Wiggily. "Let me take a look." He took the drum from Jackie and said: "Why, how heavy it is! Drums shouldn't be as heavy as this. There must be something inside it." Uncle Wiggily looked through the little round hold in the wooden side of the drum—the hole where the sound comes out—and inside the drum the rabbit saw hundreds of acorns from an oak tree. The drum was stuffed with acorns, and no wonder it didn't sound.

"Who put the acorns in your drum, Jackie?" asked the rabbit.

"Why, I don't know," answered the doggie boy. And then, all of a sudden the Blue Jay bird in the tree outside called through the open kitchen window:

"I stuffed the acorns in the drum. I didn't mean any harm. But Jackie left his drum out on the porch this morning and just for fun I dropped a lot of acorns in. I had them hid in this hollow tree. But you can easily empty them and the drum will be all right."

So Uncle Wiggily, laughing over the Blue Jay's trick, emptied Jackie's drum of acorns, and then it went rub-a-dub-dub better than ever. But Mrs. Bow Wow put cotton in her ears so she wouldn't hear it.

AT THE CAPITOL.

"SEVENTH HEAVEN."

This picture is unusual. It is one of the type of productions that do not often come to the silver sheet, and it deals with the sort of romantic love that has appealed to every heart through every age; the affection that has nothing to do with rank or place, or money, or expediency. Curiously it is the type of picture that brings literary allusions to the mind, something that the ordinary moving picture seldom does. There is "the joy behind the sadness of the world," in this story of the sewer man of Paris, one whose ambition is, to be a street cleaner and rise from subterranean depths to the sunshine of the boulevards. Here he is one of a gang that "cleans the streets from sun to sun, and seek the nastiness that others shun."

It was Emerson who said: "In the mud and scum of things, something lovely always sings." This picture of "Seventh Heaven" carries that idea to its epitome. When Chico, the sewer worker, is merciful, quite against his will, to the little drab girl who has told the truth under similar circumstances, Fate seizes them. Babbie, in Barries "Little Minister," said the nicest sort of love was the kind that made a man love a woman against his own will. Chico didn't want to love Diane. She was not his "type" at all. He had asked "Le bon Dieu" to give him a good wife with yellow hair, and he had also squandered five francs for candles in an effort to obtain, through spiritual intercession, his coveted job as street cleaner. He got the job but the girl that the good God sent him was not according to his ideal—at first. It was only after he had taken care of her, and protected her from a devilish sister, only after the had decided to marry her, and had bought her a white dress only after the drums of war sounded through Parisians boulevards, and he had to leave her, that he knew how much he loved her.

In the trenches Chico sent back his thoughts to Diane at eleven o'clock every morning. Even when he was wounded, he remembered and the girl knew that the love that had blossomed in the streets and in the attic of a seventh floor, still lived in the midst of pain and suffering.

But Chico died, or so it was reported, and the word was brought back to Diane. Here is where the picture slips up in its poetic perfection. When the girl thought she had been mistaken as to the source of those daily messages, she turned to de Brissac, another lover. That is one little episode that should not have been included in this picture. Chico comes back to claim her, blinded, but reconciled to the God who had failed him, as he thought in earlier times; the God "who took away my eyes that my soul might see."

The characterizations are immense—the weak frail, little Diane, cowering under the wrath of a tiger-like, drink-ridden sister, and later turning on that sister when she takes Chico's memento from her, and the flamboyant, egotistical, utterly lovable Chico, who is always "a remarkable fellow," even when he fishes for offal in the underground sewers, and whose faith carries him to heights where he dwells with the stars, could hardly be surpassed for splendid acting.

It is a poetic idealistic drama of love raised to its greatest heights, and has the touch of a dreamer in its production.

—Jeanette.

AT THE REGENT.

IS CIGARETTE GIRL IN NEW M-G-M FILM

It was during the filming of "After Midnight," Norma Shearer's new starring vehicle, that there was hardly a taxi to be had in Los Angeles for several hours.

Hundreds of the metered vehicles which usually stream down Broadway or out the spacious boulevards, had gone into pictures.

They arrived at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio by the dozen and throughout the day passed before the battery of cameras. They came four abreast, completely filling the streets until it looked like there wasn't another thing left in the world but taxis.

The taxi aggregation represents a mental picture of what Norma Shearer and Lawrence Gray believe can be done by making one cab's earnings pay the down payments on two more ad infintum. The dream, however, is brought to a sudden ending by the realization that they can't make the down payment on even one to start the nucleus of the business.

"After Midnight," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, now being shown at the Regent theatre, is based on an original story by Director Bell, the same story which was fictionized by Adele Rogers St. Johns and ran recently in the Cosmopolitan Magazine.

Miss Shearer has the role of a cigarette girl in a New York night club; a girl who saves her money and purchases a one thousand dollar Liberty bond only to find that her wild and spendthrift sister has a bond of like denomiantion given her as a "favor" for having attended a rich man's party.

The role of the wild sister is played by Gwen Lee, who, by the way, received her start in pictures two years ago when she played a role in Miss Shearer's "Lady of the Night," also directed by Monta Bell.

Lawrence Gray has the romantic male lead, that of a gas pipe thug who gives up robebry to drive a taxi cab.

GEORGE POVALL TO-DAY Age 18

PROOF that only VIROL can show

At 6½ months, Feb. 8th, 1909, George Edward Povall, 5, Central Fire Station, Salford, Eng., wasted away until he weighed only 6 lb. 8 oz. "He was nothing but skin and bones" (see Photo 1). Then he was put on Virol. On March 9th, 1910, just thirteen months after he was first given Virol, he weighed 31½ lbs. and was the fine healthy baby you see in Photo 2.

Not only did Virol effect an immediate improvement in this terrible case of wasting, but it laid the foundations of healthy growth and development. Since Virol saved his life, George Povall has not had a single day's sickness. He has won prizes for running, played football regularly, and to-day he is a well-built muscular boy of 18, in perfect health (see picture at top), as the doctor who attended him in his first and only illness has certified in a letter written recently.

But Virol is not only a life saver. Its extreme value to mothers lies in this. Virol builds up weakly children or children you are "just a little bit anxious about," to really robust permanent health."

THE STORY THUS FAR

Vance, a student of psychology and of crime, has his own theories about law courts and police procedure and he tells them to Markham. The latter is considerably worried over the outbreak of crime in New York. Then the newspapers announce the murder of Margaret Odell, known as the "Canary," a former Follies girl and reigning Broadway beauty.

* * *

CHAPTER II

Tuesday, Sept. 11; 8:30 a. m.)

It was barely half-past eight on that momentous morning of September the 11th when Markham brought word to us of the event.

I was living temporarily with Vance at his home in East 38th street—a large remodeled apartment occupying the two top floors of a beautiful mansion. For several years I had been Vance's personal legal representative and adviser, having resigned from my father's law firm of Van Dine, Davis and Van Dine to devote myself to his needs and interests. His affairs were by no means voluminous, but his personal finances, together with his numerous purchases of paintings and 'objets d'art,' occupied my full time without burdening me. This monetary and legal stewardship was eminently congenial to my tastes; and my friendship with Vance, which had dated from our undergraduate days at Harvard, supplied the social and human element in an arrangement which otherwise might have degenerated into one of mere drab routine.

On this particular morning I had risen early and was working in the library when Currie, Vance's valet and majordomo, announced Markham's presence in the living-room. I was considerably astonished at this early morning visit, for Markham well knew that Vance, who rarely rose before noon, resented any intrusion upon his matutinal slumbers. And in that moment I received the curious impression that something unusual and portentous was toward.

I found Markham pacing restlessly up and down, his hat and gloves thrown carelessly on the centertable. As I entered he halted and looked at me with harassed eyes. He was a moderately tall man, clean-shaven, gray-haired, and firmly set up. His appearance was distinguished, and his manner courteous and kindly. But beneath his gracious exterior there was an aggressive sternness, an indomitable, grim strength, that gave one the sense of dogged efficiency and untiring capability.

"Good morning, Van," he greeted me, with impatient perfunctoriness. "There's been another half-world murder—the worst and ugliest thus far. . . ." He hesitated, and regarded me searchingly. "You recall my chat with Vance at the club the other night? There was something damned prophetic in his remarks. And you remember I half promised to take him along on the next important case. Well, the case has broken—with a vengeance. Margaret Odell, whom they called the Canary, has been strangled in her apartment; and from what I just got over the phone, it looks like another night-club affair. I'm headed for the Odell apartment now. . . . What about rousing out the sybarite?"

"By all means," I agreed, with an alacrity which, I fear, was in large measure prompted by purely selfish motives. The Canary! If one had sought the city over for a victim whose murder would stir up excitement, there could have been but few selections better calculated to produce the result.

Hastening to the door, I summoned Currie, and told him to call Vance at once.

"I'm afraid, sir—" began Currie, politely hesitant.

"Calm your fears," cut in Markham. "I'll take all responsibility for waking him at this indecent hour."

Currie sensed an emergency and departed.

A minute or two later Vance, in an elaborately embroidered silk kimono and sandals, appeared at the living-room door.

"My word!" he greeted us, in mild astonishment, glancing at the clock. "Haven't you chaps gone to bed yet?"

He strolled to the mantel, and selected a gold-tipped Regie cigarette from a small Florentine humidor.

Markham's eyes narrowed; he was in no mood for levity.

"The Canary has been murdered," I blurted out.

Vance held his wax vesta poised, and gave me a look of indolent inquisitiveness. "Whose canary?"

"Margaret Odell was found strangled this morning," amended Markham brusquely. "Even you, wrapped in your scented cotton-wool, have heard of her. And you can realize the significance of the crime. I'm personally going to look for those foot prints in the snow; and if you want to come along, as you intimated the other night, you'll have to get a move on."

Vance crushed out his cigarette. "Margaret Odell, eh? . . . Most distressin'." Despite his offhand manner, I could see he was deeply interested. The base enemies of law and order are determined to chivvy you most horribly, aren't they, old dear? Deuced inconsiderate of 'em . . . Excuse me while I seek habiliments suitable to the occasion.

He disappeared into his bedroom, while Markham took out a large cigar and resolutely prepared it for smoking, and I returned to the library to put away the papers on which I had been working.

In less than ten minutes Vance reappeared, dressed for the street.

We rode up-town along Madison avenue, turned into Central Park, and came out by the West 72nd street entrance. Margaret Odell's apartment was at 184 West 71st street, near Broadway; and as we drew up to the curb, it was necessary for the patrolman on duty to make a passage for us through the crowd that had already gathered as a result of the arrival of the police.

Feathergill, an assistant district attorney, was waiting in the main hall for his chief's arrival.

"It's too bad, sir," he lamented. "A rotten show all around, and just at this time! . . ." He shrugged his shoulders discouragingly.

"It may collapse quickly," said Markham, shaking the other's hand. "How are things going? Sergeant Heath phoned me right after you called, and said that, at first glance, the case looked a bit stubborn."

"Stubborn?" repeated Feathergill lugubriously. "It's downright impervious. Heath is spinning round like a turbine. He was called off the Boyle case, by the way, to devote his talents to this new shocker. Inspector Moran arrived ten minutes ago."

"Well, Heath's a good man," declared Markham. "We'll work it out. . . . Which is the apartment?"

Feathergill led the way to a door at the rear of the main hall.

"Here you are, sir," he announced. "I'll be running along now. I need sleep. Good luck!" And he was gone.

It will be necessary to give a brief description of the house and its interior arrangement, for the somewhat peculiar structure of the building played a vital part in the seeming insoluble problem posed by the murder.

The house, which was a four-story stone structure originally built as a residence, had been remodeled both inside and outside, to meet the requirements of an exclusive individual apartment dwelling. There were, I believe, three or four separate suites on each floor; but the quarters upstairs need not concern us. The main floor was the scene of the crime, and here there were three apartments and a dentist's office.

The main entrance to the building was directly on the street, and extending straight back from the front door was a wide hallway. Directly at the rear of this hallway, and facing the entrance, was the door to the Odell apartment, which bore the numeral '3.' About half-way down the front hall, on the right-hand side, was the stairway leading to the floors above; and directly beyond the stairway, also on the right, was a small reception-room with a wide archway instead of a door. Directly opposite to the stairway, in a small recess, stood the telephone switchboard. There was no elevator in the house.

Another important feature of this ground-floor plan was a small passageway at the rear of the main hall and at right angles to it, which led past the front walls of the Odell apartment to a door opening on a court at the west side of the building. This court was connected with the street by an alley four feet wide.

FAMOUS LOVE ROMANCES — Dante and Beatrice (II) — By Nicholas Afonsky

Nine years passed after Dante first saw his beloved Beatrice before they met. Once or twice he thought he saw her as he mingled with the crowds in the streets. And sometimes when he went to church he caught a glimpse of the lovely young girl who already dominated his dreams and his thoughts.

Like most young men of the time, Dante went forth for education at the universities. He wandered from one to another, attending such lectures as interested him, making friends with the poets and painters of the day. While he was away Beatrice was married to a rich banker, Simone de Bardi.

Then Dante came home—when he was eighteen. And his only meeting with Beatrice took place. In the ninth hour of the ninth day of the ninth year since their first sight of each other "the same wonderful lady appeared to me dressed all in pure white, between two gentle ladies older than she."

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate

After her passing Dante stood transfixed. For she spoke to him. Commonplace words, no doubt, perhaps of welcome back home after his long stay away. "She saluted me with so virtuous a bearing that I seemed then and there to behold the limits of blessedness," he wrote of this meeting.

BELANGER LOSES BOUT TO FILIPINO

Frisco Grande Gets Decision at Buffalo—Title Not Involved.

BUFFALO, January 17.—"Frenchy" Belanger, of Toronto, flyweight champion of the world, suffered one of the very few setbacks of his boxing career here last night when he was declared the loser of the main bout, the palm of victory being handed to Frisco Grande, a native of the Philippines, who is now a resident of New York.

Belanger weighed 113½, Grande 114. The title was therefore not at stake. Belanger was leading on points at the time the bout terminated, 1 minute 17 seconds after the commencement of the fifth round.

He landed what appeared to be a left to the pit of the stomach and followed it with a right to the ribs. The referee, overruling the two judges, called the left low and declared the Filipino, who did not go to the floor, the victor.

Belanger did not appear flashy against his brown-skinned opponent, but he was boxing confidently and putting a great deal of power behind his blows. He shook Grande several times, and in the third made the Filipino's knees sag with a right to the jaw.

The Commission doctor, leaving the onus on the referee, refused to comment on the case, other than to say that Grande did not appear injured when examined.

Belanger at no time during the bout was hurt. He met a clever flyweight, however. Grande, though not a hard hitter, made a good showing, and did not appear to hold belanger's title in any great awe.

The Associated Press says: When the blow that ended the fight was struck, Grande, apparently in pain, appealed to the referee and staggered to his corner.

Belanger's infraction in the fifth round was not his first, it was agreed at the ringside. In an earlier round he was warned for hitting in the clinches and the crowd of 6,000 booed a number of times. The first four rounds were close, Belanger having the better of the first and third. The others were even, but when the bout ended Frisco had the better of the one minute and seventeen seconds of the closing round.

The boxers got off to a slow start until Belanger began to land vicious straight lefts and hooks to the Filipino's jaw and body. Grande duckaway from many of them and neither was able to land a punishing blow, although some of the Canadian's landed heavily.

In the fourth round the Filipino staged a rally in the closing seconds that nearly turned the session in his favor.

While Belanger's handlers admitted that the final blow was low, they declared that "it was just one of those things that happen," and that the Canadian had the better of the contest.

CANADIAN POULTRY REGISTRATION

The policy of the record of performance of poultry—the official certification of private records of laying hens by a system of periodic inspection by the Dominion Department of Agriculture—is finding enthusiastic advocates in other countries. In urging the adoption of the Canadian system in England, Mr. C. A. House, a prominent authority in Great Britain and editor of "The Poultry World," says, "All doubt as to the ultimate success of the Record of Performance has been swept to one side. It has brought unheard-of success to the poultry industry. It has established some wonderful strains of birds and given them magnificent records over all the breeds and all countries."

CEMETERY REPORTS FOR 1927 SHOW MUCH ACCOMPLISHED

Operating Income Larger Than Actual Cost of Operations.

LOT HOLDERS MEET

B. F. Ackerman Elected President of Little Lake Cemetery Company.

The annual meeting of the lot holders of Little Lake Cemetery was held yesterday afternoon.

The Treasurer's financial statement, which gave the several items which went to make up the receipts and expenses, showed that there had been received under the heading of "operating accounts" the sum of $13,933.32, while the payments were $12,820.91. The largest item of receipts was $3,174 for the "care of lots," while the largest expense item was $1,865 for the general upkeep of the grounds. There was paid for cutting grass the sum of $1,111, while the care of lots cost $1,067.

The assets of the company amount to $236,084.00, of which $67,530.00 is invested in bonds and debentures.

At a meeting of the directors, held immediately following the meeting of the lot owners, B. F. Ackerman was elected President, and E. A. Peck, M.P., Vice-President.

The officers of the company are William James, Superintendent; Felix Brownscombe, Secretary-Treasurer, Miss J. Saunders, Assistant Secretary.

Other reports follow

Directors' Report.

The Directors have pleasure in submitting to the shareholders their seventy-seventh annual report for the year ended December 31st, 1927.

You will notice from the financial statement which has just been read, that we have been successful for the first time in making our operating receipts meet our operating expenses, which, I am sure, will be very satisfactory to the shareholders. Included in the operating account receipts was the item of $3,347.72 received from interest on our investments. The total amount of bonds and debentures now held by the Company is $67,530.16.

Of this amount, $20,571.21 has been given to the Company by lot owners for the perpetual care of their lots. During the year 1927 the sum of $1,810.00 was received from lot owners for the perpetual care of their lots, which was $550.00 more than in the previous year.

Your Directors would like to emphasize the necessity of lot owners making provision during their lifetime for the perpetual upkeep of their last resting places.

We invested in bonds during the year about $6,500.00 at a rate to yield a little under 5 per cent. The sale of lots amounted to $4,420.00, which was some $970.00 more than in the previous year.

The greenhouse sales, which are confined almost exclusively to lot owners, amounted to $3,160.00, which was a little less than in the previous year, but as expenses in connection with the greenhouse were a little less, the margin of profit will be about the same as in the former year.

As it will be necessary in the very near future to make arrangements for opening up new sections, your Directors have instructed the Superintendent to prepare Sections "T" and "U" so as to have the same available when required. The lots in Section "V" have nearly all been disposed of.

During the year, Mr. T. E. Bradburn, who had been a member of the Board for a great many years, resigned his position as Director, and Mr. H. A. Morrow was appointed to fill the vacancy.

The officers of the Company have performed their duties in a very satisfactory manner and are, I am sure, entitled to the thanks of the lot owners for the manner in which they have attended to the work of the Cemetery Company.

W. G. MORROW, President.

Superintendent's Report.

I beg to submit my annual report for work done in the Cemetery, outside the ordinary cemetery work, and improvements made during the year ending December 31st, 1927.

Grading New Ground On Section "O" 400 loads of filling has been placed. This has been graded and seeded, making 200 lots ready for sale. This practically finishes Section "O."

On Section "U" there has been placed 200 loads of filling. This has been graded and seeded and is ready to open up in the spring of 1928.

Roads The roads have all received a coat of oil, and a top dressing of trap rock, and all the roads are in good repair.

Drains There has been laid from the vault under the chapel a three-inch tile drain at a cost of $63.37, which has eliminated all trouble from seepage which we were troubled with.

On Section "O" about 100 feet of three-inch tile has been laid, which will be finished in the spring.

Chapel The chapel has been re-shingled with No. 1 British Columbia shingles, and new ridge roles at a cost of $260.00.

There has been during the year 240 interments, 43 foundations for monuments, 33 lots sold, 7 lots put under perpetual care.

WM. JAMES, Superintendent.

FAMOUS BOXER.

Noah Brosseau, alias Noah Brusso, alias Tommy Burns, above, is the first and only Canadian to hold the heavyweight boxing championship of the world and the second Canadian to hold a world's pro-boxing title of any sort. He has brought the Belgian heavyweight, Humbeck, to Canada to meet Larry Gains, the Canadian heavyweight champion. Brosseau, who was born near Hanover, Ont., 46 years ago, was in his younger days a star amateur lacrosse player and played all over Ontario under the name of Noah Brusso. When he went into the prize ring he adopted the ring name.

CORRECT YOUR PROOF

A SERMON ON TYPE-SETTING.

A short time since, the Rev. W. E. Hall preached a sermon in Central Christian Church, Philadelphia, on "Type-setting." The Reverend gentleman observed that we are all compositors. Before us are two sets of cases. On the right are the virtues; on the left, the vices. Shall I present a specimen from each set of cases? At random we strike the D boxes. What have we? "Duty" from one, "Dissipation" from the other. Thus we might go through the whole alphabet. Habit is the stick with which we set our virtues or our vices. In the mould of habit our actions crystallize. Subtract our habits, and only the bare outlines of a man remain. Day after day we are emptying thoughts, words, and deeds from the stick of habit upon the galley of character. As the days go by these columns are lengthening. As we step across the line from childhood into the realm of responsibility we receive a white Tablet. Subsequently, every evil thought leaves a black dot upon the hitherto pure white. As the dark spots accumulate the complexion of the Tablet changes. The aggregation of the thoughts and deeds of our lives makes our character. Stickful by stickful, galley by galley, we are making up the pages of life's great Journal. One rule rigidly enforced in well-regulated printing offices is that typesetters shall invariably 'follow copy.' The editor never allows the printer to substitute his ideas in the editorial. It is presumed that the editor knows what he desires to write. Revising an editor's work is a reflection which he will not tolerate. 'Follow copy' is an unvarying rule in moral type-setting. Christ is our editor. The New Testament is our 'copy.' . . . It is natural that an inexperienced typesetter should get a 'dirty proof.' He tries to 'follow copy,' but fails through inexperience. For an old printer to set dirty proof is inexcusable. With a man who has been setting type for the Lord for fifty years to have a dirty proof, to show a whiskey-smelling breath, a sour disposition, or a narrowness and bigotry, is very bad. Correcting proof is more familiarly known as repentance. Even spacing is very desirable in a type-setter. Irregularity in this respect very much mars the beauty of the page. So there is an even spacing in the placing of our virtues upon the pages of our lives. . . . All proofs must be corrected before the final "lock-up" when the columns of our character are emptied from the sticks of habit upon the galleys of our daily lives, and when these are transferred into the chases of life's last possibilities, it is too late to correct the proof. Death with ponderous mallet drives home the "quoins" until the pulse stops beating, and the eyes of the worn-out compositor are touched with the death glaze. All revision of proof is forever closed. Thus "locked-up" in the inexorable "chases" of character we go to press. The Judgment Day will be our publication day. God, the angels, and the assembled multitude of the ages will be the readers of the white sheet which you and I are setting up to-night. What a day! The secrets of this strange old world will be printed upon the white sheets of our character, to be read by all intelligences! Now, only, is there time to correct your proof.

TWO INJURED LITTLE BETTER

Mrs. Deignton and Daughter Show Slight Improvement During Night.

INQUEST ON FRIDAY.

TORONTO, Jan. 17.— (Canadian Press.) — Small improvement was shown to-day in the condition of Mrs. George Deignton and her seven year old daughter Joan, severely injured when they were attacked by George Deignton last Saturday, at the same time as four year old Bernard Deignton was killed. Mrs. Deignton was still unconscious with six compound fractures of the skull, her condition being very little altered from yesterday, but the girl to-day was a little brighter, according to the hospital authorities. Deignton is held on a murder charge, while the inquest on the death of Bernard Deignton is set for Friday.

The bodies were discovered by police who heard the shots. Two of the children are in a critical condition at the Metropolitan hospital, while a third was wounded in the left arm.

OPTIMISM SHOWN BY MOTOR DEALERS

All Agents Enthusiastic Over New Chevrolet Cars.

A story of the optimism that is felt for 1928 in automobile circles was brought back here this week by I. T. Lillico, local Chevrolet dealer, on his return from a convention of the Chevrolet organization from all over Ontario, which was held at Toronto. More than a thousand delegates were present, according to Mr. Lillico, who reports that all were enthusiastic over their new car.

In an address at the dinner which wound up the Toronto meeting, Ross Mackinnon, Chevrolet's general sales manager, reported that the sales of this General Motors Product in Canada last year had increased sixty per cent., attaining a new high record of more than 40,000 cars and trucks. As a result of this tremendous production he reported that millions of dollars' worth of new contracts for parts and materials had been let in Canada.

Interesting figures on the automobile industry in general were quoted at the meeting by E. A. Everson, Chevrolet assistant sales manager, who remarked that the average life of a car was six or seven years, but that the purchaser of a new car to-day kept his purchase usually for only 2½ years or so before buying another. Mr. Everson touched on the growth of Chevrolet business, which he said had resulted in remarkable prosperity for the dealer organization.

One thing which particularly impressed Mr. Lillico was a performance put on at the Royal Alexandra Theatre by the "Chevrolet Players," which took the place of the old-fashioned speechmaking that is usually such a feature of conventions. From a sparkling revue, in seven scenes, plentifully interspersed with humor, the delegates derived both entertainment and instruction. The new Chevrolet was introduced on the stage and the whole meeting is reported to have been characteristic of the enterprise and up-to-dateness of the Chevrolet organization.

SLAYER RUSHED AWAY FROM JAIL

Police Take Confessed Murderer From Flint, Fearing Lynching.

FLINT, Mich., Jan. 17.—(Canadian Press.)— Adolph Hotelling, 47 year old church deacon at Owosso, Mich., has confessed kidnapping, slaying, and dissecting the body of little Dorothy Schneieder, but why he did it, by his confession, is incomprehensible to him as to the authorities.

Officers, however, had little time to ponder over the motives last night, because Hotelling's arrest was followed by such an outburst of public indignation that all the ingenuity of the police was needed to save him from mob violence.

Flint jail was found no safe place for him, a mob forming almost as soon as word of the arrest spread. Hotelling was taken secretly from the jail, driven by motor car under heavy guard to the State capital, Lansing, and finally, shortly after midnight, locked in a cell at the State reformatory at Ionia.

The meeting of the Fourth Peterborough Troop of Boy Scouts opened on Thursday night with flag, and inspection, followed by the investiture of Jack Miller into the Troop. Scout Miller is now a member of the Kangaroo Patrol.

The investiture was followed by a game, which the Owls won.

Troop leader Taylor instructed the troop in some exercises to develop height and chest expansion. These exercises were picked out by Sir Robert Baden-Powell.

Short talks were given on the Patrol animals by the leaders.

The conventional signs were reviewed.

There were two ten minute instruction periods in which the patrol leaders instructed their patrols in knotting, first aid, and compass points. Scouts Archie Dryland and Harold Stewart passed their service tests.

A council fire was hastily rigged up, as it was getting late. O Canada was sung followed by 'Neath the Crust of the Old Apple Pie, and Always Eat when your Hungry. A balancing feat was tried by everyody. A small log was placed on the floor. Each Scout had to sit on the log and place one foot on top of the other. In this position a match had to be struck and a piece of paper lighted.

Mr. Corbett read a short story about fairness.

The meeting closed with the singing of God Save the King, the lowering of the flag and 30 seconds silent prayer. The competition stands with the Owls 217¾, the Kangaroos 206½, and the Crows 203¼.

ICE IS CAUSE OF ACCIDENTS

Some Toronto People Skate To Work on Icy Pavements To-day.

GIRL BADLY HURT.

TORONTO, Jan. 17. — (Canadian Press.)—Numerous mishaps have been caused in the past few hours in Toronto and district by a durable and dangerous coating of ice, laid on the streets and sidewalks by yesterday's sleet storm and hardened over night. Some daring spirits skated to work to-day, the roadways being quite suitable for this method of travel. Traffic has been considerably slowed down and civic workers are engaged in completing the task of strewing cinders on the various hills which motorists must use.

The worst accident in this city was the injury of three young women when a motor truck skidded and knocked them down last night. Violet Bowler suffered a broken neck and other injuries and is in a critical condition.

Small Boy Recovers After First Appearance of Spectre at Keating Home.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 18.—Now that local public opinion has been roused to the highest pitch, it is but natural to expect the reverse action to follow. Residents continue to express a profound belief that there is absolutely nothing to the story nor has there been since the beginning, but that is not the case. Press representatives, civil authorities and many others who have visited the Keating farm are convinced that there is some mysterious disturbance taking place at irregular intervals, but they are at a complete loss to fathom the mystery.

Many opinions have been expounded, some of them through the press. One of the leading dailies carries an account in which the supposition that electricity might be responsible is featured. This theory is based on the geographical location of the building. It is on slightly elevated ground inside a large triangle formed by three power houses. But the closest of these plants is two miles distant. The main power lines do not pass within a mile of the house and the only electricity on the farm is a telephone wire which was left by the telephone company when the instrument was removed at the time the former owner vacated the property. Two electrical engineers gave as their opinion that the electrical solution was highly impossible. One man described it as "purest bunk." His opinion in Campbellford is considered worthy of a substantial salary. He is a graduate electrical engineer and did not hesitate to say that he knew of nothing that could be advanced as a reason for giving the cause as electrical. Thus the electrical theory is exploded.

Acting on experience gained from other ghost scares, The Examiner again visited the Keating farm early last evening. Arriving there, it was found that there were some visitors from Springbrook who had just heard of the affair and had come to investigate unofficially. Nevertheless it was not impossible to get a short interview with Mr. and Mrs. Keating. Questioned by the reporter, they established the fact that they are not believers in spirits or in communication with the next world. Neither of them have ever felt in the least impelled by an unseen or unknown force. They have not, they say, ever had any premonition of any misfortune either to themselves or relatives or close friends. The only death in the family chain was that of Mr. Keating's sister, who died last year in Belleville hospital, but he was present at the time and Mrs. Keating said she had not felt the slightest intuition that the death had occurred till word was sent her through the usual channels. She remembers quite distinctly being angry because she had not been advised at an earlier date. It was also established that neither of them is of a superstitious nature and thus another theory is smashed to atoms.

Little Boy Cured.

Prior to the appearance of the spectre in December, the little son of the family had been seriously ill with a disease of a very peculiar nature. At least the doctors who attended the child did not appear to be very desirous of giving any definite cut and dried diagnosis. A remarkable coincidence is that three days after appearance of the vision, the child was recovered from his illness and has not been troubled since. Superstitious people will find something in this phase of the affair to occupy their minds.

In this country, and particularly in this locality where the bed rock is close to the surface, another theory may be advanced. The buildings, as has been mentioned, stand on an elevation. In the lower lands, there is a portion of the farm which might easily be called a marsh. It is here that the water has the appearance of containing a percentage of oil. If there should be a fault in the stratified rock formation, the seepage from the stables might easily find its way to the swamp and the color would be

Ghost Walks in Seymour Home

NATURAL GAS AND ELECTRICITY ARE BELIEVED CAUSE.

Mystery shrouds the weird manifestation appearing in the farmhouse of Frank Keating in Seymour township. Some phenomenon arising out of natural gas seepage and electrical effect is believed to be the explanation. Frank Keating is shown sitting on the doorstep of his home; again with Mrs. Keating and their two children. The plain unfinished brick house with its lightning arresters will be seen to occupy a position on an elevation. The door opening on to the cellar stairs standing ajar is the one through which the apparition appears from the cellar, which is shown in its unfinished state, its dirt floor in a state of upheaval and the shoring posts resting on dirt. The hole the mysterious apparition is said to have made in the wall of the house can be appreciated when compared with the license plate just below it.

IS INTERESTED IN LITTLE ONES SAYS PREMIER

Takes Greater Interest in Them Than in International Politics.

DISCUSSES DEVELOPMENT.

Hon. G. H. Ferguson Gives Address to Women's Canadian Club.

"I am more interested in Canadian boys and girls than I am in international politics. That is the reason I am going to stay at the job I am at as long as the people permit me to."

Among the concluding sentences of an address given to the Women's Canadian Club in the auditorium of the Public Library, yesterday afternoon, were the above words, delivered by Hon. G. Howard Ferguson as the finish of what he described "as a rambling talk on what comes up day after day", but which, although it was entitled as a discourse on "Some Phases of Our Canadian Development", really proved to be on a subject very dear to the heart of the Premier and Minister of Education of the Province of Ontario.

Premier Ferguson was introduced by the president of the Club, Miss S. A. Tomkins, as a friend of her early days in the little village in which both she and Hon. Mr. Ferguson were born, and the Prime Minister in his opening sentences alluded to the old-time cordiality between the two families and his pleasure in accepting Miss Tomkins' invitation to address the club during his stay in the city. Members and friends of the society who took advantage of the occasion numbered nearly one hundred and fifty people, who listened with intent appreciation to the concise, eloquently-worded and forceful address by Hon. Mr. Ferguson, who commented at its conclusion on the quality of interested attention accorded him by his audience.

"In this year of celebration of the Diamond Jubilee of Confederation", said Mr. Ferguson, "none should be at a loss to say something about Canada. We should thrill with pride at the advancement we have made since that time. There have been three or four periods in our development, and there have been two phases to those periods. The romantic days of discovery and exploration were those when was envisioned the part that the great structure between the Atlantic and the Pacific would one day play in the world's history, a vision that has been borne out by later developments.

Different Standards Today.

"In the early days of Canada, men's minds were devoted to the larger field of national development, and we had men with whom we cannot compare today, who had to struggle against insuperable difficulties and who were compelled to endure all kinds of hardships in laying the foundations solidly and well of our national structure. Those were

CHILDREN FOUND IN FILTHY STATE

Children's Aid Society Officer Reports Matter To Board.

CLEAN-UP ORDERED.

John Edgar, superintendent of the Children's Aid Society, told the board yesterday afternoon at its meeting in the council chambers of conditions he found in a city home which he described as most filthy. On Saturday he visited the home and found a mother and three small children. The children were so dirty he couldn't tell what they looked like. Two of the children were outside playing and the third was found upstairs on a stretcher. He asked the mother if she had any soap and water and she said yes, but she did not have time to wash her children.

Three or four bottles were lying on the floor and everything was in a very dirty condition. "I have been in dirty homes but nothing ever like this one," said Mr. Edgar. He gave the mother until Thursday to clean up her children, and if she did not do it he told her he would start police court proceedings.

President Dr. Blagrave welcomed Mayor Denne and J. A. McNabb, two new members, to the board. A communication was received by the secretary telling the board that the late G. W. Powell had left $100 to the Society in his will. Mr. Edgar was asked to write a letter of appreciation to Mrs. Powell.

TRAIN KILLS NORWOOD BOY

DEATH INSTANTANEOUS.

NORWOOD, Jan. 18. — Jumping from a truck in front of the C.P.R. Montreal-Toronto passenger train at the Havelock Road crossing just inside the limits of Norwood village yesterday afternoon, Ashley Rogers, 16, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Rogers, of Norwood, was instantly killed. The lad, with another boy, Wilson Webb, was riding on the back of a Hydro truck. The driver apparently did not hear or see the train until crossing the track right in front of it. His companion shouted then and the Rogers boy, apparently excited, jumped off. The truck crossed the track in safety, but the boy was struck on the head and died instantly.

It was reported by others in the neighborhood that the train had whistled loud enough to be heard in the centre of the village. Coroner Dr. Carleton is investigating.

Jury Empanelled.

Jury empanelled shortly after the accident by coroner, consisting of John McConnell, Richard Innis, Charles Copen, Richard Dean, William Stares, William Parcels and William Beckett, viewed the scene of the accident and took measurements, then adjourned to meet again on Monday, January 23, at 2 p.m., in the Town Hall. The conductor of the train was Duke Carmichael of Toronto.

This is the same crossing where George Barrie of Birdsall, was hurt in November last.

PRESBYTERIAL REPORTS GIVEN BY SECRETARY

W. M. S. Societies of This District Have Exceeded Their Allocation.

GIVINGS INCREASE.

Regret Expressed That Lindsay Presbyterial Is To Be Split This Year.

The third annual meeting of the Lindsay Presbyterial of the Women's Missionary Society of the United Church of Canada commenced a two-day session in St. Andrew's United Church yesterday afternoon, with an attendance of about one hundred and fifty delegates from the district, and a large number from the United Churches of Peterboro. The president, Mrs. R. G. Lawlor, B.A., of Norwood, presided.

The afternoon session commenced with a devotional service led by Miss M. Dickson of Peterboro, Mrs. J. Forbes Allen leading in prayer. The delegates were given a very cordial welcome to the convention by Mrs. C. H. Edwards. In a short address she recalled the beginning of this great missionary adventure. As far back as 1825 a small group of women in Prince Edward Island organized the first women's missionary society, out of which has grown the great army of women who are to-day sacrificing time, talent and money in the winning of souls for Christ, the work that comes nearest His heart. In closing, Mrs. Edwards said that the past three or four years had been times of celebration of many different kinds, but that the new year called for a new life with truer ideals of service.

Mrs. W. G. Dunoon of Lindsay, on behalf of the visitors, replied to the greetings, which she said had really begun at the station, continuing at the church door and later at the table. As this is the last time of meeting as the "Lindsay Presbyterial," Mrs. Dunoon regretted that the "powers that be" thought it necessary to make the change, as they had all worked so harmoniously together. "We have won many friends whom we will remember long after the Presbyterial has been divided, so the work has not been without avail," she said. A cordial invitation was extended to the new Peterboro Presbyterial to come to Lindsay to attend the branch meeting to be held there in the near future.

Mrs. W. H. Morton, Peterboro, the recording secretary, gave a very comprehensive outline of the minutes of the last annual meeting and of the three executive meetings which were held during the year.

The following committees were then appointed:

Ontario Premier And Federal Chief Tell of Efforts

Province Building For Future in Educational and Health Work, Mr. Ferguson Declares—Party's Work For Canada Set Forth.

HON. M. BENNETT ARRAIGNS KING GOVERNMENT FOR FAILURE TOO DEAL WITH IMMIGRATION PROBLEM

Canadian Legion Hall Crowded For Annual "At Home" of Women's Conservative Club—Many Take Opportunity to Meet Party Chieftains—Dance Follows.

Conservatives of Peterborough and district and many others who are not Conservatives packed the Canadian Legion Hall to hear the leaders of the party, the Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Prime Minister of Ontario, and the Hon. R. B. Bennett, leader of the Opposition in the Federal House, who were speaking at the fourth annual "At Home" of the party. An outgrowth of the meeting was the compilation of a list of about one hundred young people who are willing to join a Young Conservative Association at a meeting to be held in two or three weeks.

Mrs. Howard Fallis, President of the Women's Liberal-Conservative Association under whose auspices the affair was held, presided, and in her introduction dealt on the privilege it was for Peterborough people to have the two leaders present, in view of the great demands made on their time. She was sure that they would agree, because of the persistent way in which she had kept after them to get their promise, that "the female of the species is more deadly than the male."

The Hon. Mr. Ferguson was the first speaker, and his genial manner and the humor with which his speech was interspersed delighted his audience. He was greeted with the singing of "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," when he had been introduced by Mrs. Fallis as a leader "who never avoids an issue, who stakes his political life on a firm stand on his principles, and really leads his party."

Mr. Ferguson's introductory remarks to the effect that the people had not come to hear him but a greater than he, somewhat rebounded on himself when Mr. Bennett ejaculated "Hear! Hear!" to the delight of the audience, but the speaker called attention to the fact that Mr. Bennett was the only one to say so.

The Premier dwelt for a few moments on the good effect the ladies have had on politics since they have been given the franchise, raising the moral tone, and congratulated the men on being privileged to attend mixed meetings which he considered of great value. He expressed his pleasure at being able to discuss public matters at such a meeting, stating that more and more he is encountering serious interest in the problems of the country.

Helping the Farmer

The necessity of providing better facilities for the agricultural residents of the province was first taken up by Mr. Ferguson, who said that unfortunately a feeling of difference has grown up. The farm dweller must have all the conveniences of his urban neighbor, he stated. The province is trying to help him by highways to draw the people together and extending the Hydro-Electric lines out into the country. With these things the advantage is on the side of living in the country and if his wife would let him he would move back to the farm, he declared.

There is another side to be emphasized. A farmer cannot be expected to stay on the farm unless he is profiting. He should be helped and educated and his children should have the same advantages as those in the cities. In fact, the man who goes out and colonizes land on the outskirts of civilization is entitled to more than the man in the centre of population.

"It is one purpose of the education department of the province to do this. In fact, that is what induced me to take the department," said the Premier. "I have been accused of trying to run the whole government, but I have found that I can run a very small part of it. That part of it I do run I want to do well. Since becoming Premier I have been trying to see that the boys and girls have a chance in the world."

"In the urban communities what has been done? We are trying to link them up with highways and provide cheap power so that they can have street railways if they want to run them. (Laughter.) We want to build up in this Ontario great industrial populations to create a demand and a market for the products of the farm. In no way can we have sound development unless we look after both sides."

Health Investment.

The premier turned to other things looked after by the province, which "cost money but are good in-

CHURCH SHOWS GAINS IN 1927

Annual Vestry Meeting Reports at All Saints' Are Encouraging.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

The annual vestry meeting of All Saints' Church was held on the evening of Monday, January 16, with Rev. J. Douglas Paterson presiding over an unusually large and enthusiastic gathering of the congregation. The financial reports showed a deficit of over $900 on general maintenance account, but this was counter-balanced by the very large amount received and paid off the mortgage which still stands against the church. During 1927 the sum of $2,650 has been paid off the mortgage, leaving $3,650 still to be raised before the church is clear of debt. Approximately $10,000 has been paid off in the last two years, and an effort will be made to clear off the balance as quickly as possible.

Missionary giivng has reached a new high level, and it was pointed out that three former workers in the parish are now in the mission field. One is in the Diocese of Saskatchewan, one in the Diocese of Brandon, and a lady is working as nurse in the Grenfell Hospital at Port Harrington, on the Labrador coast. One other young lady is in training in the Church of England Deaconess Home for missionary service.

The various organizations reported on their activities, and each one reported progress and a balance on the right side for future work. The report on the Sunday School was particularly good, and the applause given to Mr. J. Price and Miss Cairns, who submitted the secretary's and treasurer's reports showed how much the work of the school was appreciated.

The rector read a very lengthy report and forecast, and urged that the year 1928 should be marked by the achievement of three objectives: (1) The entire wiping out of the debt on the church and subsequent consecration of the fine building; (2) establishing of the general finances on a strong position; (3) a special effort to erect in All Saints' Church a suitable memorial to the men of the congregation who died in the Great War.

THREE FACE MURDER CHARGE

Accomplices of Betty Landsiedel, Alias Chambers, Held on Serious Charge.

SEEK BOGUS HUSBAND.

CHICAGO, Ills., Jan. 18 (Canadian Press).—Three persons were formally charged yesterday with the murder of Betty Landsiedel of Detroit, alias Chambers, alias MacDonald, and a few days ago found the end of her ten-year-old butterfly path in a mesh of electric light wire and adhesive tape which strangled her in her luxurious North Side hotel apartment.

They are Doris Hemphill, formerly of Estherville, Iowa, alias Marion Kirk; Charles H. Oleson, alias Jimmy Kirk, alleged bigamous husband of the girl, and Roy Miller, formerly chauffeur for the butterfly.

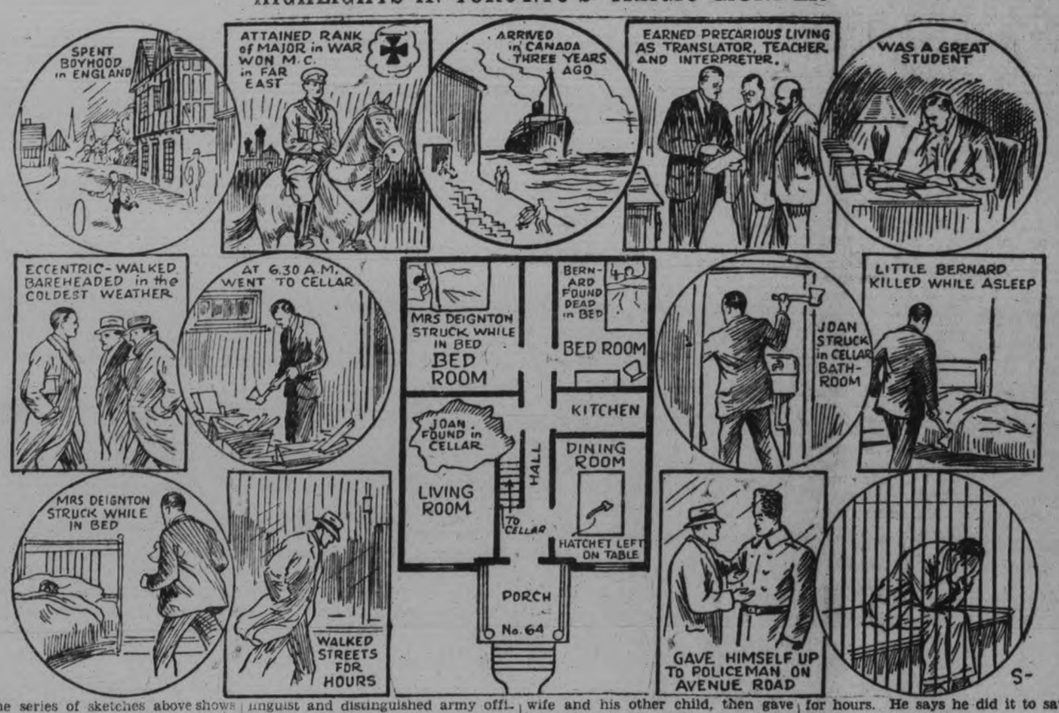
Oleson was identified yesterday by Mrs. Hattie Oleson as the husband who left her March 15, 1925, the day their baby was born. The identification was corroborated by Mrs. Marie Franks, her mother.

From a tentative investigation of the Landsiedel girl as the "White Diamond" leader of a nation-wide gang of diamond thieves, the police yesterday dropped to an appellation of shoplifter. The case was struck a hard blow Monday when it was revealed that recently the girl actually had paid more than $2,000 cash for two diamond rings.

Miss Hemphill confessed that she was a shoplifter trained by Betty.

The police still sought Gordon Chambers, youth who recently posed as the husband of Betty.

HIGHLIGHTS IN TORONTO'S TRAGIC MURDER



The series of sketches above shows the stages in the career of George Deignton M.C., of Toronto, noted linguist and distinguished army officer, who slew his young son with a hatchet and seriously injured his wife and his other child, then gave himself up to the police after wandering around the streets of Toronto for hours. He says he did it to save them from poverty.

FIVE SCHOLARSHIPS FOR AGRICULTURISTS

Offered With Object of Assisting Graduates From Canada's Agricultural Colleges.

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 18 (Canadian Press).—With the object of assisting graduates from Canada's agricultural colleges, particularly those who wish to go on to higher post-graduate work and incidentally to help in keeping pace with the increasing number of scientific discoveries in the world of agriculture, five scholarships are to be awarded, valued at $600 each.

The scholarships, which are the gift of a prominent Toronto commercial organization, are available to graduates of Canadian universities who are members of the Canadian Society of Technical Agriculturists, a body which comprises practically all those who successfully negotiate the regular degree courses in the Dominion. The awards will be made by a committee appointed by the society at its next annual meeting, such body to include a representative of the donors.

Progress Being Made.

It is pointed out that information is now reaching Canadian farmers through a great variety of channels. Progress is being made in farming methods; but as the level of farmers is raised new and more complex problems present themselves. This means that further information must be forthcoming. Much of this information can only be obtained through the efforts of highly trained men. In this connection it is felt that Canada should make every effort to have her own young men assist in this work rather than see them go to positions outside the country and the scholarship idea is one of the best means of overcoming this difficulty.

The scholarships are tenable to any agricultural college in Canada offering post-graduate work.

ENO for fitness

IN life, as in sport, staying power counts for as much as skill in the game. And on what does endurance depend more than on fitness and sound health?

The very key rule to health is to avoid internal sluggishness. That is where ENO's "Fruit Salt" has its place. ENO keeps waste and stagnation out of the blood stream. It cleanses, purifies and invigorates. So let ENO—first thing every morning—be your unvarying rule, just as it has been with experienced people for the past sixty years. They know that there is no substitute for

THE SALVATION ARMY.

The local corps of the Army was visited this week end by Colonel R. Henry, the chief secretary of the Canada East territory, a man of wide and varied experience in Salvation Army circles, having at various times been connected with the field work; as an officer on the training garrison, on editorial work in Australia and New Zealand, and during the war he was a chaplain to the New Zealand forces. From the end of hostilities he has been engaged in administrative offices and his short sojourn in the city was full of interest to the local corps. At the Men's Bible Class on Sunday afternoon Alderman R. Cotton prefaced the Colonel's address with remarks of welcome to the city on behalf of the City Council.

Taking as his subject, "Remember Jesus," and reading 2 Timothy, chap. 2, Colonel Henry in the evening service said: "Away down in the Andes, those rocky heights of Southern America, beyond the snow line, there stands to this day a colossal statue of Jesus Christ. Why there? you say. Few people will ever see it. Many years ago between two of the republics of that country there was strife and contention on the question of the boundary line, and by mutual agreement the leaders accepted the suggestion that the late King Edward VII act as arbitrator and on his decision each pledged his word that there would be no further dissension, and to celebrate the event, a statue of the Prince of Peace, Jesus Christ was erected.

"What a wonderful figure, and He requests we remember Him. Paul in the chapter I read, pleads with Timothy that he remember Jesus in spite of all he hear. He who was of the House of David.

"When on earth He became man, stooping to the lowest depths, fully understood the cares and woes of man, was tempted as we are tempted. Think of His life, how meek, yet majestic, tempted, contradicted, reviled, accused as a 'wine bibber,' but through it all remained unruffled. In Him the children found a friend; to the poor He appeared as a peasant, yet majestic at all times.

"Picture Him asleep in the little boat on Galilee, around Him the disciples bailing out the water, their dire extremity as expressed in the cry, 'Master we perish,' and then standing looking the wind in the face and commanding the waves to cease and suddenly there was a great calm.

"Again the trembling woman who touched the hem of His garment, fearful lest the crowd should see her action but how tenderly He recalled her that she might look into His face and be fully healed.

"Mary and Martha with Jesus at the tomb of Lazarus, and their suggestion that it was useless to have come now their brother had been many days dead, but with what majesty He stands and calls to Lazarus to 'comeforth.'

"When Pharisees and Sadduces in the terrible Passion week in the judgment hall did all possible to provoke they were unable to disturb His serenity and He came through the conflict a conqueror. We think of His death, a unique death, one of many crucifixions that had taken place, so why unique? Did not the prophet Isaiah in the 53rd chapter of that book say 'He would make His death with the wicked?' David foretold of it—prophet and psalmist alike. He Himself told His disciples that He would die on a cross in Jerusalem and all through His life He steadfastly set His face to that objective, and when the Roman soldiers crucified Him He prayed 'Father forgive them,' and the veil of the temple was rent in twain.

"But remembering His death with what joy we must remember His resurrection. That the angel did roll away the stone, that the body that was inanimate became a risen Christ. That is the centre of our religion, the kernel. Eleven times He was seen before His ascension, by the women, by Peter, by the disciples who told Thomas, who doubted and then Jesus came to them again and called to Thomas to feel the sword thrust and the nail prints, and His wonderful message, 'Blessed are they who believe yet have not seen.'

"Remember Jesus. He who became the servant of all, died and rose again and has taken His place at the right hand of the Father, the ruler and governor, a wonderful personality, able to sympathize and console, and it with us at all times. Remember His salvation. He came to save, to redeem, to bless every son and daughter of man with restoration to peace, and to give the gift of eternal life. To-night He stands at the door of your heart and begs admission. Do not let the clash and glamour of the world, the tinsel and paltry things of life, attract your attention from that voice. Though your sins be as mountains and inquities separate you from God, remember Jesus came to restore you to perfect peace."

What You Want in the WANT ADS

Dull, listless, out of sorts, feeling half-sick

IS it a cold coming on? Is it over-eating or what can it be? Probably it is Nature warning that your system is not functioning properly.

When you feel this way you should follow the treatment that has helped many, many other people. Even two weeks of it will make a difference in the way you feel.

A prominent New York physician says, "When my patients have that dull half-sick feeling I always prescribe Nujol and recommend at least two weeks' continued usage. Why? Because Nujol absorbs and clears away the toxic intestinal poisons that in most cases are the cause of the trouble. Further, Nujol is absolutely harmless and can be taken by young babies or old people."

Not like medicine

Nujol contains no drugs or medicine. It's a natural substance unlike anything else. Can't hurt you. Others have benefited from taking it, why not you? This remarkable product is sold all over the world. Go to any druggist, get a bottle of Nujol and see for yourself what it will do. Only—don't delay. Do it now. Insist on the real Nujol. Perfected by the famous Chemical Products Division of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey. Look for the Nujol bottle with the label on the back that you can read right through the bottle.

ASK ADJUSTMENT CREAMERY TARIFF

Annual Convention of Canadian Produce Association Brought to Close.

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 18.—(Canadian Press.)—Following an address by Edward Hallman, Toronto, in which conditions facing the butter producers of the Dominion were discussed, the annual convention of the Canadian Produce Association, at its final session yesterday passed a resolution asking the Dominion government to adjust the creamery tariff to afford protection to the producers "who are finding it increasingly difficult to compete with imports from the southern hemisphere."

Mr. Hallman blamed a large part of the problem, which he said was facing the butter producers, on the tariff rates which, he held, permit the importation of cheap butter. He made special reference to the trade agreement with Australia. He claimed that butter came into Canada from Australia and sold at a price sometimes lower than that for the Canadan product. He drew a comparison with the butter industry in the United States which, he said, was protected by a high tariff and as a result business was good though prices were higher.

Certified Before Shipping.

The convention also passed a resolution recommending that cream and milk exported from Canada be pasteurized in Canadian plants and certified before being shipped out of the country. Another resolution urged the Dominion government to establish a poultry bureau for research and study of all problems pertaining to the industry.

A great part of the convention session yesterday was taken up with a discussion of a definition of a fresh egg. A resolution was passed advocating a change in the regulations under the live stock and live stock products act to provide that a fresh, No. 1 egg, may be sixty days old provided it has been in storage.

E. J. Smith presented a paper in which he declared there had been much bootlegging of eggs outside the strict interpretation of the law.

Dr. J. A. Ruddick, dairy commissioner, Ottawa, in a paper suggested that Canadian produce men should capitalize the special quality of Canadian cheddar cheese. He charged that Canadian cheese exporters had "fallen down badly" in the cars of cheese. Too little attention was paid he said, to temperature levels.

W. S. Cameron, Toronto, was elected president of the Association for the coming year. H. S. Clemes, Toronto, became the junior past president; J. A. Caulder was elected first vice-president; A. Linoges, Montreal, second vice-president; Jas. T. Madden re-elected secretary-treasurer and P. W. McLagan, Westmount, Que., was elected representative to the National Dairy Council.

PLANE WRECKAGE FOUND.

CHARLOTTETOWN, P. E. I., Jan. 18.—(Canadian Press).—A piece of an airplane wreckage, picked up on shore at Cavendish recently, has arrived here. It is 54 inches by 45 inches and is painted an orange-like color. This bit of wreckage, the third to have been found at different places along the shore of Prince Edward Island within the past three weeks, is undoubtedly part of an airplane wing.

TACIT PROMISE READ IN SPEECH

President Coolidge Offers Leadership Toward Pan-American Solidarity.

HAVANA, Cuba, Jan. 18.—(Canadian Press).—A canvass of opinion by the Associated Press correspondent showed in general that listeners to President Coolidge's address at the opening of the Pan-American Conference, at which he said that international helpfulness is the policy of his country, read in the speech a tacit promise of United States co-operation and of leadership towards the ideal of Pan-American solidarity and mutual help.

Cavan

CAVAN, Jan. 18.—Messrs. Lang and Tinney shipped hogs from Cavan station on Monday. The price paid was eight cents.

The feeding of hogs has not been profitable this season, and farmers seem to be getting rid of them as quickly as possible, judging from the fewer numbers being kept over. They will soon be scarcer and perhaps the price may be better.

Next Sunday evening in Cavan United Church the service will commence with a song service.

The annual meeting of Cavan Church will be held in the basement of the church at eight o'clock.

The Cavan Women's Institute will meet at Mrs. Richard Matchett's home on Thursday afternoon. A full attendance of members is requested.

Mr. Barker is working in the General Motors, Oshawa.

Mr. Harold Hunter has been home from the West for a visit with his father, Mr. A. Hunter.

Miss M. Matchett, Pontypool, spent the week-end at her home in Cavan.

Perspiration Odour so unpardonable so easy to banish

What quality is so attractive as personal charm . . . . and what social fault so obnoxious as perspiration odour.

Every person perspires, of course. It's natural, it's healthful. Physicians say the perspiration of the average person measures between one and two pints daily. Nature takes this way of ridding the body of impurities through the millions of tiny pores of the skin.

But perspiration need not be objectionable. Lifebuoy Soap, used in the bath, banishes the odour. Lifebuoy's creamy, mild lather not only cleanses, but also purifies the pores—antiseptically—and keeps them sweet, open and breathing.

To Keep Well
Drink plenty of water, perspire freely and banish perspiration odour with Lifebuoy Soap.

Make sure of avoiding the needless social error of perspiration odour. Use Lifebuoy Soap, for hands, face and bath.

Low in price—wonderful in results.

Latest Comment on Grain and Industrial Markets. — Closing Quotations on the Principal Active Stocks.

F. G. Oke and Company say:

TORONTO, Jan. 18—An announcement of great interest to those interests in Canadian mining has been made by Mining Corporation regarding the right of Mining Corporation shareholders to participate in the new offering of Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Company, Limited, which owns the Flin Flon properties. Besides a very substantial cash payment, Mining Corporation is to receive 150,000 shares of Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Company, Limited for its 15 per cent interest in Flin Flon. As a result, Mining Corporation is offering to its shareholders the right to subscribe to one share of Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Company, Ltd., at $15.00 per share for each ten shares of Mining Corporation held. Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Company, Limited, is capitalized at 2,500,000 shares of no-par value of which the Whitney interests together with Mining Corporation's 150,000 shares are to receive 1,000,000 shares as the purchase price of the property.

This morning shares of Sherritt-Gordon were called for trading on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange and if this morning's market action of a rise from 6.75 to 7.30 per share, is an indication, shares in this company may be expected to prove a very popular issue. Rights have also been announced regarding Sherritt-Gordon. Shareholders of record January 34th, 1928, have the right to subscribe to one share of treasury stock at a price of $4.00 per share for each six shares of Sherritt-Gordon held. Subscription of $2.00 per share must be made on or before February 1st, with the balance spread over a further six months.

Although Wright-Hargreaves continued to decline in price, news was received early this morning that exceptionally high grade ore had been located on the 1,625-foot level with values over $50 per ton. Also that the 1,700-foot level was developing in a like manner. In view of these developments, it seems as though speculators would not go far wrong to purchase Wright-Hargraves at the comparatively low prices.

As a whole the mining market was patchy this morning but underlying conditions appeared more promising.

A late report from the north states that cross- No. 4 is now 51-feet from the foot wall of the drift and is in ore all the way with the face still in ore. Samples of Abana ore are being taken across the various sections of these ore bodies which show changes in the mineralization and these will be forwarded for assay.

Thursday will be the last day to buy Amulet and participate sells exrites on Friday 20th.

Wheat Values Fall, Following Liverpool

CHICAGO, January 18 (Canadian Press). — With Liverpool quotations showing a decline whereas an advance had been looked for, wheat values here averaged lower early today. The announcement that Argentine vessel rates were reduced was construed as a bearish factor. Opening at ½ off to ⅛ up, Chicago wheat subsequently underwent a moderate setback. Corn, oats, and previsions were relatively firm, corn starting unchanged to ¼c to ⅜c decline, but later scoring a raise.

Opening prices were: Wheat, March 129⅝, May 130½. Corn, March 91, May 93. Oats, March 55¼, May 56¼.

Drive On Rail Shares Unsettles New York

NEW YORK, January 18 (Canadian Press). — A sudden "bear" drive against the railroad shares, which touched off a number of "stop loss" orders, unsettled to-day's stock market. The reaction came after an opening display of strength in which Public Utilities had taken a prominent part. Trading continued relatively dull, however, with indications that the day's total would again fall below 2,000,000 shares.

The raid on rails probably was inspired by the belief that holders of those issues were becoming discouraged over their lethargic market action during the past few weeks. Chesapeake and Ohio quickly broke five points, Canadian Pacific 3⅜, and New York Central, Frisco Common, Reading, St. Louis, South-Western, and a few others sold down two points or more.

The weekly steel trade reviews were optimistic in character. Iron Age stating that finished steel requirements are not only growing in volume, but are becoming better balanced. United States Steel Common nevertheless sank below 144 to a new low on the current down swing.

Cockshutt Plow's Gain Features Weak Market

TORONTO, Jan. 18. — (Canadian Press.)—Cockshutt Plow was an active and strong feature of an otherwise depressing list on the Toronto stock exchange to-day. This stock sold up eight points at 120½. Most other issues sagged, except Christie Brown, which gained a point at 118, and Canadian Oil with point gain at 54. The most active stock was British American Oil, which lost a half at 37½. International Petroleum, only slightly less active, lost the same fraction at 61. The Canners issues and Massey Harris, International Nickel, Building Products, Seagram and Imperial Tobacco all lost fractionally. Shredded Wheat suffered another two point recession at 72. Liquors showed some firmness, with Carlings gaining to 38¾, Malting to 37, and Walker to 65, all fractional advances.

Few Mine Stocks Make Gains To-day

TORONTO, Jan. 18 (Canadian Press).—A few strong spots cropped up in the market on the Standard Mining Exchange today, but the majority of the list appeared hesitant. Mining Corporation advanced on the news of the participation of shareholders in Flin Flon rights. The close was around 4.75. Nipissing sold up to 5.80 for a gain of some fifteen points. Bidgood firmed up to over 90 following its break to the low 80's yesterday. Barry Hollinger, Beaver, and Kirkland closed firmer. Howey was down slightly, finishing around 162. Premier came up five points at 240. Further weakness was displayed in Wright-Hargreaves, the issue closing at 5.65 bid after selling during the morning at 5.60. Central Manitoba was up to 1.78. Sudbury Basin was firmer.

Bathurst Mines made its appearance on the listed, and Sherritt-Gordon on the unlisted for the first time today. Sherritt advanced to close to 725 after beginning at 675.

SPIES GUILTY COURT DECIDES

Two Men Sentenced To Ten Year Terms For Seeking Plane Plans.

SOVIET BLAMED.

LONDON, January 18 (Canadian Press). — George Hanson, a German, and Wilfrid F. McCartney, said to be an Irish-American, charged with espionage in behalf of Soviet Russia, were found guilty to-day by a jury in Old Bailey Court.

They were sentenced to ten years' penal servitude each.

The men were specifically charged with attempting to collect information about the British armed forces, particularly about the Royal Air Force. So important did Attorney-General Hogg regard the evidence introduced that he asked that the public be excluded from the trial.

During yesterday's session in camera, the Attorney-General showed documents to the jury, including a questionnaire dealing with the plans of the Air Force. He said that this document could only have been composed by a group of persons familiar with their subject, such as the war staff of some foreign Power.

Throughout the trial the Government contended that Soviet Russia was responsible for instigating the conspiracy to obtain Great Britain's military information.

January Weather

The mild January weather this year seems to be an ever popular subject for conversation and writing. It may therefore be of interest to know that, according to data in a diary kept by Mr. Thomas H. Blanchard of this city, while living in the Belleville district, the January of the year 1906 was very much warmer and milder than this present season. There were very light snowstorms followed by rain, throughout the entire month. Golfing and boating were the leading sports in the absence of snow.

On the twenty-first of the month the thermometer registered 60 deg. above zero in the shade, and the average temperature for the whole month resembled that of April rather than January.

This same diary also contains data for the following year, 1907, which shows that the winter season was very long and very severe, the ground being covered with snow from the first of November to the middle of April.

APPEAL BEING HEARD.

Oshawa C.A.S. Official Appeals From Conviction and Sentence.

TORONTO, Jan. 18 (Canadian Press).—Argument commenced in the First Divisional Court today on the appeal of Harley Elliott, Superintendent of the Children's Aid Shelter at Oshawa, from his conviction and sentence to three years in penitentiary for an unnatural offense against a 13-year-old boy, a ward of the society. T. N. Phelan, K.C., acted on behalf of the appellant. It was pointed out that the offense was alleged to have occurred in May, 1924, in the course of a motor trip to Lindsay, but that the charge was not tried until November, 1927.

The appellant's contention was that the charge was a "frame up" out in reply to a question from Sir William Mulock, the appellant's counsel admitted there was no evidence of ill will.

A meeting of the Girls' Work Board was held on Monday evening to arrange for the district Canadian Girls in Training conference to be held in Peterborough, January 27 to 29. Representatives from each of the following churches were present: George Street, St. Paul's, Trinity, At. Andrew's Mark Street, St. James' and the Y.W.C.A. Miss Leta Brownscombe, president of the Board, outlined the program of the conference, which will include sessions on Friday evening, Saturday morning, special recreation Saturday afternoon, a banquet, and evening session on Saturday, and a closing meeting and ceremony on Sunday afternoon at 4.15.

The registration fee, which includes the banquet, is 50 cents for girls and $1.00 for leaders. Any 'teen age girl or leader of girls' work may register and attend all sessions. Delegates are expected from Lakefield, Port Hope, Millbrook, Lindsay, Grafton, and Woodville, as well as from the Peterborough churches. Registrations should be in by Monday, January 23, and may be left with Miss B. Whitfield, registrar for the conference, or at the Y.W.C.A.

The organized groups of Canadian Girls in Training in Peterborough will have charge of the following parts of the program: Brief talks by the girls on "The Spirit of C.G.I.T. in our Homes, Schools, Churches, and Community," a pageant "The Gate of the West," a story, and a quartette.

Miss D. Davidson was appointed convenor of arrangements in connection with the conference church, and Miss Gladys Coon, convenor of the Banquet Committee. Miss M. Elliott and Mrs. J. CHANGE OF VENUE REFUSED BY JUDGES Against Law To Transfer Hotelling Hearing From Flint, They Say.

FLINT, Mich., Jan. 18.—(Canadian Press.)—The disposition of the case of Adolph Hotelling, confessed slayer of five year old Dorothy Schneider, suddenly became a matter of mystery to-day with belief growing that he would be returned to Genesee county, Flint, for Circuit Court hearing. Hope of a change of venue so he could plead guilty in another county faded when two Genesee judges declared a transfer could not be granted under the laws.

The efforts of Governor Green to have Hotelling tried outside the county as a precaution against a recurrence of mob violence hit a snag to-day when Circuit Judge Fred Brennan came out against the plan.

Judge Brennan, from whom permission to hold the trial elsewhere must be obtained, said to-day he saw no necessity for such a move and that he was opposed to putting the county to the extra expense involved. Governor Green was indignant when notified of Judge Brennan's stand and declared it woud be foolhardy to invite more rioting by the prisoner's presence here.

TALKS ON FLOWERS AT ANNUAL MEETING

W. H. Young and A. E. Prest To Address Horticultural Society.

The annual meetings of the Peterborough Horticultural Society are invariably of real interest to many citizens who will learn with pleasure that the annual general meeting of the society has been set by the executive for Friday, Jan. 20, at 8.00 p.m., to be held in the council room of the Chamber of Commerce.

Addresses on floriculture will be given by W. H. Young, proprietor Ingledean Gardens, 592 Chamberlain street, Peterborough who will speak on Roses, and Arnold E. Prest, 342 Lansdowne street, Peterborough, who has chosen as his subject, "How and when to plant Gladiolo."

In addition to the above subjects "Roses" and "Gladioli," those in attendance at the meeting will be in a position to answer any questions on the general subjects of vegetable and flower rearing.

In view of the attractiveness of the programme for the annual general meeting, Chairman Lacheur anticipates there will be a very encouraging attendance. Members are also invited to suggest activities for the Horticultural Society, from which with additions, a programme of work for 1928 may be formulated.

The Most Astounding Crime in a Generation

A girl of uncommon loveliness. . . A product of the Bohemian demi-monde of Broadway, a scintillant figure who seemed somehow to typify the gaudy and spurious romance of transient gaiety. . . .

Never was there a case more baffling, more contradictory, than the slaying of the beautiful Margaret Odell, whom men called "The Canary."

Usually detectives are baffled by mysterious disappearances—cases where there is evidence of a crime but no body. In this case, however, there is apparently a body without a crime.

It is a stupendous plot!

THE GAS PLANT.

In the steps that it is taking to fully investigate the revenue, expenditure and value of the local gas plant the City Council is proceeding on sound business lines.

It is possible that the purchase of the gas plant and its operation as a municipal utility might be a good thing for Peterborough provided the price was reasonable, but the Council is quite justified in endeavoring to secure as complete and as accurate information as possible.

At present all that is known is that the utility showed a working surplus of $45,000 in 1925.

The Council wants the returns for the past two years, an independent audit of the books and permission for a valuator to go over the plant, and if the Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario is considering the welfare of the people of Peterborough it should agree to meet the municipal government in these requests and supply all the desired information.

When the cards are all on the table there will be a chance to intelligently discuss the advisability or otherwise of Peterborough taking over the plant.

STRENGTHENING THE BOARD.

The decision of the Peterborough Board of Health to seek legislation at the coming session of the Legislature amending the Public Health Act so that the Board of Education and the Separate School Board may be empowered to appoint representatives to municipal Health Boards, is founded on common sense.

Most certainly, those bodies which have in their charge the education of the city's children are directly interested in health matters and should have representation upon the Board of Health.

The latter organization would have its hands strengthened by the addition of members bearing a mandate from the educational bodies, and the result should be decidedly beneficial to the whole community.

The Board of Health should be a bulwark for the city against disease.

Its work is of great importance, and it is well that its membership should be representative and composed of men who are sincerely interested in the problems that come before the Board.

The School Board representatives, realizing the importance of health work in connection with children, would undoubtedly be capable of excellent service.

PAYING FOR SERVICE.

With Premier Ferguson's theory that Government services should be paid for by those to whom those services are of the most advantage, there is little to find fault.

It is sound and business-like, and The Examiner hopes with Mr. Ferguson that the time will come when it will be possible to lift the burden of taxation from the shoulders of the average citizen and place it upon those who get the most benefit out of the services that must be provided by the Government.

The cost of Provincial highways, for example, is a load that bears heavily upon the counties.

The twenty per cent. of the cost of construction and maintenance of such highways that has to be paid by the counties represents a serious drain upon the municipal treasury; in the case of Peterborough County it means five mills of taxation—and there is reason to question whether the rural taxpayers who have to meet this levy get an adequate return from the taxes they pay.

Certainly the Provincial highway into Peterborough does not benefit many of the citizens of the county to the extent represented by a five mill levy.

With the Premier's theory in smooth working order the cost of the highways would be paid for to a great extent by the people who most use these roads through an adequate gasoline tax.

That would ensure the greatest contributions being made by those who receive the most benefit, and that is a principle that is logical and equitable.

IT PAYS.

The efforts of the Trent Waterway Development Association, the Chamber of Commerce and other organizations to attract more tourists into this district received considerable impetus yesterday by reason of the importance attached by Premier Ferguson to the stimulation of tourist traffic.

Mr. Ferguson in his address to the Rotary Club stressed the fact that eight and a half million United States visitors came into Ontario last year, and in addition to the great stimulus to business generally as a result of the money spent by these tourists, there was another great benefit in that many visitors acquired summer homes here.

The Premier felt that these investments would increase in the future, and that the presence each summer of so many United States visitors owning their own summer homes on Ontario's lakes would mean increased prosperity to everybody.

That is an angle of the tourist traffic that has perhaps not been stressed as much as it might have been, and it forms another argument in favour of concentrating attention upon the attraction of more visitors into our own particular district.

Every family from over the border which buys Ontario property and lives on it two or three months each summer is an asset of real value to the district in which it locates.

Local organizations are justified in using every effort to bring in tourists—the returns are large and sure.

The tourist traffic pays handsomely.

NOT JUSTIFICATION.

That the young bank bandit, Johnson, was intoxicated when, with a companion, he entered the premises of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, King street east, held up the staff at the point of a gun and removed $23,000 from the vault, is a point his counsel seems intent upon establishing. But whether he was or was not would seem to be unimportant. That he was intoxicated to the point of insensibility, as his counsel claims, is a charge scarcely borne out by the evidence. Witnesses have told that he went about his grim task methodically and other witnesses have narrated how this "insensible drunk" ran three city blocks, climbed fences and dodged through alleys, after being struck a vigorous blow on the head with a hammer. The law holds, however—and properly—that intoxication is not a mitigating circumstance when the intoxicated one commits a criminal act. Gunmen, engaged in robberies and hold-ups, quite often ply themselves with liquor or "dope" to give themselves the "Dutch courage" required to commit their crimes. If, after drinking to steel themselves to the immediate job at hand, they could fall back upon the plea of intoxication, it would be farcical justice, in truth. The bandit, Johnson, is a presentable young man, clean-cut, and apparently of more than average intelligence. It is said that he comes of a highly respected family in Toronto. He says that he has been taught his lesson and is sincerely sorry for his part in the hold-up. If he is sincere, he can yet become a useful member of society after he has paid his debt. No matter how long the sentence he receives, he can thank his lucky stars that he escaped the gallows. The gun he leveled repeatedly at his pursuers only had to be discharged once and he would have found himself in a position infinitely worse than his present plight. The dispatch with which the police, with the assistance of civilians, effected arrests in this case should be a warning to other youngsters contemplating careers of crime.—Hamilton Spectator.

THE FINANCIAL WEST.

The impetus given to the Canadian West by good crops and prosperity has meant an increase in its financial power. It still takes, in even greater degree than the rest of Canada, the part of a borrower. But eastern lenders are finding increased difficulty in getting high yields on investments in the West. The good times have not only enabled farmers and other borrowers to pay off part of what they owe, but have also given many others a surplus for investment.

This development is but a part of the growth of the West towards economic maturity. Its production grows more complex, and now includes quite a variety of manufacturing. There is plenty of water power in Manitoba and British Columbia, and Alberta has big coal deposits. These are essentials to industrial development. The West has a variety of raw materials, and, on the demand side, the market is bound to grow.

During the past year an increased interest in local industries showed not only the growing financial power of the Canadian West, but also the confidence of these new capitalists in their own territory. This confidence has not been shaken by real estate booms, by oil booms or by Bingo mines.—The Monetary Times.

FITNESS FOR HIGHER EDUCATION.

School Inspector Putnam of Ottawa says that in the secondary schools of Ontario there are too many boys who are wasting their time because they are unfitted for higher education, and are there merely because of parental pride.

"Many an honest working laborer looks upon the school as an open door which will lead his son into a promised land where the hands will not be soiled by soot or grime or blistered by monotonous toil. The son, except in rare cases, sacrifices the fair chance, wastes three or four valuable years, acquires habits that unfit him for the work he really could do well, and ends up an unskilled adventurer who tries many things and succeeds at none."

There is, of course, no reason why the son of a laborer should not become a good lawyer, doctor, preacher or teacher, or why culture should be withheld from those who work with their hands, and we do not suppose the Inspector would deny that. But the trouble arises from people who have no particular desire for culture and who pursue their studies in a listless way, receiving little if any benefit themselves and taking attention which ought to be given to real students. The listless ones are apt thus to acquire habits of giving only half their minds to their work, which must tell against them when they go out into the world.

In recent years attempts have been made to remove this difficulty by institutions which give instruction in other than the old traditional lines—agricultural colleges, schools of commerce and technical schools. Many clever youths who would regard language and literary studies as dry are keenly interested in mechanics, and can obtain a practical training as well as a measure of general culture by an education of that kind.

The desire of parents to give their children the best possible opportunities for education is laudable, but it ought to be accompanied by careful observation of the manner in which the opportunities are being used. One who is clearly idling away his or her time, or has no aptitude for learning, ought to be taken away from school, whether the father is a laborer, a professional man, or a man of business.

There is another factor in the situation which educationists cannot control. That is a false philosophy of life, which attaches a higher social value to what are called white-collar occupations than to mechanical callings. This is quite a different thing from love of learning or from respect for scholarship, and it may influence people who seldom open a book, while it is not uncommon to find a mechanic or a working farmer who is a reader and has a wide range of intellectual interests.—London Advertiser.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Even if Premier Ferguson didn't mention it yesterday, you had better get those new automobile markers without delay.

The Conservative "at home" was so successful that it could not possibly have been planned by the Board of Strategy.

Up to the present the Seymour ghost has refused to do his stuff for the press. What a chance for publicity that spook has thrown away!

Centralization is the theory of municipal civil service as practised in Stirling. The duties of electrician, sanitary inspector, cow bylaw officer, village engineer, caretaker of the opera house and truant officer are all looked after by one official. The chief of police probably fills the rest of the civic positions.

The Premier's warning that a higher gasoline tax is coming should occasion no surprise. The only wonder is that the increase is not to be made this year.

Peterborough's Exhibition Board holds its annual meeting Friday, facing one of the biggest years in the history of the organization.

The City Council is wise in taking a stop, look and listen attitude in regard to the purchase of the gas plant. The proposition requires careful investigation.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., January 18 (Canadian Press). — The foreign demand for Canadian grain continued quiet here yesterday, and the volume of business was small. Outside of a little inquiry from local buyers for oats for direct shipment from Fort William and a small trade passing on spot with country merchants, the domestic grain market was without any new feature to note. Prices were steady.

The trade in spring wheat grades of flour was dull, but prices were firm. On the other hand the winter wheat market was moderately active and prices were unchanged.

A feature of the millfeed trade was the further inquiry from United States buyers, but owing to the limited quantities available the volume of business was curtailed. The local demand was fair, and the undertone was firm. The demand for standard grades of rolled oats was fair and prices were unchanged.

An unsettled feeling again prevailed in the egg situation, and it was reported yesterday that some dealers were cutting prices for fresh extras one cent per dozen, and storage extras one to two cents per dozen. This was attributed to the large receipts and the limited demand. The receipts were 1,948 cases.

Only a small volume of business was done in potatoes, and prices were unchanged.

Car lots of Prince Edward Island Green Mountains were quoted at $1.15 per bag of 90 pounds; Prince Edward Island Whites at $1.05 per bag of 90 pounds; New Brunswick Green Mountains at $1.00 per bag of 90 pounds in bulk; and New Brunswick White potatoes at 95c per bag of 90 pounds in bulk, ex-track.

A very firm feeling prevailed in the market for imported beans at the late advance quoted, but the volume of business was small. Car lots of choice white hand-picked sold at $2.80 per bushel, ex-track, and broken lots at $2.90 per bushel, ex-store.

The demand for butter was confined to small lots, and there was no change in prices. The receipts were 42 packages.

The trade in cheese continued slow, but the undertone remained steady. The receipts were 308 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, January 18 (Canadian Press). — Lively speculative buying and general excellent cash demand, with abnormal weather, hoisted the corn market yesterday to the highest prices since the middle of December. Corn export business from the United States totalled as much as 600,000 bushels, and premiums overtopped any heretofore paid this season.

Closing quotations on corn were firm, ½c to 1¼c net higher, wheat finished ½c to ¾c up, oats at ¾c decline to ¾c advance, and provisions to 10c down.

Seasonably mild temperatures tending to hinder the movement of the domestic crop gave impetus to corn buying yesterday almost from the outset. Moreover, Buenos Aires advices stated that the new Argentine corn crop was deteriorating from lack of rain. Liverpool despatches meanwhile said Argentine offers were scarce, and that Argentine shippers were advancing prices rapidly. A further stimulus was that No. 2 mixed corn at the Gulf of Mexico was commanding five cents over the Chicago May delivery.

Virtually the highest prices of the day in the corn market were current at the close, notwithstanding that rural offerings to arrive here had enlarged somewhat as a result of the bulge in values. Late reports of soaking rains in Argentina were also practically ignored. A counter-balancing influence was a forecast that temperatures considerably above the normal and with mostly clear skies would continue in the Chicago district during the next two or three days.

Wheat market upturns were largely a result of corn strength. Export sales of 500,000 bushels of North American wheat were announced, partly wheat from the United States. On the other hand, beneficial rains were reported in the Texas Panhandle and portions of Oklahoma, but Western Kansas remains dry, and a large acreage of Kansas wheat now appears beyond relief.

Oats met with free selling, although contract stocks of oats in Chicago are down to less than 1,000,000 bushels.

Provisions were easy at the last, reecting weakness of the hog market.

STERLING EXCHANGE.

MONTREAL, Que., January 18 Press). — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday as follows:

Demand—$4.87⅞.
Cables—$4.88⅜.

A Thought

THE ENCOURAGING SITUATION.

One of the most encouraging and hopeful situations in the business world is that today man stands a better show in his struggle for success when he has a high sense of responsibility to the people who patronize him.

Critical philosophers like Nietzsche, and smart writers of the theorist type who have never had any business experience, criticize and call us "refined business pirates" and "money grabbers," but why listen to their fog-logic? What do they know about business?

Any active, experienced successful man knows that it is much easier to make money out of the trade that is satisfied than it is to try to get profits out of the patrons who refuse to return to a store.

The astounding, amazing achievements in business is not the answer to vicious business plans—it is the reply to our great volume of business.

Fifty years ago the business man had to make big profits on small sales. Today, a narrow margin on a tremendous business is the rule.

The pen-pushers, the pessimistic philosophers and inexperienced professors who hiss and hoot, sneer and jeer at the integrity of big business should take a trip through some of our tremendous plants and learn that it is volume of business, not vicious business practice, that profits both the buyer and the seller.

IS INTERESTED IN LITTLE ONES

men of a true national spirit and a great patriotic ideal. We had men then of greater personal force and greater strength of character than we have today, and we had a larger percentage of our public-spirited men interested in national affairs. There are two reasons for this: One is that the most interesting period in the development of a country or a business is its constructive period, when you are building, step by step, its foundation; a huge problem that fascinates and attracts men of breadth and force and capacity. Today, with the rapidity of our expansion, we have a great industrial development and a great commercial enterprise, and this field of commercial life attracts the energies of many of the greatest men of the country. The field of industrial and commercial development has become an active competitive field with the field of public service, and I think it is a matter of serious regard in Canada today, and in this province, that there are not more men prepared to make some contribution to public service and to go into public life; men with the capacity and ability to make real contributions, either in the Provincial or in the Federal fields of activity, because the standards of a nation can be no higher than the standards of the individual citizen of that nation. Today we are lacking in that respect, more than any of the other cultured nations, and I think it is because Canada is a country of commercial opportunities and we are spending most of our time in encouraging and emphasizing the importance of bringing capital here to make the most of our national resources. But we should never cease in trying to make our best people take an interest in national life. Organizations like your Women's Canadian Club can teach our people much of the national life of Canada and the responsibilities of citizenship in a country such as ours."

Pre-Confederation Days.

"Before Confederation, we had an entirely different country. The Maritime provinces were isolated to a great extent and the two provinces of Ontario and Quebec were welded together, while away in the hinterland, beyond the great fresh-water seas, there was a great unknown country. We had great difficulties in bringing about a union between Ontario and Quebec, difficulties that still exist, to some extent; differences in ideals and temperaments, in language and religion and in organization, both social and municipal. The men who wished to effect the union of all the provinces realized that concession, consideration, compromise and toleration were necessary in bringing about that union. They sat down at a table and were able, by such concessions, to write a constitution that is the marvel of the world; one that has stood the test of sixty years without and amendment or interference in any material way. That is an impressive evidence of the public-spirited attitude of those men.

Since Confederation, we have had great men at the head of affairs and we have made great progress under the stirring stimulus of the treasures of history and tradition that come to us from the Mother Nation. For I venture to say that the success of Canada and our high standards of living today and the splendid ideals we have, are the result of our national life having been founded upon and born out of the loins of the British nation. If the time should ever come, which God forbid, that this nation of ours were to lose its connection with Great Britain, on that day begins the disintegration of Canada.

"Consider the commercial side. West of the Rocky Mountains and down to the Pacific Coast, their natural market is in the Orient. But they stay in Confederation because they are imbued with the spirit of loyalty to British institutions and the freedom they enjoy under these institutions. The natural interests of the Maritimes point to trade with Massachusetts, but they too are filled with enthusiasm for the maintenance of a close alliance with the Mother Land.

Material Progress.

"There is nothing new in this sentiment. It has been the view of public men of all shades of politics from Confederation down to the present time. In building up a prosperous country, we require two things; we must have socially and morally a happy people and we must have materially a progressive and successful people. Now, as far as our material progress is concerned, there is no country in the world that can outdistance us in the way of natural resources. Outside of cotton and sugar—and we could grow cotton in Canada—we are practically self-supporting. What we need is more money for investment and development and more people to help carry on our expansion and develop our national assets. We have the greatest transportation system in the world, built, financed and practically paid for by nine millions of people."

"What an amazing development there has been in a few years", said the Premier, referring to changed conditions in the North country within the past few years.

"Today there are 250,000 people north of the Great Lakes in Northern Ontario. They are producing more than one-half the newsprint paper produced on the American continent, which brings about one hundred and twenty-five millions of money yearly to the people of Ontario. Then there are the great mineral resources. We are third in gold production in the world, and we have a monopoly in the nickel output.

Immigration Policy

"What Canada needs and what Ontario needs is an active immigration policy that will bring to us the best type of people and an intelligent appeal to people of other nations to bring money in and help us develop Canada. We must have the proper type of immigrant. If you will take the time to study the social conditions of other lands, you will find that there is no other country in the world where standards are as high as they are in Canada. We think sometimes that we have an excessively high cost of living but that is because our standards are high. If we want to educate our children to dress them properly and give them a pleasant social life we must pay for it. I am strongly in favor of a high standard of life even if we have to pay a little more for our boots and shoes and clothing.

"In our educational institutions we make an appeal for service and the boys and girls are being educated along unselfish lines and trained along the lines of the acceptance of the responsibilities, as well as the privileges of citizenship.

Educational Facilities.

"We are endeavouring to carry education to the most remote sections and to people who labour under the greatest disadvantages. We have an excellent type of school in Ontario, as evidenced by the remark of Lord Haldane, a great educationist, acting as Privy Chancellor and presiding at the Privy Council some years ago, when a school problem came before that body, and who remarked at that time that he knew of no place in the world with such high standards of education as ours in the province of Ontario.

"We try to train our boys and girls in practical ways, as well as ethically and culturally, and we realize that in Ontario to-day there is a large number of boys and girls who are remote from educational centres and who also labor under defects, both physical and mental, which constitute a great handicap for them. One of the most fascinating and interesting phases of the work is the training of the immature or sub-normal mind.

"Away up on the horizon of Northern Ontario, which is four-fifths of the whole province, you find the isolated settlements and the pioneers with their little families, battling with loneliness and lack of educational and social facilities. Then along the great lines of steel—and there are forty-five hundred miles of railway in Northern Ontario—and at the end of every section, there are four or five of these families, the majority being of foreign tongue and birth, bringing up their families in absolute ignorance of the English language and of the ideals of the Anglo-Saxon people. We have started a correspondence course for these people and there is quite a staff in the Department of Education busy educating them by correspondence. You would be amazed at what a simple problem it is, too."

The speaker referred to the prize-winner in one section, an Armenian lad who was given a trip to the Toronto Exhibition and came in to see the Premier, and sat down to write a note of appreciation to Mr. Ferguson, doing it in simple, excellent English after only six months' tuition of this type. The Prime Minister also spoke of the travelling schools operated through the co-operation of the railroads, where cars are fitted up with desks for 16 children apiece and living quarters for the teacher are placed at the end of the coach. He spoke of the two half-breed boys who paddled forty miles down the Albany river, to spend an entire winter in tents pitched near the school coach and take daily lessons, trapping and hunting for their food. After seventeen days of intensive study these two boys were able to indite simply spelled missives.

"Ninety-eight per cent. of these people are foreigners and the only literature their parents can read are the Communistic newspapers which come to them from the Ukraine and from Poland. We want to make these children able to read Canadian newspapers and to imbibe the Canadian national spirit from them, so that they may be moulded into the national life of the Dominion, to salvage these new citizens."

The Prime Minister paid a tribute to the assistance in this endeavor afforded by the MacLean Publishing Company, which had donated a subscription to its magazine to each family whose boys and girls were being taught in this way, so that the children might learn from the illustrations something of Canadian conditions.

"I find this one of the most interesting parts of my work, far more interesting than talking about taxes on gasoline," said Mr. Ferguson.

Other Educational Centres.

Reference was made to the splendid work done at the School for the Deaf and Dumb in Belleville, where lip-reading and watching of throat muscles enables the children to learn to speak as well as normal boys and girls. The girls are taught to be useful. They make their own clothing, are educated in keeping house and in domestic science and along other lines as well.

At Brantford, blind people are taught in music and in piano tuning and in making shoes, developing in them a sense of self-reliance and of self-respect, and impressing upon them a sense of responsibility.

At Orillia, feeble-minded children, with a lower type of intellect or a slower-moving mental machinery than the average boy or girl, are trained in special ways, after tests which place them in tiehtr the "custodial" or "moron" classes. There are about 1,400 scholars of this type at Orillia, with sixteen teachers. The system employed is the same as that used with a weak muscle, working the intellect gradually and not over-feeding it, until results are obtained. The boys do work on the four-hundred-acre farm and here are made the prison uniforms in use in the province. One of the most interesting phases of the work is the culling-out process, when mental reactions to simple tests determine the standing of the pupils.

"This is an intensely interesting work. It involves the human problem and means the salvage of the wastage in our young children. It is better for Ontario to spend a few dollars in reclaiming one of these children than in bringing in a newcomer from some country that we know nothing about. I believe that one of the great opportunities of our educational system in Ontario is to so shape and broaden its activities that every child, no matter what its mental or physical condition, may have at least a reasonable chance to become a useful citizen."

The address of the Prime Minister wes received with renewed applause, and a vote of thanks was moved by Mrs. W. R. Morris, and seconded by Miss M. Archer at its conclusion. Mrs. Morris referred to the fine manner in which Ontario was handling its educational problems, to the way in which the "sting" had been taken out of grammar, by deleting from its study many of the tricky and involved non-essentials which formed pitfalls for scholars of the subject in older days, and to the promise which has been made of a more interesting history text-book.

Miss Archer, referring to the Premier's fear that political life did not now attract men of higher calibre, reassured him by pointing out that in time to come women might take their places.

Miss Tomkins presented the vote of thanks to the Premier, with a few well-chosen words, and also extended an invitation to those present to remain for a few minutes and meet the Prime Minister and Mrs. Ferguson, who accompanied him.

Announcement was made by the president of the visit here on February 24th of Miss Warren, who last year delighted the members of the Women's Canadian Club with her lecture on historical spots in England. The forthcoming address by Miss Warren, "Through the Trossachs and Edinburgh, will be given in the evening at St. John's Church Parish Hall, and will be illustrated by slides, made from pictures by the speaker.

Wise and Otherwise

A psychologist says the modern girl is adept at concealing her feelings. Well, the modern girl surely should be expected to conceal something.

The government wants more college men to take up aviation. Or aviation to take up more college men, it doesn't make any difference.

An arctic explorer says Laplanders rub noses when they meet. Americans rub fenders.

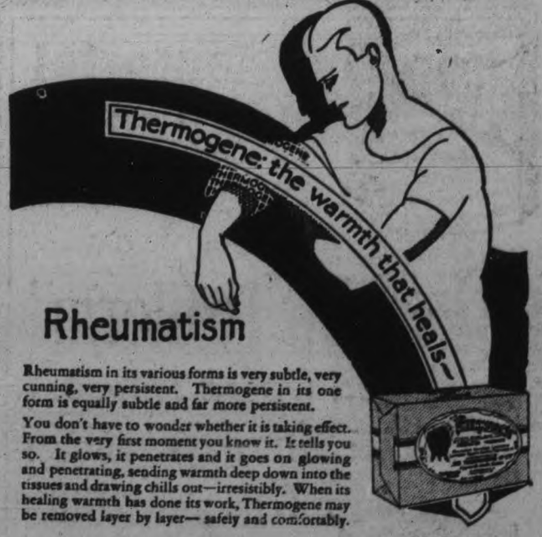
Don't judge too quickly. It is difficult to get the goods on the modern girl—that is, more than a yard or two. (Copyright, 1928, NEA Service, Inc.)



Rheumatism

Rheumatism in its various forms is very subtle, very cunning, very persistent. Thermogene in its one form is equally subtle and far more persistent.

You don't have to wonder whether it is taking effect. From the very first moment you know it. It tells you so. It glows, it penetrates and it goes on glowing and penetrating, sending warmth deep down into the tissues and drawing chills out—irresistibly. DRESS
By MARY MARSHALL

The so-called cummerbund effect is produced in this new frock of navy-blue satin. The glossy side of the material is used for the wide band and the deep cuffs while the dull surface is used for the rest.

New words are coined and old ones are reapplied to new developments of fashion and almost never is any record to be found of where or by whom these applications were first made. I spent some time one day out of sheer curiosity to try and find out the actual source of the word four plus as applied to Englishmen's knickers and after telephoning to everyone I could think of who ought to know I gave it up. I was told precisely what a four plus was and just how it differed from the usual knicker—but "why plus" and "why four"? My supposed authorities neither knew nor cared to know.

At least we have the satisfaction of knowing that bloomers were named after the pioneer suffragist, Amelia Bloomer, though as it happens she was not the first woman to wear 'em. And we know that Teddies were not named after Theodore Roosevelt.

I heard the other day for the first time the word "cummerbund" as applied to women's fashions. Someone spoke of one of the new frocks from one of the prominent French dressmakers as having a "cummerbund effect"—just like that, as if everyone knew just what a cummerbund effect was.

Well, as I discovered, the word is of Persian origin and was used originally in Persia to indicate a wide sort of loin cloth worn by the natives. As used in present-day fashions it indicates a wide straight application of the material extending usually from above the waistline to a little below the hips.

In the frock spoken of this band was made of the shiny side of satin while the rest of the frock save for the deep cuffs was made of the other side. Sometimes, as you know, the cummerbund is made of opaque silk while the skirt portion and bodice above the band are of georgette or chiffon.

But who, I wonder, first called it a cu[illegible]

Later, refreshments were served and a program of cards and dancing enjoyed. Mrs. T. Skinner carried out the arduous duties of convenor of the Refreshment committee in a very capable manner. Excellent music was provided by Logan's six-piece orchestra and the hall was attractively decorated with colored paper streamers and novelty effects. Fifty tables of cards were played, the bridge tables being in charge of Mrs. J. S. Fanning and Mrs. F. Miller and the euchre tables looked after by Mrs. C. Wright and Mrs. L. H. Deyman. Prizes for bridge were won by Mrs. C. L. Brewer and Mr. W. A. Greenslade and for euchre by Mrs. L. H. Deyman and Mr. L. SAINT and SINNER
By ANNE AUSTIN

"I hope I'm doing the right thing, letting you people talk this out before the patient," Miss Sutton, the nurse, worried. "But Dr. King is very eager to get any light possible on the cause of her illness. And she doesn't seem to be paying the slightest attention."

"There's really awfully little to tell," Cherry apologized. "I'd had a date with Bruce Patton but—I simply couldn't go through with it. I don't know whether you've heard any family gossip about Rhoda's brother, Nils Jonson, Fay—"

"Aunt Hattie was talking about him," Fay replied. "She says he's the handsomest man she ever laid eyes on and that Rhoda thought he wanted to marry you."

"He asked me and I laughed at him," Cherry confessed in a small voice. "I'd really fallen desperately in love with him the minute I met him, but I didn't want to love him and marry him. I was afraid of him, because I knew I'd more than met my match in him. I've always had the whiphand in every love affair, and I knew that Nils would be my master. And I was deathly afraid of being conquered, and I didn't want to marry him and go with him to that terrible farm of his, 'way off in Minnesota. So I was rude to him and tried to disgust him with me by flirting terribly with Bruce Patton. I knew I'd never be free again if I gave in to my love for him. He'd own me, body and soul, or he wouldn't want me."

Through the waves of giddiness there were pouring over her brain Faith heard Bob's voice take up the explanation: "She was in an awful stew over it and I was urging her not to be a coward, to take love and face life. I told her that no one is free who's in love. Me, for instance! I'm less than half a person without Faith—"

Faith did not hear his next words, for she was submerged in a tide of joy, such joy as she had never known in her life before, and she was still too weak to bear it. What a fool she had been! What an unworthy, doubting wretch of a wife for a man like Bob! She stifled the little cry of mingled pain and joy that struggled in her throat, for it came to her crushingly that Bob's love and trust in her would be mortally wounded when he knew that she had been so ready to believe the worst of him.

"But I still don't see why that should have upset Faith," Fay reasoned. "Surely she must have guessed that you were falling in love with Nils, Cherry, and I should think she'd have been glad—"

"Oh, what idiots we are!" Bob groaned suddenly, and Faith thought that he had understood at last. But his next amazing words were: "Cherry, can't you guess? She didn't hear anything about Nils at all! It's just come to me: she heard you crying hysterically over the fact that you would have to take Hope away from her. Don't you remember what you said?—something of how terrible it would be for both Faith and Hope to be separated? And how mad about the baby she is. I've been jealous scores of times. I believe she loves Hope better than she could ever love a child of her own, and the thought of losing her was such a shock—of course that's it! Poor Faith!

STOMACH TROUBLES THAT ARE DANGEROUS

(CUT THIS OUT)

Some forms of stomach trouble, if neglected, often lead to dangerous conditions—ulcers or cancers—then, a surgical operation is about the only hope.

For this reason, even the most simple stomach ailments should be given prompt and careful attention. So, don't neglect acid stomach, sourness, gas or bloating! And don't waste time with unknown or unreliable treatments. At the very first signs of distress, go to any good drug store and obtain a few cents' worth of pure Bisurated Magnesia. This special Magnesia Compound is safe and pleasant to take—quickly, almost instantly, effective and does not act as a laxative. Be sure and ask for BISURATED Magnesia for stomach troubles only.

BERNARD DEIGNTON IS BURIED TO-DAY

Mother is Still Unconscious—Sister Passed Good Night.

TORONTO, January 18. Canadian Press. — The funeral of four year old Bernard Deignton took place today, while his mother lay in a critical condition in Grace Hospital and his 7 year old sister Joan tossed on her cot in the Sick Children's Hospital. The father is held on a murder charge following an attack on three members of his family last Saturday. Four days after the attack Mrs. Deighton was still unconscious to-day, with six compound fractures of the skull. Joan passed a good night, but, with severe head injuries, her condition shows little change. She is expected however to recover.

The Experience of Mrs. Roy Brown is Well Worth Reading

Peterboro, Ont.— "I was in a miserable state of health, my nerves gave way completely, I could not sleep, had backaches and was completely exhausted—so weak and sleepy and tired that I was compelled to give up and take to my bed. I was advised to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, as nothing I had used helped me. By the time I had taken one bottle I was able to be up and around, I kept on taking it and was completely restored to health. I cannot say enough in praise of the 'Favorite Prescription' for the wonderful help it gave me."—Mrs. Roy Brown, 222 King St.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

THURSDAY, JANUARY 19, 1928.

Until late in the day the planetary government is adverse to most human activities, according to astrologers who caution Earth folk to beware of ill-considered plans.

The rule is especially favorable to women who should make the most of every opportunity while this configuration prevails.

The sway is most auspicious for weddings which should be productive of long association.

Music and the arts come under a rule promising to all who love the finer things of life.

American singers who attain foremost rank are to multiply and a young prima donna will make a spectacular success before the end of the year, astrologers prophesy.

This is not an encouraging day for those who desire to adjust profits and losses.

It is well to defer visits to banks and bankers until a more promising configuration prevails.

This is not a favorable rule for borrowing money and important conferences with financiers should be postponed.

In the evening of this day there may be disturbing planetary influences that cause hyper-sensitiveness and a disposition to quarrel.

The young come under a direction of the stars that should be favorable to a better understanding of their point of view as well as to an improvement of their behavior.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the forecast of a perplexing year in which it will be well to keep their own counsel.

Children born on this day may be restless and difficult to understand, for they probably will be strongly individual. The subjects of this sign usually are great lovers of nature.

Lyrics of Life - By Douglas Malloch

MY SCRAPBOOK

I find some verses now and then,
A thought that gives me cheer,
Some lines I'd like to read again,
And so I put them here,
That other nights and other days
The pages I may turn.
And find some thought my heart to raise,
Some lesson to re-learn.

I do not put life's ugly things
Within this book of mine,
Only some little song that sings,
Some bright and happy line.

And what is memory? I guess
A scrapbook, after all,
A place to keep each happiness
We're happy to recall.

So in my memory I'll keep
The things that made me glad,
And bury in the deep blue deep
The little hurts I had;
And then, when troubles come to me,
And moments that annoy,
I'll read the book of memory,
And find each page a joy.

Rupture Sufferers Made Well and Sound

New Discovery Heals Rupture Without Pain, Delay or Danger. Masters Human Scourge Which Defied Science for Ages. Thousands Tell of Complete Recovery; Safety and Comfort Guaranteed

Try This New Way FREE

Now you can run, jump, dance, swim, bend—in fact, once more be absolutely well and sound. With the little clinging oval—the newly perfected feature of the Brooks Rupture Appliance—constantly working to heal you, all manner of heavy work and even the most strenuous sports may be pursued without the slightest pain or danger. Thousands who have tried it say they no longer need any form of support. Their ruptures have been healed through the use of this marvelous Appliance.

AGE is not measured in years. You are old beyond your time if you wear any sort of cruel, gouging contrivance, forcing itself into your rupture, preventing growth and making impossible the healing of that tear in your side.

Rupture sufferers for years—men, women and even little children—have been subjected to the torments of the inquisition by science; they have suffered in silence because modern inventiveness had never been able to perfect anything to really end their torture. The crude makeshifts now worn by many retain the rupture—YES—but at the same time they prevent healing.

Scientists have striven for something which would retain the rupture gently—at the same time draw the edges of the wound together. In this way, only in this way, can rupture ever be healed without a surgical operation.

New Method Heals Rupture

The new Brooks Appliance—rebuilt and recreated—allows the wound to heal; at the same time it retains the rupture with ease and with safety. Circulation is free—those chafing straps—those steel bands—all are unnecessary. You can run, swim, dance, jump, bend—do anything you wish—and know that all the time this wonderful invention is working to heal you.

Here is the secret of this new appliance, this light, gentle, velvet-like, clinging apparatus, which is doing so much to relieve sufferers.

It lays—not pushes—on the rupture. Its soft air cushion of hygienic rubber gently brings those torn edges together. Every time you move, every time you breathe, the action of this small oval is to gradually close that wound. Then Nature does its part—the edges knit and your rupture is sealed. You are well and sound.

Trusses Retard Healing

These are facts, so why not face them? You can not heal that rupture as long as the edges of the rupture are being kept apart by a hard, penetrating pad. Proper circulation is impossible, and the constant irritation by the bulging pad tends actually to lessen the chances of healing.

All this is avoided when you wear the new Brooks Appliance. That is what accounts for its tremendous popularity and for the thousands of glowing testimonials received by the inventor just like those reproduced below. The Brooks Appliance by external methods brings about a reunion of the torn sections in the abdominal wall—makes them whole once more. When this is accomplished, your rupture is well and gone forever.

Constantly Works to Heal

And it does the work—it fulfills its mission—whether you work or play, sleep or rest—constantly that air cushion, designed so that movement tends to close the wound rather than force it open, works to heal you. The appliance really heals—seals the rupture.

Thousands of people, people of prominence in their communities, write us of complete recovery—not only relief, but a complete healing of the rupture. They have done away with their appliance—they are whole once more.

The new appliance was 30 years in the making. Today, it is as perfect as human experience and inventiveness can make it. But only by experimenting with it yourself—by actually wearing it—can the logic of its construction be fully appreciated.

Test It Free

For that reason the makers of this appliance will allow you to wear one free—to test it, and watch its effect in your particular case. If it is found that this new departure in rupture treatment is suitable to your case, keep it, wear it conscientiously and forget you are ruptured. If it fails to satisfy you after the test period, return it to us and you have spent no money whatever. We make this liberal offer because we know what it has done for thousands of others and because we feel sure that an actual demonstration is the only way a real test can be made. We realize that rupture is a serious thing—that it is a dangerous condition. We also know that the most important thing in the world is the way you feel. We know that your happiness—your real success in life depends upon this.

Thousands of people are making this test and they are acclaiming this newly perfected appliance a God-send.

Rupture Hastens Death

Rupture is no respecter of persons. Little children, young men and women, rich and poor, suffer from this dreaded affliction. Death is hastened by its terrible effects. Nervous disorders, and a general slowing up of that resistance needed to battle for life, results from rupture. You are handicapping yourself if you disregard this condition. Insurance organizations, army officials and corporations recognize the dangers of hernia or rupture. So you, too, must not disregard it. It can be sealed—those torn muscle fibres can be knitted together as strongly as before, but it must not be long neglected.

The practicability of the new Brooks Appliance will immediately convince you that it can effect the sealing of your rupture. It is light, clean, safe and modern. Its life is long; it can be washed as readily as your hand. There are no steel bands to dangerously press against your spinal column and nothing to stop the normal circulation of health-building blood where it is needed.

So heal that rupture—heal that hernia. Wear a Brooks Appliance. Try it for ten days without cost. If it suits you, if it's comfortable, keep it; if it fails to meet your requirements, the test has cost you nothing.

Never Sold at Stores

Unscrupulous advertisers are endeavoring to sell the public a cheap substitute for the Brooks Appliance, claiming that it is genuine. Do not be misled by imitations and substitutions. The genuine Brooks Appliance is never sold through agents nor at stores of any kind. Every appliance is made at Marshall, Michigan, to your individual requirements. Look for trademark bearing portrait of C. E. Brooks which appears on every appliance. None other genuine.

Write today for the free offer plan. Fill out the coupon. Remember, to delay may prevent permanent recovery from your rupture. You will realize when you examine it just how perfectly it accomplishes its purpose—how it heals—and the great simplicity of this marvel of science will really astonish you. Mail coupon below—now.

No Longer Needs Appliance

Sent your ad and sent for your appliance which arrived promptly. The results were amazing. I wore it continually night and day for 5 months then discarded it on going to bed and after about 8 months I felt so sure of myself I often left it off on Sundays.

Then one day I went to work forgetting to put it on, and I was frightened when I discovered I had left it off—but I took great care not to do any lifting that day. To my surprise I had no trouble. So I have not worn the appliance since and there is no sign of any rupture. I have been in the river swimming and doing other stunts and am O. K. I had a bad rupture and of years standing when I started using your appliance. Now I have no need of any support.

Frank L. Dumas, 95 E. 70th St., North, Portland, Ore.

Healed Son's Rupture

About a year ago we bought one of your appliances for our seven year old son. He wore the appliance for almost a year, and we are happy to say now that he is entirely well. We cannot say enough to praise your rupture appliance and the good it has done for our son's health. He wore the appliance night and day.

When we first noticed the disappearance of the rupture, we left the appliance off, to test it, but after a few days, found the rupture to be entirely healed. We sincerely thank you for the good you have done us.

Chas. Ackermann, 1743 14th Street, Milwaukee, Wis.

Ruptured Infant Now Sound

Our little boy (now 6 years old) became ruptured when one year of age. He wore the Brooks Appliance for two years and now seems to be completely cured. He hasn't worn the appliance for over a year, and romps and jumps as much as the other children. We are more than pleased with the results.

Mrs. Harry Bowman, Galion, Ohio.

Foundry Worker Delighted

Having worn one of your appliances about five months, I thought I would tell you that I have not been wearing it lately and I think I am well. I feel my same old self again, working hard every day at my trade in the foundry, constantly lifting heavy material and still feeling fine. There is no more pain and my rupture does not show any more, as it did before I started to wear your appliance.

Paul G. Fink, 621 Smith St., York, Pa.

Fine After 5 Months

Your Appliance did all you claimed for it and then some. I suffered so when I had been on my feet about three hours that I would have to lie down for a few minutes. I wore the appliance night and day for 4 or 5 months. I took it off one day and have never had to put it on again. It is a godsend to anyone having a rupture.

M. A. Fletcher, 228 N. W. 64th St., Miami, Fla.

Ruptured at 63—Sound at 65

About two years ago, I received one of your appliances and wore it constantly for nearly a year. My rupture stopped bothering me and in the course of a short time I laid it off. Am now 65 years old, and happy to say I am sound and well.

W. S. Dearmond, 915 6th St., San Bernardino, Cal.

Hardest Work Never Bothers Him

I am well of my rupture through the use of your appliance, and have not been wearing it for over five months. I could have gone without it, I believe, at least six months before I did. I might say that I can do any work that comes to hand, such as digging rock, shoveling grain or anything else and never feel the rupture. At one time I had almost despaired of ever being well. I will always advise the use of your appliance to any whom I know to be suffering with rupture.

R. O. Morrow, Sedalia, Alberta, Can.

Can't Praise Appliance Enough

ONTARIO PREMIER AND FEDERAL CHIEF TELL OF

vestments. They don't return dollars and cents but they give a better national life." One of these was the Department of Health. The government, said Mr. Ferguson, spends a good deal in impressing on the people the importance of health. A sound mind needs a sound body. It is especially important that attention should be paid to the health of the children, he declared. Advantages of this work pointed out were the decrease of forty per cent. in deaths from consumption in 20 years, and a drop in typhoid deaths from 900 in 1911 to 77 in 1927.

The issuing of serums and other treatments also help, he contended. The ue of insulin was cited. Some people, he continued, say that this is not a cure, but the insurance companies point out that if the average human life is extended two years it means a saving of two million dollars yearly in the province.

"Health," he concluded, "is the foundation of the wealth of the province. When we have started the children out with healthy bodies we can educate them and make them of value to the country."

Turning to the Federal field Mr. Ferguson said that he did not want to entrench on Mr. Bennett's territory, though possibly he could tell more about it than could Mr. Bennett. He confined his remarks in this to immigration. ""We should," declared Mr. Ferguson, "always keep before us a vision of what can be done by the proper type of men and women in this Dominion to give her a real place in the world. That responsibility rests heavier on this generation than on any previous, because they were occupied with making the skeleton for us to build the structure."

The wish of the Premier that he might live another 50 years, was greeted with applause, as was his declaration that in that event he would continue to be premier of Ontario for the whole period. He pointed out that Canada is on a great prospective highway from Europe to the Orient and that it is only necessary to impress on the people of Great Britain the great opportunities for development and the chances for immigrants.

New People Needed.

Canada needs people who believe in her types of institutions, continued Mr. Ferguson and these are best to be found in Great Britain. Fresh infusions of British blood will help develop the country. He recounted his visit to England a few years ago when he discussed the bringing out of the sons of good families of the medium class, trades men and merchants. These peopde can't educate their sons for a career and they have to take a chance on any job that comes or go on the dole. At the same time they don't like to send them out through the orphanages. Mr. Ferguson made arrangements for bringing them out and some 800 have been brought out under a system of indenture by which they are placed on good farms at a stated wage. Part of their money is paid to the government which holds it for them and when they are 23 they can get this money and a loan of more to help them start up for themselves. Of the more than 800 who have come to Ontario under the scheme there have been very few sent back as misfits.

"This is the type of immigration," declared Mr. Ferguson, "which I am in favor of encouraging. I'm not in sympathy with the bringing out of Southern Europeans, who are not assimilated, although those of them who are willing to take their place in our national life should be welcomed.

"The present hit and miss system which has not been patriotic but commercial, has brought out people who work hard and are law-abiding, but, especially on the prairies, they will sing 'O Canada,' but have no use for Great Britain, and wish to weaken the British connection. Such communities should be intermingled with enough British stock to leaven and mould them along British lines."

Flowers Presented.

Before Mr. Bennett was called upon Maurice H. Park sang two solos "Draw the Sword, Scotland," and "Land of Hope and Glory." He was accompanied by Miss Gwen Donley. Little Mary Strickland at this juncture, presented Mrs. Ferguson with a large bouquet while Mrs. Fallis spoke of the great assistance Mrs. Ferguson has been to her husband. Mrs. Ferguson replied briefly.

"To attempt to tell more of Mr. Bennett than is already known to those present would be to try to gild refined gold," declared Mrs. Fallis, in introducing the Hon. R. B. Bennett, whom she presented as the next premier of Canada. She assured Mr. Bennett that he had the loyal support of the Conservatives of Peterborough in his work, which was emphasized by the audience rising and singing "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," and three hearty cheers.

Mr. Bennett's rapid fire delivery was in contrast to Mr. Ferguson's more measured address, but his clear voice and language made him equally easy to follow, while his appeals to the young people were particularly telling. He paid a graceful tribute to Mrs. Fallis, referred to Mr. Ferguson as the "great premier of the first province of Canada," and remarked that it was "a pleasure to visit any community that had the good fortune to have sent such a member to the House of Commons, one whose ability was so highly respected and who is held in such esteem and regard as Mr. Peck."

He had assumed the office of leader of the Conservative party because he believed it to be the duty of every man to give some service to "this country to which we owe so much. This country is entitled to the best there is in us. We owe it obligation not easily discharged—a debt not easily liquidated."

Mr. Bennett pointed out the difficulties in governing a country such as Canada, with its great area and small population, and said that two weeks ago last night he had been in Victoria and a week later in Saskatoon, two cities many miles apart and both far from this part of the country.

Building for the Future.

The speaker began developing his main point close to home. The pioneers of Peterborough built sewers and water mains to care for the people they expected to come. They knew that where there were only a few and the cost was heavy on each, there would soon be many and the share of each would be much lower. The people of Peterborough must look beyond the city however. The Province of Ontario is greater in area than many kingdoms of Europe, although its population is small. Tribute was paid by the speaker to its beautiful farming country and homes, which he had seen on his way to Peterborough. The Province has its problems, which its Government deals with, but the people must lift their minds beyond this to the Dominion itself.

"We have every reason to look back on the achievements of the party to which we belong," declared Mr. Bennett. "I see here many young people; if they will study history they will have little doubt which party to support. Last year we celebrated the Jubilee of Confederation; the older people will remember that for more than half of that sixty years the Conservative party guided the destinies of this Dominion. The women, who have just recently been enfranchised should study the issues on which they cast their votes. There is nothing worse than an ignorant and uninformed democracy. There is nothing worse for a country than that men and women should ignorantly or negligently exercise their franchise."

The speaker urged the young people to study the problems of the Dominion. Immigration is its great need, he said. Its problems can be solved by having more people.

Addressing the Liberals in the audience, Mr. Bennett pointed out that it was the Conservative party that extended Canada to the Pacific and with great vision and faith gave British Columbia transportation. "I would like to ask you of Liberal faith, because people differ in their opinions and that the purpose of parties is to bring about the happiness of the people, to recall that the Liberal party opposed these plans; read Hansard and find their attitude to these matters.

The National Policy

"The the attitude of the party toward trade and commerce. John A. MacDonald introduced the National Policy. You will not find the word 'Protection' in the bill he brought in as a member of the Opposition because, astute politician that he was, he was trying to keep the people at home and develop Canada. The policy was opposed by the Liberals.

"I ask the Liberals to recall," continued the speaker, "that Laurier came out in 1891 for unrestricted free trade. Men and women, where would Canada have been if they had won and put that policy into force? Side by side with us is a great people speaking the same language and having the same institution. What would have been the history of Peterborough? Ask yourself, then go home and thank Providence.

"There is the matter of constitutional development. Sometimes when I hear Mr. King speak, I think he takes himself to be the George Washington of Canada. The development of our constitutional status was started when Sir John A. MacDonald drew up the message to Great Britain on the tariff. It was improved by him and by Sir Robert Borden. Any development today is based on the foundtions laid by the Conservative party.

Party Sacrificed

"Aside from these" Mr. Bennett went on, "the Conservative party has never shrunk from a duty which it believes to be for the advantage of the people. Why did the party go into opposition in 1896? In the B.N.A. are clauses protecting the rights of minorities. These had been taken away in Manitoba and the decision of the Privy Council in the matter was defied. Sir Charles Tupper refused to appeal to prejudice and upheld the interpretation of the Act. Quebec which was most concerned in the matter for reasons which are evident, overthrew him. Ontario stood by him.

"In 1914 Canada went into the greatest war of history with the Conservative party receiving the support of the Liberals. Evil days fell and in the crisis when the effort was greater than had been expected, the party sacrificed its identity for the good of the nation. The Liberal party retained its identity, with the result which you now know."

Remarking that a party cannot dwell on the achievements and the traditions of the past, although they have played a great part, Mr. Bennett turned to the problems of today. "The people of Canada are looking to us for a solution of the problems of to-day," he declared. "The reason is that the government has been dickering with groups and has maintained itself in power but the great problem remains untouched. We must get more people. We cannot bear the great burden we now have without more people. Are we any nearer the solution of the immigration policy. Pick up the papers and read the apologies offered.

"Where are the thousands of people who have come here?" he demanded. "Gone to the United States. Where are the sons of this country, and the men who came back from overseas? The government talks of the prosperity won from the mines, the forests, agriculture. That is not the problem; that is easy. The problem is to keep Canadians in Canada.

"Our population is going back. We haven't kept pace with the natural increase. Where have they gone, and why? The question is not merely one of getting people, but of keeping them.

"Just so long as we are content to be hewers of wood and drawers of water for the people on the other side of the line and are willing to buy back their manufactured goods will we be in the position in which we now are," emphatically declared the speaker.

Trade Greater

"We are told Canada's trade is greater than that of any nation in the world. Why shouldn't it be? We have the greatest estate God has ever given man. Everybody knows that. Why did the people of Peterborough lay sewers and waterworks? Because they knew they were trustees. Why does the province spend money on health, roads, education? Because the government realizes its obligations as a trustee for tomorrow.

"What is Canada doing in that sense. Read the speeches about great trade and money in the bank now. What are we doing with respect to the future? Those people looked forward and hoped for population. Canada's position is the same. This population is not able to fulfil the demands made upon it unless certain that more people will come after. What are we doing to get them? I leave you that one problem.

In conclusion Mr. Bennett stated that three things impressed him as he travelled up and down the Dominion; first, the greatness of the country; second, the greatness of the opportunity and the privilege of belonging to the Empire, and third, that the youth of to-day are trustees for the future. The early explorers came out with faith from Britain and France and paid the price for all the riches which people say belong to the inhabitants of Canada. The countries which paid for them get nothing from them but have handed them over to the Canadians as trustees for the future.

"I believe that the party to which I belong is the party that will solve this problem," declared Mr. Bennett, "for I believe that unless this problem of immigration is solved, the history of this country is written on water. So, men and women, I have accepted for the moment a task for the country to which I owe so much. I think that if you consider what the party has done you will have no doubt as to your course. I hope that if you think differently you will try by knowledge and organization to see that no stone is left unturned to accomplish the object of maintaining the integrity of Canada and her place in the Empire, offering opportunities to countless millions of men and women to call it by a term that is so dear to us. Let us make it indeed our home."

Following the addresses many availed themselves of the opportunity to meet the two leaders, and Mrs. Ferguson. During a pause in the dance which followed, announcement was made of a meeting to organize a Young Conservatives' Association on January 27, and lists were passed around to get the names of those willing to join. About 100 names were obtained.

In short addresses to the young people, Mr. Ferguson and Mr. Bennett stressed the value of organization, Mr. Bennett recalling the old fable illustrating that union is strength, and Mr. Ferguson urging the study of history and the making of the association of real educational value.

ARTIST'S CONCEPTION OF GHOST

SEYMOUR TOWNSHIP FAMILY SEES MARAUDER.

The family of Frank Keating has been disturbed for several months by weird rappings. Last month the members actually saw the "ghost." ABOVE is the artist's conception of its flight as described by Keating.

MANY TRYING

similar to that produced by a trace of oil. The only trouble would be to explain the presence of what has a few of the properties of sulphur.

A strange thing about it all is that this vision appears only when there is water in the cellar. At least, it has never appeared when the cellar is dry. But water would find little obstruction in entering the cellar. The excavation is not yet complete, and there is no pavement of any kind on the floor. It is difficult to imagine much water entering, however, when the altitude of the house with respect to the surrounding land is taken into consideration. The only likely source would be heavy rains. Now the cellar is dry. That may account for the press men's disappointment at not having been afforded an interview with the spook.

Water Is Bad.

Another curious thing is the fact that the water from the well near the house, and which was apparently dug for household use, is absolutely unfit for household uses. The water from the well near the barn is quite clear and makes as refreshing a drink as water can be made. It is quite crystal clear, cold and sparkling and does not carry the slightest trace of any foreign matter which can be tasted, seen or smelled by the average person.

It is stated by some person or persons through the press that there is, in all probability, a grave somewhere on the property and most likely in or near the cellar. Asked about this, the Keating were unable to say definitely, but to the best of their knowledge there was none anywhere on the farm. Thus, unless some new discovery comes to light, this theory is also shattered.

Interest Abates.

Now, though local interest has somewhat abated, it appears that the curiosity of those further distant and more versed in the ways of ghosts and uncanny things, has been aroused and a thorough investigation will be instigated. Already offers to lay the ghost for a certain sum of money have been made, but these are not at all reassuring and some of them have the appearance of some one looking for a little easy money. Nevertheless, the Keating family does want to find some satisfactory explanation that will quiet their shattered nerves and allow them to rest at night without the constant fear that they will be wakened during their rest by the appearance of the monstrosity. Everything that could possibly have any relation to the ghost has been offered as a logical explanation.

One learned lawyer has ventured the opinion that a skunk is the innocent cause of all the uproar. He may be right at that. Skunks do have a dark streak down the middle of their backs. But then, a skunk has both head and tail, as many a Canadan can testify, and they are not transparent as this thing is supposed to be. Rabbits, rats and mice have also come in for their full share of the guilt. But this may also be discounted when it is remembered that there are several bushels of apples in the cellar which have not been molested by these animals. Also, the tracks in the cellar are those of men only. There will probably be some dog tracks there as the family canine has again consented to return to its accustomed lair. This seems to signify peace and quiet for a time at least.

As an editorial writer has said, there is nothing that stirs up a community so much as a lively ghost. The strange part of this case is that as soon as the community had become thoroughly roused, the ghost disappeared. Gossip has it that the source of all the sir is a human being. Quiet investigation is proceeding and if the ghost should be some person with a warped idea as to just what constitutes a practical joke, there may be some lively action even yet. At any rate as the press party who have been gathering first hand information right on the premises broke up, it was their mutual opinion that the most interesting news was as yet unwritten.

Prudhomme of Leafs Not Sold to American Club

DENY SALE TO YANKEES

President Solman Declares No Truth in Story From New York.

WILL KEEP PITCHER

TORONTO, January 18.—President Solman of the Toronto club, on his return from New York yesterday, denied emphatically that there was anything in the story from the Yankee headquarters that any arrangement for the sale of Pitcher Prudhomme had been entered into with Huggin's club. "They would like to get him," he said, "but the Yankees have never done anything for my club and I don't see why I should give them the preference." Evidently Mr. Solman doesn't care for the club controlled by Messrs. Ruppert and Barrow. And with reason.

The Toronto club was victimized in the case of Myles Thomas, who was sold to the New York Americans for cash and players. The money was paid over but the players never materialized. Ed. Barrow claimed that Thomas was really the property of the Yankees and that Toronto had little title to him. The business manager of the world's champions based his contention on the fact that Thomas was only loaned to the Reading club when the Leafs purchased his release from that club. All of which probably was correct at the time, but the American League club relinquished all title to the player when they overlooked the formality of recalling him at the end of the season.

The next year Thomas proved to be a consistent winner and Barrow then came to bat with his claim. Subsequently a deal was arranged and Thomas went to the Yankees, but to this day the Toronto club has not received adequate compensation for the loss of the twirler.

Under the circumstances President Solman is not likely to enter into any other transaction with Ruppert's club. If Prudhomme is sold or traded it will be to some other major league organization, unless it is a straight cash deal.

Franchise Changes

Mr. Solman is more than pleased with the condition of affairs in the International League now that Rochester is assured of retention. He thinks that with Montreal paired with Toronto at the Canadian end of the circuit and Jersey City again linked with Newark the organization will be stronger than ever. He would like to see Syracuse retained and Reading dropped, and something like that may happen. As the situation stands now Syracuse is out, the St. Louis National League club having decided to take over the Rochester territory and abandon the former city.

Involved Deal

The Rochester franchise and players will be transferred to Jersey City, which club sold out its interests last fall to Montreal with the idea at that time of getting out of baseball altogether.

It was a shrewd move on the part of the Donnelly Bros. of Jersey City, as they sold their holdings to the Montreal syndicate headed by George Stallings for $140,000 and have now bought back into the league for an expenditure of less than $75,000.

Bisons Get Monohan

From Buffalo comes the report that Manager Billy Clymer has purchased the release of Firstbaseman Pete Monohan from the Montreal club. Monohan, who was originally with Baltimore, was with Jersey City last season and was among the players turned over to the Royals when the franchise changed hands. He will replace Bisonette, now with Brooklyn, at first base for the Bison City champions.

MADOC WINS FROM MARMORA

High School Unable to Hold Early Lead Against Black and Ambers.

FINAL COUNT 4-2

MARMORA, Jan. 18. — Though scoring on the initial rush in their game with Madoc High School on the Marmora rink on Monday night, the local Continuation School team failed to hold their own against the Black and Ambers, and lost out by the score of 4—2. The ice, which was in good condition at the start, was spoilt by the falling snow and neither team deemed it advisable to resort to much combination. Wallbridge played a sound game in goal for Madoc, but Burns at the other end has given many better exhibitions. Phillips and Caverly stood out for the winners, while Shannon and Brady were the pick of the home team. Flynn registered in the first minute of the game for the Tricolors, scoring on a pass from Brady. Whytock equalized shortly before the close of the period. In the second period Madoc forged ahead with two goals in quick succession from the stick of Caverly. No further scoring took place in this period, though Madoc were the most aggressive.

The scoring of Madoc's last goal in the early part of the third when Ross was the successful player, seemed to liven the Marmora boys up for they tested Wallbridge in the last ten minutes with the hottest shots of the night. Only once was he beaten, Brady on a lone rush finding the net.

The game was watched by a goodly sized crowd. Mr. G. Scott, as referee, gave utmost satisfaction, keeping the game under good control.

Teams:

Madoc.—Goal, C. Wallbridge; defence, C. Phillips and D. Whytock; centre, M. Caverly; Wings, J. Ross and A. Rupert. Subs., C. Dafoe, D. Nickle, D. McCoy.

Marmora.—Goal, F. Burns; defence W. Shannon and C. McCoy; Centre, H. Brady; Wings, W. Flynn and E. Hughes. Subs., J. Auger, M. Sanderson.

Goal Umpires.—Madoc, D. Wellman; Marmora, T. Cousins.

WILL PETES BE ABLE TO STOP STUDENTS HERE?

Varsity Attraction at Brock St. Rink Tonight And It Will Be Battle.

PETES DETERMINED

Say Students Are in for Surprise If They Expect an Easy Win.

Can the Petes stop Varsity tonight and put an end to the long string of defeats in which Peterboro O.H.A. teams have figured so far this season?

The students play at Brock street rink tonight and the local gang declare the Varsity outfit will run into a surprise if they are figuring on an easy victory here.

True they are leading the parade but the season is young yet and the Petes hope to put themselves into the running by toppling the students in tonight's fixture. They are making full allowance for the students' speed and team play when they declare that Manager Pearson's blue clad players are in for a red hot argument.

This should be the most exciting game of the year and incidentally attract the biggest crowd of the present season.

The game will get under way at 8.30 o'clock sharp.

Charles Gorman To Represent Canada

ST. JOHN, N.B., Jan 18, Canadian Press. — "I am going to the Olympics with the determination to win," Charles L. Gorman, the world's amateur skating champion, declared last evening, in making known his decision to represent Canada at the Championship meet at St. Moritz.

Gorman's statement dispels all rumors to the effect that he would not skate at the Olympics this year under the colors of Canada. It is expected that he will leave for Halifax on Friday to embark with the rest of the Olympic party on Sunday morning for overseas.

Following the world's meet in Switzerland, Gorman will make a tour of the Scandinavian countries, skating in competitions, for the purpose of advertising Canada, he said.

Gorman stated that he was feeling as "fit as a fiddle," and was in very good shape. His fine showing at the races in Newburgh about two weeks ago would seem to emphasize his statement.

Champions of Three Boxing Divisions Showered Under Barrage of Challenges

NEW YORK, Jan. 18 (Canadian Press).—Champions of the heavyweight, lightweight and bantamweight divisions ran into a barrage of challenges yesterday at the bi-weekly meeting of the New York State Athletic Commission.

Right on the heels of an unsatisfactory showing against Tom Heeney, Australian champion, Jack Sharkey posted $2,500 with the Commission in support of a challenge of Gene Tunney's heavyweight diadem. The boxing fathers decided yesterday Gene still has months to spare before answering an opening gong in view of the champion's title defense against Jack Dempsey in Chicago last September. Six months' rest is allowed a titleholder between championship matches.

Two challengers for Sammy Mandell's lightweight honors sprouted yesterday when Bruce Flowers, Yonkers negro, added his defi to that of Sid Terris, the latter on file here for many months. In view of Mandell's aversion to risking his title in New York, the committee suggested that Flowers fight Terris for the logical contendership.

Mandell, who has not risked his crown since he whipped Phil McGraw in Detroit last July, is under indefinite suspenson here for failure to meet Terris. A match between Jimmy McLarnin, Pacific Coast star, and Terris, scheduled for February 24 at Madison Square Garden, was ruled out, owing to agreement of 137 pounds as fighting weight. The Commission ruled Terris must stay in the 135 pound class. An attempt will be made to substitute Flowers for McLarnin.

PROMISE CLEAN HARD STRUGGLE WITH MIDGETS

St. John's Team Will Meet Lindsay Here Again Tomorrow Night.

EXPECT TO WIN

Local Crew Have Shown Big Improvement Every Time Out.

The St. John's team will clash with Lindsay for the fourth time this season in the O.H.A. junior series at Brock street rink tomorrow night and although the Saints have a big deficit to pull up they promise the fans an hour's fast, clean and colorful hockey and a determined effort on their part to overcome the big handicap.

The Saints were unfortunate in having a momentary spasm of stage fright which put them in the hole in their first game in Lindsay. Since that fixture they have steadily improved and they showed it Monday night by battling the Midgets to a standstill in the second game on Lindsay ice. With any luck they should have won that hard-fought struggle but in any event they are out to beat Lindsay here tomorrow night while the Midgets on the other hand are equally keen on keeping their record intact.

The result should be a game well worth seeing. These teams have played clean hard hockey all through the series with few penalties and to-morrow's fixture should be of the same calibre.

It will start at 8.15 o'clock sharp and the Saints are hopeful of a good crowd to help them along, particularly as popular prices will again be the order, the general admission (east side) being 25c, with, of course, no war tax collected.

MAPLE LEAFS LOSE 10-1 TILT

Peterborough Team Plays Fast Exhibition Game With Lakefield.

CLEAN HOCKEY

LAKEFIELD, Jan. 18. — Lakefield defeated Maple Leafs of Peterborough last night in a fast exhibition game in Lakefield arena, 10 to 1, but the score does not indictae the splendid brand of hockey played. The game was witnessed by a big crowd, enthusiastic to see the locals win their second game at home against outsiders, and the spectators were treated to a splendid exhibition.

Gray starred for the visitors, playing a remarkably good game, and Joe Meyette in goal seemed to have a score of sticks and a dozen feet. He let ten pass, but he stopped a hundred others just as hard and just as fast, shot with startling accuracy by the home centre and wings. McDougall, at centre, did a good night's work, leading many a forlorn attack against the staunch defense put up by Blewett and the two Sabatinos.

Blewett, who is staging a comeback after absence from the ice for some time, played a wonderful game for Lakefield last night, being equally good on his defense work and in his occasional sallies against his opponents. Loosemore, Stabler and Sabatino all starred in their respective positions, and the game was clean throughout. In the first and second periods, in fact, there were no penalties, and Referee Fred Thirnbeck, of Peterborough, had only to hand out two in the last period.

The game started at 8.45, and enthusiasm ran high, in spite of its only being an exhibition game. The play was around the visitors' goal most of the night, and the home fans are delighted to see the locals in such good shape for their more serious encounters, including an O.H.A. fixture at Lakefield next Tuesday. Havelock and Bobcaygeon clash at Bobcaygeon to-night.

The Night's Goals.

One minute after play opened, Loosemore scored, followed seven minutes later by Gray, from a pass through Holland; then Blewett went down to score the third after four more minutes.

In the second period, Lakefield scored four times, without retaliation, Stabler starting the riot at seven minutes, followed after five minutes by Wanamaker, who repeated in five minutes from a pass through Northey; then after four minutes L. Sabatino completed the quartet.

Stabler opened the final session by scoring, and C. Sabatino scored twice in succession, one and three minutes after, with Wanamaker scoring the tenth and last goal after five minutes' struggle.

Sabatino and Wanamaker went to the penalty box for short rests in the final period.

The checking was good throughout the game, but the combination was not as good as that displayed by Lakefield in the last game.

DELANEY MAY NOT JOIN ELIMINATION

Will Not Sign With Rickard Until After February First.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Jan. 18. — (Canadian Press).—Jack Delaney, who scored a sensational twenty-second victory over Sully Montgomery Monday night, will in all probability drop out of Tex Rickard's heavyweight elimination tournament, his manager, Joe Jacobs, announced yesterday afternoon.

Jacobs asserted that he had received a telephone call from Jim Mullen, Chicago promoter, asking him to wait until February 1 before signing for bouts in the tournament. Mullen still entertains hopes of signing Gene Tunney to defend his title in Chicago next summer, and Delaney has already signed with Mullen for the bout. Delaney's new manager also said that he will abide by his agreement unless Rickard is willing to stage a Johnny Risko-Jack Delaney fight at ten rounds. The promoter has announced that all eliminations will go the full 15-round championship distance.

At the same time, Jacobs said that he had received offers for Delaney to fight in Buffalo, Pittsburgh and Toronto.

Delaney left yesterday afternoon for Boston, where he meets Jack Humbeck, Belgian champion, on Friday night.

Agreed On Three Rounds.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Jan. 18 (Canadian Press).—Publication of the New York State Athletic Commission yesterday of the "score" cards of the two judges and the referee at the draw battle between Jack Sharkey and Tom Heeney last Friday night, disclosed that in only three of the 12 rounds did the trio agree.

These were the third and fourth, which were all awarded to Heeney, and the seventh, which went to the Boston sailor by a unanimous vote.

Referee Jack Denning awarded 5 rounds to Heeney, 4 to Sharkey, called three even and voted for Heeney; George Patrick, a judge, gave five rounds to Heeney, five to Sharkey, called two even and voted for a draw; George Kelly, the other judge, awarded five rounds to Heeney, six to Sharkey, called one a draw and voted for Sharkey.

LEAFS WIN IN THIRD PERIOD

Play Aggressive Hockey To Defeat Rangers 2 Goals to One.

CANADIENS WIN.

NEW YORK, January 18. — Goals by Eddie Rodden and Dr. Bill Carson in a third-period rally enabled the Toronto Maple Leafs to score a 2-1 victory over the New York Rangers in a National Hockey League game here last night. The game was a listless affair until the final session, when the Leafs gave an exhibition of the aggressiveness which earned them a 2-1 win against the Rangers on Saturday night.

"Ching" Johnson tallied for the Rangers in the first period; but, like the cow who gives the pail of milk and then kicks it over, got penalized early in the third period and Rodden sailed through his defence position to net a rebound from Art Duncan's shot. Carson scored the winning goal, and thereafter Roach gave one of his masterful exhibitions of goal-keeping.

Rangers Present Full Team.

The Rangers presented a full line-up for the first time since "Taffy" Abel broke his wrist in the opening game at Toronto. The big defence man was loudly cheered when he made his first New York appearance this season. Toronto received nine of the seventeen penalties meted out.

Carson, Bailey, and Lowrey had their sights well ranged, and bounced several long drives off Chabot's chest and pads. Johnson was the only Ranger who had any success in penetrating the Leaf defence, and he made several lone dashes. He was finally successful in netting a long shot which went like a bullet into the Toronto cage in 7.24 minutes.

Herberts Draws Second Penalty.

Herberts drew his second penalty for making a threatening gesture at Johnson.

When the Rangers pressed hard at the opening of the second period, Roach saw nothing but rubber for several minutes, while Chabot had only perfunctory shots from Rodden and Keeling thrown his way.

Herberts became an inmate of the penalty box for the third time, taking a seat alongside of Johnson, who surrendered his seat to Bourgeault. Play was listless in this period, the goal-keepers being mere spectators of attacks which got no further than the defences.

Rodden Ties Score.

Toronto put a lot of spirit into their play at the commencement of the third period. Herberts did some useful work, and lost a fine chance when Johnson fouled him. It was a costly penalty. Rodden tied the score when he netted the rebound of Duncan's hard shot from left wing in 3.15. Chabot was laid out when Herberts crashed into him in trying to convert a pass in front of goal, but soon recovered.

The fastest hockey of the game followed the equalizer. Carson, who was the pivot of some well-executed sorties, put the Leafs into the lead in 3.38, and ended the scoring, though Rangers tried hard for the equalizer.

Ends in a Tie

MONTREAL, Jan. 18.—Montreal Maroons and Ottawa battled through 70 minutes of gruelling hockey to a 1-all tie here last night. Both goals were scored in the hectic first period. Boucher and Munro doing the scoring. The visitors scored first, Boucher's lone effort accounting for Ottawa's goal toward the end of the period, while a similar effort on the part of Munro tied it up 30 seconds later.

Canadiens Win

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 18—Montreal Canadiens, Flying Frenchmen of the National Hockey League, hung up their seventeenth victory this year by defeating the rugged Boston Bruins 3 to 1 here last night.

Blinding speed, dazzling passes and an ability to meet the Bruins at their own game in the way of giving and absorbing bodily punishment gave the Canadiens their clearcut advantage.

The Flying Frenchmen jumped away to a two-goal lead in the first three minutes of play, Gagne and Mantha teamed for the first score. Mantha carried down the left lane, faked a shot and passed to Gagne, who had a wide open net. Fifteen seconds later Morenz took a pass from Joliat from behind the local net and beat Winkler before the Boston goalkeeper could whirl around and get set.

The animal census shows that there were 7,000,000 dogs in this country last year.

Every day, scattered over the face of the earth, there are about 4000 thunder storms.

A MESSAGE OF HOPE FROM THE PRAIRIES

Mrs. L. Stadel Speaks Highly of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Saskatchewan Lady Always Recommends Dodd's Kidney Pills.

GRENFELL, Sask., Jan. 17.—(Special).—"I used to be trouble greatly with pains in my back," writes Mrs. L. Stadel who resides at this place. "I am glad to say that since taking Dodd's Kidney Pills I feel ever so much better. I live out on the prairie and am often called on to attend people who are sick, and in cases of kidney trouble, always recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Ninety per cent. of the ills from which women suffer come from weak or diseased kidneys. They are the organs that strain all the impurities out of the blood. If they fail to do their work, the impurities remain in the blood and are deposited all over the body.

Weak kidneys are not confined to grown people. They are too often found in children, sowing the seeds of future ills unless the kidneys are strengthened and put in condition to do their full work.

Golf Star Will Not Lose Money Invested

NEW YORK, N.Y., Jan. 18. — (Canadian Press).—Instead of losing the money he invested in the Rochester Baseball Club, Walter Hagen, professional golf champion, will obtain a satisfactory financial settlement, John, Conway Toole, president of the International League, disclosed yesterday. Reports were that Hagen would obtain $10,000 in cash and $15,000 in club stock in return for his investment, but this was denied by Mr. Toole.

Hagen had "nothing like $25,000" invested in an option on the Rochester club when he failed to raise the remaining capital necessary to complete the deal, Toole said. The Rochester franchise was sold to the St. Louis Cardinals of the National League Monday. Toole would not disclose the amount of the golfer's investment.

MADGE BELLAMY

—in—

COLLEEN

A joyous, rollicking picture, with touches of rare pathos and tense drama, with the great flapper star, Madge Bellamy, in the role of an Irish lassie, taken against the background of rural Ireland and metropolitan America.

THEATRES

AT THE REGENT.

QUAINT AND LOVELY IRISH CLOTHES WORN BY DAINTY MADGE BELLAMY IN "COLLEEN"

First Picture in Which Flapper Star Has the Role of Daughter of Erin—Directed by O'Connor with Charles Morton in Male Lead—Beginning Thursday at The Regent

Madge Bellamy wears some quaint and lovely clothes as the daughter of an Irish peer in Fox Films "Colleen," made under the direction of Frank O'Connor.

In the outdoor sequences in Ireland, where the first part of the story is laid she appears in a stunning riding habit of black velvet, made with a tightly tailored coat and a sweeping skirt, caught up on the side. Her dull boots are of soft leather, and a perky "bowler" serves as a hat.

Then in her home she wears a charming frock of shell pink organdie scalloped around the bottom and cut short in front. The tight bodice waist is trimmed with a softly rolling organdie fichu, which ties in the back as a sash. Hand-made flowers in contrasting pastel shades trim the wide skirt.

Her wedding gown is a lovely creation of tulle and beads. The skirt, which is cut slightly shorter in front, is made of row upon row of flounces tacked with sprays of orange blossoms. The bodies is tight-fitting and heavily embroidered in seed pearls in a floral design. With this she wears a real lace wedding veil, which is gathered into a Russian head-dress of seed pearls and lace.

"Colleen" is the first picture in which Miss Bellamy has played the role of an Irish lassie from the "auld sod." She is supported by an exceptional cast, which includes J. Farrell Macdonald, Charles Morton, Tom McGuire, Marjorie Beebe, Sammy Cohen, Ted McNamara, Sarah Padden, Sidney Franklin and Carl Stockdale.

AT THE CAPITOL.

"GARDEN OF ALLAH"

Alice Terry and Ivan Petrovich an Ideal Pair of Lovers.

Never has the city of Peterboro viewed a motion picture as enthralling and as beautiful as "The Garden of Allah", which opens tomorrow at the Capitol Theatre.

A pre-view supports the glowing praises of leading critics elsewhere that the picture is one of the most tense and gripping ever filmed. It seems certain to top the first ten pictures of the year.

It is not surprising therefore to find it credited to Rex Ingram, the great director who produced "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse", "Scaramouche", "Mare Nostrum" and other thundering dramas. He filmed it abroad for Metro-Goldwyn.

Enacting the principal roles in this new Ingram masterpiece at the Capitol are names, with few exceptions, wholly new to America.

Alice Terry plays the leading feminine role and she is more beautiful, exquisite and divine than she has ever been before. A new side of her is shown in this picture—a melting humanity that will wind picturegoers around her aristocratic fingers.

Ivan Petrovich, Miss Terry's leading man, is an astonishingly handsome, athletic actor. He has the dark complexion of Miss Terry's former leading men—Valentino, Novarro and Moreno—but a stronger face than any of these. He is beyond question Rex Ingram's greatest discovery since Valentino.

Others in the brilliant cast are Marcel Vibret, leading supporting role, H. Humbertson Wright, Mme. Paquerette, Armand Dutertre, Ben Sadour, Gerald Fielding, Michael Powell, Basil Hambrough and Claude Fielding.

This picture's central idea is the struggle of conscience against passion. It is the story of a Trappist monk who vowed never to marry. He runs away from an Algerian monastery and despite his vows, marries an English girl unacquainted with his past.

Three months of honeymooning on the Sahara desert are spoiled by pangs of conscience. A sandstorm nearly kills him and his bride and he promises God if she is spared he will repent and confess his past life. He does and she forgives him.

The picture was filmed on the precise locations in Africa which have been immortalized in Robert Hichen's famous desert romance from which Willis Goldbeck adapted this latest Rex Ingram production for Metro-Goldwyn.

AT THE GRAND.

Most outstanding event in the past couple of Canadian theatrical seasons is the return of the ace of producers, F. Stuart-Whyte to the Dominion.

More important even than his own return, to the average Canadian, is the fact that he brings with him a new pantomime production, "Dick Whittington and His Cat"—a superlatively smart sort of entertainment which can be compared with no other current offering for the simple reason that it has all those unusual features which never always made Stuart-Whyte productions unique.

Not since his last production made the customary transcontinental trip has F. Stuart-Whyte been connected with any pantomime or, in fact, any musical offering of any kind. Temporarily, he turned his attention to the moving picture and scored outstanding directorial successes in Hollywood, Australia, the Indies and Africa.

But, despite his attention to the celluloid, ideas kept piling up on him and clamoring for expression in pantomime form. To his previous successes in staging—which have yet to be surpassed in Canada—he has now added valuable experience in studios from one end of the world to the other. The net result of it all is that his new offering is one that is destined to set new records in popularity — even taking into consideration the extraordinary vogue of the Stuart-Whyte offerings in the past.

"Dick Whittington and His Cat", latest and greatest of pantomime hits, comes to the Grand Opera House for one performance on Thursday, January 26th. It is nothing more than ordinary common sense to order seats as soon as possible.

KIWANIS MOVEMENT OBSERVES BIRTHDAY

Organization Was Founded Jan. 21, 1915, in Detroit, Mich.

HAS GROWN GREATLY

Kiwanis International will be thirteen years old January 21. Its birthplace was in Detroit, in 1915.

From one club the service organization has grown until at present there are 1,670 clubs with a membership of over 100,000. Kiwanis clubs are located all over the United States and Canada.

Because of the significance of the event, all Kiwanians will observe what is officially known as Anniversary Week during the week of January 15 to 21.

In discussing today, the thirteen years of Kiwanis history, Henry C. Heinz, of Atlanta, Georgia, president of the organization, stressed the importance of those early leaders who made it possible for Kiwanis to form its objects and objectives, which include the aiding of the under-privileged child, the creating of a better understanding between the farmer and city man, and the work of maintaining a sound public opinion and a more intelligent citizenship for considering problems of national and international interest.

"Through the past thirteen years, Kiwanis has developed an efficient organization, through its international, district and club units," the Kiwanis president remarked. "With this machinery, with worthy objects and challenging objectives, we should all strive to make Kiwanis greater during the coming year.

"We may well look back upon the past with pardonable pride. Our present is commanding. Our future holds forth prospects for greater service and usefulness. Our organization will continue to prosper as Kiwanis answers the needs of the times in developing individuals, contributing to community progress, and creating international leadership."

"CANARY" MURDER CASE

by S. S. VAN DINE AUTHOR of THE BENSON MURDER CASE

© Charles Scribner's Sons

THE STORY THUS FAR

Vance has his own theories about criminal procedure and he tells them to his friend Markham, who is considerably worried over the crime situation in New York. Then the newspapers announce the murder of Margaret Odell, known as the "Canary," former Follies girl and reigning Broadway beauty. Markham turns to Vance for help and they visit the "Canary's" apartment.

* * *

CHAPTER III

As Markham entered the Odell apartment that morning Sergeant Heath came forward at once and extended his hand. A look of relief passed over his broad, pugnacious features; and it was obvious that the animosity and rivalry which always exist between the detective division and the district attorney's office during the investigation of any criminal case had no place in his attitude on this occasion.

"I'm glad you've come, sir," he said; and meant it.

He then turned to Vance with a cordial smile, and held out his hand.

"So the amachoor sleuth is with us again!" His tone held a friendly banter.

"Oh, quite," murmured Vance. "How's your induction coil working this beautiful September morning, Sergeant?"

"I'd hate to tell you!" Then Heath's face grew suddenly grave, and he turned to Markham. "It's a raw deal, sir. Why in hell couldn't they have picked some one besides the Canary for their dirty work? There's plenty of Janes on Broadway who could'a faded from the picture without causing a second alarm; but they gotta go and bump off the Queen of Sheba!"

As he spoke, William M. Moran, the commanding officer of the detective bureau, came into the little foyer and performed the usual hand-shaking ceremony. Though he had met Vance and me but once before, and then casually, he remembered us both and addressed us courteously by name.

"Your arrival," he said to Markham, in a well-bred, modulated voice, "is very welcome. Sergeant Heath will give you what preliminary information you want. I'm still pretty much in the dark myself—only just arrived."

"A lot of information I've got to give," grumbled Heath, as he led the way into the living-room.

Margaret Odell's apartment was a suite of two fairly large rooms connected by a wide archway draped with heavy damask portieres. The entrance door from the main hall of the building led into a small rectangular foyer about eight feet long and four feet deep, with double Venetian-glass doors opening into the main room beyond. There was no other entrance to the apartment, and the bedroom could be reached only through the archway from the living-room. There was a large davenport, covered with brocaded silk, in front of the fireplace in the left-hand wall of the living-room, with a long narrow library-table of inlaid rosewood extending along its back. On the opposite wall, between the foyer and the archway into the bedroom, hung a triplicate Marie Antoinette mirror, beneath which stood a mahogany gate-legged table.

On the far side of the archway, near the large oriel window, was a baby grand Steinway piano with a beautifully designed and decorated case of Louise Seize ornamentation. In the corner to the right of the fireplace was a spindle-legged escritoire and a square hand-painted waste-paper basket of vellum.

To the left of the fireplace stood one of the loveliest Boule cabinets I have ever seen. Several excellent reproductions of Boucher, Fragonard and Watteau hung about the walls. The bedroom contained a chest of drawers, a dressing-table, and several gold-leaf chairs. The whole apartment seemed eminently in keeping with the Canary's fragile and evanescent personality.

As we stepped from the little foyer into the living-room and stood for a moment looking about,a scene bordering on wreckage met our eyes. The rooms had apparently been ransacked by some one in a frenzy of haste, and the disorder of the place was appalling.

"They didn't exactly do the job in dainty fashion," remarked Inspector Moran.

"I suppose we oughta be grateful they didn't blow the joint up with dynamite," returned Heath acridly.

But it was not the general disorder that most attracted us. Our gaze was almost immediately drawn and held by the body of the dead girl, which rested in an unnatural, semi-recumbent attitude in the corner of the davenport nearest to where we stood.

Her head was turned backward, as if by force, over the silken tufted upholstery; and her hair had come unfastened and lay beneath her head and over her bare shoulder like a frozen cataract of liquid gold. Her face, in violent death, was distorted and unlovely. Her skin was discolored; her eyes were staring; her mouth was open, and her lips were drawn back. Her neck, on either side of the thyroid cartilage, showed ugly dark bruises. She was dressed in a flimsy evening gown of black Chantilly lace over cream-colored chiffon, and across the arm of the davenport had been thrown an evening cape of cloth-of-gold trimmed with ermine.

There were evidences of her ineffectual struggle with the person who had strangled her. Besides the dishevelled condition of her hair, one of the shoulder-straps of her gown had been severed, and there was a long rent in the fine lace across her breast. A small corsage of artificial orchids had been torn from her bodice, and lay crumpled in her lap. One satin slipper had fallen off, and her right knee was twisted inward on the seat of the davenport, as if she had sought to lift herself out of the suffocating clutches of her antagonist.

Her fingers were still flexed, no doubt as they had been at the moment of her capitulation to death, when she had relinquished her grip upon the murderer's wrists.

The spell of horror cast over us by the sight of the tortured body was broken by the matter-of-fact tones of Heath.

"You see, Mr. Markham, she was evidently sitting in the corner of this settee when she was grabbed suddenly from behind."

Markham nodded. "It must have taken a pretty strong man to strangle her so easily."

"I'll say!" agreed Heath. He bent over and pointed to the girl's fingers, on which showed several abrasions. "They stripped her rings off, too; and they didn't go about it gentle, either." Then he indicated a segment of fine platinum chain, set with tiny pearls, which hung over one of her shoulders. "And they grabbed whatever it was hanging round her neck, and broke the chain doing it. They weren't overlooking anything, or losing any time. . . . A swell, gentlemanly job. Nice and refined."

"Where's the Medical Examiner?" asked Markham.

"He's coming," Heath told him. "You can't get Doc Doremus to go anywheres without his breakfast."

"He may find something else—something that doesn't show."

"There's plenty showing for me," declared Heath. "Look at this apartment. It wouldn't be much worse if a Kansas cyclone had struck it."

We turned from the depressing spectacle of the dead girl and moved toward the center of the room.

"Be careful not to touch anything, Mr. Markham," warned Heath. "I've sent for the fingerprint experts—they'll be here any minute now."

Vance looked up in mock astonishment.

"Finger-prints? You don't say—really! How delightful!—Imagine a johnnie in this enlightened day leaving his finger-prints for you to find."

"All crooks aren't clever, Mr. Vance," declared Heath combatively.

"Oh, dear no! They'd never be apprehended if they were. But, after all, Sergeant, even an authentic finger-print merely means that the person who made it was dallying around at some time or other. It doesn't indicate guilt."

"Maybe so," conceded Heath doggedly. "But I'm here to tell you that if I get any good honest-to-God finger-prints outa this devastated area, it's not going so easy with the bird that made 'em."

Vance appeared to be shocked. "You positively terrify me, Sergeant. Henceforth I shall adopt mittens as a permanent addition to my attire. I'm always handling the furniture and the teacups and the various knickknacks in the houses where I call, don't y' know."

Markham interposed himself at this point, and suggested they make a tour of inspection while waiting for the Medical Examiner.

"They didn't add anything much to the usual methods," Heath pointed out. "Killed the girl, and then ripped things wide open."

Heath had become acquainted with Vance during the investigation of the Benson murder case two months previously.

FAMOUS LOVE ROMANCES — Dante and Beatrice (III) — By Nicholas Afonsky

After his first and only meeting with Beatrice, Dante kept her image always before him. He wrote the story of his love for her. And later he made her the central figure of his greatest work, the Divine Comedy. Meanwhile, he went to war as a soldier for the Guelfs, one of the political parties of Florence.

Dante was a popular young man, with many friends. He painted, played the harp, recited his poems, and made love to the pretty women of Florence much as did the other young gallants of the day. But he grew so thin and pale from the ardor of his unrequited love that his friends began to wonder who had ensnared him.

Soon everybody was talking of Dante's infatuation for Beatrice. Occasionally the two saw each other, but they never met. Once at church Dante purposely gazed raptly at another woman, hoping thus to protect Beatrice from any suggestion of gossip by making people think he was interested in somebody else.

Dante's plan worked so well that Beatrice, too, thought he was infatuated with the woman he had stared at. Next time she passed him she turned her face away. Hurt at first, Dante later looked on her action as a sign of jealousy, and was thrown into ecstacies of delight to think that perhaps she cared for him.

LOCAL CURLERS LOSE TANKARD

Succumb To Fenelon Falls in Group Games at Lindsay Yesterday.

LINDSAY WINS OUT.

LINDSAY, January 18. — Tankard preliminaries were played here yesterday when four clubs competed. In the draw Lindsay was pitted against Bobcaygeon, while Peterborough stacked up against Fenelon Falls.

Skips O'Conour and Carew eliminated Skips Nichols and Hetherington, but the Fenelon Falls-Peterborough game was not concluded until the last ends were played. It was a close struggle. Skip Bacon and Skip Lansfield steadied their rinks down from the commencement, and a good game resulted, with the Peterborouh rink having a trifle edge on their opponents.

A.ex. Northey and Walter Oke battled, and a splendid game it proved to be, for spectators and players. Here the Fenelon Falls rink had a slight bulge on the play from the start, but there were some very nice ends with both rinks counting. When Northey nipped off a four, it placed him well to the front.

When the final ends were finishing, Lansfield worked in a beautiful draw shot, which kept Bacon guessing, the Fenelon skip scoring on the last three ends. Bacon missed fire with his last rock. This left the two Fenelon rinks four to the good with Northey and Oke to finish the last end. Oke was resting three shots when Art Robson played his last rock, which cut the end down to 2. Oke drew a third, but Northey split two rocks and left Peterborough with one. Oke carried a Fenelon rock on to his own, leaving Fenelon with one to the good, or 5 up on the round. The rinks:

WOMEN'S MUSIC CLUB.

Harvey Doney, of Toronto, Will Be Guest Artist This Week.

The special artist for this week's Music Club recital on Friday afternoon is Mr. Harvey Doney, the well-known baritone soloist of Sherbourne Street United Church, Toronto. Mr. Doney has forwarded a splendid program, including "The Wanderer" by Schubert, "The Two Grenadiers" by Schumann, "I'm a Roamer" by Mendelssohn, "The Prologue" from Pagliacci, "Tally Ho" by Leoni, and several other fine solos.

Mr. Doney has a big voice, fine and luscious in quality, great interpretive ability, and delightful personality. To hear Mr. Doney sing "The Two Grenadiers" is to immediately visualize those two poor, battered, half-starved warriors, who, with little left, are still intensely loyal to their Emperor, the ambitious Napoleon, and to France. Mr. Doney sang the "Prologue to Pagliacci" for two weeks at the Uptown Theatre in Toronto, winning an ovation on every apeparance. A great treat is assured to all who attend. Visitors are invited to this recital. Miss Margaret Widdess, A.T.C.M., will play a group of piano solos.

A COMING ATTRACTION "LEAVE IT TO GLORIA"

Musical Comedy Revue To Be Presented By Ashburnham Patriotic League.

"Leave It To Gloria," the big musical comedy revue to be presented at the Grand Opera House on January 27 and 28 by the Women's Patriotic League of Asburnham, promises to be one of the most pretentious and enjoyable productions ever staged in Peterborough. Besides its musical score of eighteen numbers ranging all the way from high-class ballads to the jazziest sort of popular songs, its fifteen lively dances and some novel stage effects. "Leave It To Gloria" has a story brimful of good, clean, hilarious comedy that keeps the audience in a constant state of merriment from start to finish.

The big cast of over 100 people is busily rehearsing every day under expert directors, and the progress made thus far by both principals and chorus groups gives assurance that the performances will be given with a zip, style and quality seldom seen in such productions. With costumes that are really gorgeous, attractive stage settings and effective lighting the production will be as good to look at as to hear, and taken altogether it promises to be an outstanding event of the local season.

The proceeds from the performances will be devoted to the Memorial Park Fund.

Business Committee: Miss E. Dunoon, Lindsay; Mrs. M. McIntosh, Fenelon Falls; Mrs. J. Plunkett, Peterboro; Mrs. A. Denike, Havelock; Mrs. A. I. Brown, Peterboro.

The story of the year's work was given in the records of the various officers. Mrs. H. Morrison of Lindsay, the Presbyterial corresponding secretary, in her splendid report, said: "As we view in our own vast Dominion and other lands with their thronging millions of souls to whom the United Church of Canada has the responsibility of carrying the good news of the world's redemption, we are thrilling with the opportunity and privilege the Master has given us of being co-workers with Him. Our Presbyterial has reached and gone over the allocation to the amount of $100.00, having sent to the treasurer the sum of $15,100.00.

"We have a total of one hundred and forty-two organizations with a membership of 3,358, including fifty-four auxiliaries with 2,060 members, who sent to the treasurer $10,699.00. Two new auxiliaries have been organized since September. There are eight young women's auxiliaries, with a membership of 147, sending to the treasurer $800.00; eleven circles with 325 members, sending to the treasurer $1,682.00; five C.G.I.T. groups with 183 members, sending to the treasurer $47.50, and twenty-five mission bands with 673 members, sending in $820.00. One new mission band was organibed since September at Powell's Corners.

"Financially, the First United Church, Lindsay, stands first, Trinity, Peterboro, second, and George Street United Church, Peterboro, third; Knox United Church, Peterboro, fourth; Keene United Church, fifth, and Fenelon Falls, sixth. Thirty-seven of the fifty-four auxiliaries contributed through the envelope system, an increase of twelve over last year. Out of the $3,216.00 thankoffering received, Knox United Church, Peterboro, gave $550.00; Trinity United Church, Peterboro, $374.00; St. Andrew's Church, Peterboro, $262.00; First United Church, Lindsay, $240.00.

"Knox United Church of Peterboro has the highest average giving, having contributed $13.00 per member; First United Church, Lindsay, gave $9.00 per member; Fenelon Falls, almost $9.00 per member; Woodville, almost $9.00 per member; Springville, almost $8.00 per member; Westwood and Fairmont, over $7.00 per member.

"During the nine months there were twenty-four new life members bringing into the treasury $600.00."

The report of the secretary of Christian stewardship and finance, Mrs. H. B. Fier, Haliburton, brought a happy note of optimism, and an assurance of deeper devotion, consequently deeper vision of the Christian stewardship department. More than fifty per cent. of the reports sent in stressed the joy of giving systematically, some just starting using weekly or monthly envelopes, but all working gradually up to the higher ideal.

Mrs. Fair's report, summed up, shows: Twenty-three auxiliaries have secretaries of Christian stewardship; fifteen have finance committees; nineteen have Christian stewardship department; twenty-one have adopted systematic giving; nine have adopted prayer for special missionary; thirty-one have reached and several exceeded their allocations; eight have adopted budget plans; twenty-two have made quarterly financial surveys.

After the offering, Mrs. G. Liddle of Peterboro contributed a beautiful solo, "The Living God," by Jeffrey O'Hara, which was greatly enjoyed.

The report of the treasurer, Mrs. F. Brandon, Cannington, was given by Mrs. Irvine, branch treasurer, in the absence of Mrs. Brandon, through bereavement in the home. The dedicatory prayer, offering this money to God, for the extension of His kingdom, through the work of the W.M.S., was then offered by Mrs. Rev. Dudgeon, of Peterboro, followed by the singing of the Doxology.

OFFICIALS PRESENT.

Frank G. Stinson is at present in Montreal en route to attend the National Motor Boat Show, Grand Central Palace, New York City, where he will be in charge of the Trent Waterway—Central Ontario exhibit, which has been the only Canadian exhibit for some years at this Motor Boat Show. Accompanying Mr. Stinson during the show will be the president of the Trent Waterway Development Association, Walter M. Fowlds, Hastings, Ontario; the honorary president, G. K. Fraser, of Burleigh Falls and Hamilton; and N. K. Wagg, general manager, Georgian Bay Tourist and Steamship Company, Limited, Midland, Ontario.

Mr. Stinson has advice that this year a number of people from Peterborough will attend the Motor Boat Show at some time during the ten days it is on. AVIATORS MAKE ANOTHER ATTEMPT British Flier and Companion Determined to Set Endurance Record.

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., January 18 (Canadian Press). — Undeterred by two previous failures, Captain Charles Kingsford-Smith, British air ace, and Lieut. George R. Pond, of the United States Navy, yesterday cruised the airways above California with hopes of breaking the world's record for sustained flight held by two German aviators.

At 8.09 a.m. yesterday, they went aloft in the huge tri-motored Fokker monoplane, Spirit of California, with 1,315 gallons of gasoline in the tanks. The pilots said they would try to remain in the air sixty hours. The present endurance record is 52 hours 22 minutes 31 seconds, and this time must be bettered by one hour to be officially broken.

Frequently wireless messages from the airmen reported perfectly functioning motors and excellent flying conditions. The aviators' food supply consisted of a few sandwiches and coffee.

The Spirit of California carried a total weight of 15,710 pounds, about 1,200 pounds more than on the last unsuccessful attempt by Kingsford-Smith and Pond to break the record. On that occasion, the fliers were forced down because their fuel supply was exhausted after they remained in the air 49 hours 28 minutes.

The pilots sailed their plane over the mountains between here and Sacramento yesterday after making a spectacular take-off from Mills Field, with the plane lurching as it sped down the runway for nearly a mile before it cleared the ground.

BYNG GAZETTED TO NEW TITLE

Attempt Made By Friends To Have Fees Remitted Proves Successful.

HONOR GIVEN IN 1926.

LONDON, Jan. 18. Canadian Press. —Viscount Byng who as Baron Byng of Vimy, was Governor General of Canada from August 11, 1921, to Oct. 2, 1926, and was yesterday gazetted a viscount, received the honor off a viscountcy in 1926, but declined to pay the fees required in connection with the new honor, which was held up in consequence. He explained at the time that prominent politicians who had received honors from the King had paid nothing in connection therewith, hence he declined to pay the attendant fees for his viscountcy. His friends took up the case with the result announced yesterday that he had been gazetted a viscount, with the fees remitted.

Fees are payable for a patent of nobility and they range according to degree as follows: Duke 730 pounds, marquis 630 pounds; earl 530 pounds; viscount 430 pounds with additional fees to departments other than the Crown office.

BIG CONFERENCE OPEN TO PUBLIC

Chairmen of Delegations Vote To Have No Private Meetings.

SESSIONS BEGIN TO-DAY.

HAVANA, Cuba, Jan. 18 (Canadian Press).—The Pan-American conference settled down to business today determined upon a policy of "open covenants, openly arrived at." This agreement, precluding secret sessions, set a notable precedent for large international gatherings. The establishment of the rule of public committee meetings and plenary sessions was agreed upon by the chairman of fifteen of the twenty-one delegations yesterday. Observers said that the conference would approve the proposal as there was no reason to believe that the delegations would reverse the action of the chairmen.

Voice of the People

LIGHT AND TRUTH.

Jesus commissioned the eleven apostles to go into all the world and preach the Gospel (glad tidings) to every creature; and that these signs shall accompany them that believe: In My name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover.—Mark 16, 15, 17, 18. And the apostles went forth and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word by the signs that followed.—Mark 16, 20.

Further, Jesus said to those apostles, I am with thee alway or all the days, even unto the end of the world (the completion of the age-.—Matt. 28, 30.

The Apostle Paul states very plainly that the Gospel (glad tidings) was preached to every creature, which is under heaven.—Col. 1, 23.

It is quite evident that the eleven apostles only were entrusted with preaching the glad tidings, with the signs following during that age (Jewish). After the end of the Jewish age, we have no guarantee that these signs would continue to follow. In fact, Scripture, history and experience go to show that the signs following lasted only until the completion of that age.—M. T. BUTCHER. 1d-15-4378

COLLEGE GIRL STILL MISSING

Investigators Unable To Find Whereabouts of Miss Francis St. John Smith.

MANY CLUES FOLLOWED.

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., January 18 (Canadian Press). — Divergent trails followed by investigators yesterday left them still without a solution of the question of why Miss Frances St John Smith, Smith College freshman, and daughter of a wealthy New York broker, dropped out of sight last Friday and what became of her.

Of what appeared to be the two most promising lines of inquiry, one centred in Deerfield, a few miles from this city, and the other pointed toward New York and possibly Philadelphia. The basis for the Deerfield search was the statement of George D. Wood, of Bristol, Conn., that a girl resembling Miss Smith spoke to him when he stopped his car in Deerfield on Sunday.

A theory that Miss Smith might have gone to New York developed as the result of the statement of a Northampton man to State Detective Joseph V. Daly, in charge of the search, that he stood directly behind a young woman answering her description as she bought a ticket for New York last Friday at the Northampton Station. This man said, however, that he did not see her board the 11.01 a.m. train which left two or three minutes after she had obtained the ticket. The ticket agent did not recall seeing the girl.

Seen on Train.

Appearing to square with this theory was the statement made by a business man in Philadelphia that he saw a girl who, he felt sure, was Miss Smith, on a train which arrived in Philadelphia from New York on Monday noon, who was accompanied, he said, by a middle-aged woman, and he overheard them talking about Smith College, with which the girl seemed to be familiar. The girl acted in a nervous manner. She left the train with her companion at Philadelphia.

Still another report which lacked verification came from Portland, Maine. The Portland police late yesterday were investigating a rumor that Miss Smith had been taken to Portland last Friday night from a point near the summer home of her grandfather, J. Hopkins Smith, in Falmouth, Maine, a suburb of Portland.

The detectives engaged by the girl's father assisted in the search yesterday.

CAR HITS CUTTER.

W. J. Thorn Badliy Shaken Up in Accident at Omemee.

OMEMEE, Jan. 18.—A serious accident was narrowly averted on Monday evening, when Gordon Bradley, driving his car east, collided with W. J. Thorn, in a cutter, travelling in the same direction, on King Street, Omemee. Mr. Thorn was thrown from the cutter and received a bad shaking up, and a few minor cuts about the face. The horse broke away from the cutter, trailing the shafts behind it for some distance, but was soon recaptured and no further damage is reported.

IN POLICE COURT

R. E. Alfred pleaded guilty to speeding on George street, and was fined $10 and costs.

The first conviction under the act for driving a horse drawn vehicle without lights went to Alfred Hoade, who was fined $2 and costs.

Chester Grant pleaded guilty to driving a car without a permit but he withdrew his plea when the Crown withdrew the case, as Grant had just recently returned home from the United States. He presented a permit this morning.

Wedding Bells

CHISHOLM—HELM.

MADOC, Jan. 18. — At the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Chisholm, on Dec. 26, 1927, at 7.30 p.m., Edward Chisholm and Margarette Helm were joined together in holy wedlock by the Rev. A. Gunter, Gunter, Ont.

While the wedding march was being played by Mrs. Albert Gunter, the bridal party took their places under the arch.

The bride was given away by her brother, Archie Helm.

After the ceremony was performed a wedding supper was served to about 50 guests. They received many useful gifts and all joined in wishing them success.

WAGER—JOHNSON.

MADOC, Jan. 18.—On Saturday morning, Dec. 31st, the parsonage of the Standard Church in Madoc was the scene of a pretty wedding, when Miss Edna Beatrice, second daughter of Mr. and the late Mrs. Harry Johnson of Eldorado West, became the bride of Ralph Harold, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Wager.

The bride, who was unattended, looked charming in a pretty grey gown of romaine crepe.

About twenty-five of their immediate friends and relatives were present to witness the ceremony, which was performed by the groom's father, assisted by Rev. W. R. Schamehorn. Mrs. Ralph Finch gave an organ recital while the register was being signed.

After the ceremony, amid showers of confetti and good wishes, the wedding party proceeded to the home of the bride's father, where a sumptuous wedding dinner was served.

The following Monday the happy couple left on the afternoon train from Ivanhoe for Pontiac, Mich., where they will make their future home.

WAY—NUGENT

The marriage took place at half past two o'clock yesterday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Nugent, at 305 Elias Avenue, of Greneth Madge Nugent, cousin of Mr. Nugent and F. M. Way of Trenton, Ontario. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Glover of Smithfield. The house was beautifully decorated with a quantity of palms, ferns and flowers, the ceremony being solemnized beneath an arch placed in the living room.

The bride, who was given in marriage by Mr. W. Nugent, was lovely in a gown of ivory kittens ear crepe, trimmed with lace. She wore the conventional veil and wreath of orange blossoms, and the gift of the bridegroom, a rope of pearls. Her bouquet was of ophelia roses.

The bridesmaid, Miss Norah Way, sister of the bridegroom, was in pink taffeta and carried a bouquet of columbia roses.

Kenneth Bird of Trenton acted as best man.

The wedding music was played by Miss Elva Nugent.

After the ceremony, a buffet luncheon, catered for by Messrs. T. H. Hooper and S[illegible], was served to about thirty guests. The bride and bridegroom left on the 5.20 train for Buffalo and other points, to reside later in Trenton. The bride travelled in a gown of rose crepe, with hat to match, and wore a Persian lamb coat.

The gift of the bridegroom to the bridesmaid was a string of pearls, to the pianiste, a bar pin set with pearls, and to the best man a pair of cuff links.

Paralysis

is loss of motion or sensation in a living part or member. This is due to lack of proper "life currents" reaching the affected tissues. This lack of energy is frequently due to constriction of nerve fibers at the spine. In cases where this constriction exists Chiropractic Spinal Adjustments offer the greatest hope for recovery. Many cases under our care have regained full use of an affected arm, hand or leg. Even in paralysis due to apoplexy Chiropractic has proved helpful.

OFFICER WOULD NOT INTERFERE WITH GOVERNOR

British Government's Representative To Be Division Officer, Says Amery.

FOR CLOSE CONTACT.

Crown, Not British Government, Is Represented By Governor General.

TORONTO, January 19 (Canadian Press). — In the course of discussions with Premier Mackenzie King in Ottawa next week, on various matters arising out of the last Imperial Conference, the Right Hon. L. C. M. S. Amery, British Secretary of State for the Dominions, expects to take up the suggestion for the appointment by the British Government of a representative to be permanently resident in the Canadian Capital and in close contact with the Canadian Government in Imperial affairs.

"This officer need not necessarily have a title as high-sounding as 'High Commissioner,' but he will be in a position to act as a sort of liaison officer for the British Government," Mr. Amery said in an interview with representatives of the press to-day.

In answer to a question, Mr. Amery said in no way would the appointment of such an official by the British Government interfere with the functions of the Governor-General. The Governor-General was the representative of the Crown. In no sense was he the representative of the British Government of the day. That was laid down clearly in the discussions at the Imperial Conference. Not for a generation, at least, had any British Government asked a Governor-General to interfere in the affairs of the Government of a self-governing Dominion.

ROB MOTORIST WHO GAVE LIFT

Two Young Men Take $58 and Suitcase From Detroit Man.

AFTER BEGGING RIDE.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., January 19 (Canadian Press). — A suitcase and $58.00 was taken from P. Wilder, Detroit, by two men who asked him to give them a "lift" as he was travelling in his motor car east of Woodstock last night. After riding with Wilder for about three miles, one of the couple, in the back seat, poked a revolver at him and told him to keep driving, while the other rifled Wilder's pockets. The two then ordered Wilder to stop, and they left with the cash and the suitcase. They were both about 24 years of age, dark, sharp features, and clean shaven.

Fire of Unknown Origin Destroys House Near Woodstock Early To-day.

INQUEST UNNECESSARY.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Jan. 19. — (Canadian Press.)—Fire of unknown origin which completely destroyed their home near Brownsville at an early hour to-day, claimed the lives of Mr. and Mrs. William Allison, aged residents of the district.

One of the charred bodies was found near where the stove had stood in the kitchen, while the other is still missing. The fire was discovered by neighbors, but the rescue of the two aged residents was impossible. Coroner Dr. West said he considered an inquest unnecessary.

British Banker Sets Offices At New York

NEW YORK, N. Y., Jan. 19.—(Canadian Press.)—Sir Otto Niemeyer, a high executive of the Bank of England, and formerly connected with the British Treasury, yesterday established headquarters at the Federal Reserve Bank for the duration of his visit to this country. Although neither Sir Otto nor Federal Reserve Bank officials would comment on his visit, it is believed in financial circles that a further step toward strengthening relations between English and American bankers.

The proposition of rediscounting in this country of prime bills of English manufacturers also has been mentioned in connection with the British banker's visit.

FAMOUS REPORT MADE PUBLIC

Sets Forth Action Taken Between 1921-1925 at "Malines Conversations."

ON CHURCH UNION.

LONDON, Jan. 19. — (Canadian Press.)—The long awaited report on the famous "Malines Conversations," bearing on the question of a union of the Roman Catholic and Anglican churches, was made public last night. The report sets forth the action taken at intervals between 1921 and 1925 by the Roman Catholic and Anglican delegates under the presidency of the late Cardinal Mercier.

At one conference among the Anglican delegates, a document was read which included the following statement:

"The Church is a living body under the authority of the Bishops, as the successors of the Apostles, and from the beginning of Church history a primacy and leadership among all the bishops was being recognized as belonging to the Bishop of Rome. Nor can we imagine that any re-union of Christendom could be effected except on the recognition of the primacy of the Pope."

In the pamphlet published last night, the report presented to the Archbishop of Canterbury by the Anglican delegates is given, together with the report drawn up by the Catholic delegate.

Accord on Some Points.

The Roman Catholic report states that an agreement was reached without much difficulty on the following points: "The social life of Christians is organized around an episcopal hierarchy. This social and organized life finds expression within the Church in the existence and use of the Sacraments.

"In the eucharist, the body and blood of our Lord Jesus Christ are verily given, taken and received by the faithful, by consecration the bread and wine become the body and blood of Christ. The sacrifice of the eucharist is the same sacrifice as that of the cross, but offered in a mystical and sacramental manner.

"Communion in both kinds was once the practice of the whole church, but in the west communion came to be limited to one kind for practical purposes, dependent upon circumstances. Consequently in our view, communion in both kinds is not a matter of doctrine, but one of ecclesiastical discipline."

Primacy a Bar.

LONDON, Jan. 19. — (Canadian Press and Associated Press Cable.) — The primacy of the Pope was indicated to be a bar to the unity of the Roman Catholic and Anglican churches in the long awaited report of the famous "Malines" conversations made public yesterday. The report revealed the action taken between 1921 and 1925 by the Roman Catholic and Anglican delegates under the presidency of the late Cardinal Mercier.

The Weather

The truly remarkably mild weather still continues. One day follows another with but little variation in temperature. Yesterday morning the thermometer was at 31 degees; this morning it was at 30 degrees. Yesterday's highest point was 35 degrees, making a variation during the 24 hours of but 5 degrees. Usually this only occurs about once a year. In January alone it has happened half-a-dozen times. A few days ago an Englishman stopped me on the street and remarked: "This is genuine old country weather—it's the real thing." This morning a recent arrival from Bonnie Scotland told me "This is just like the weather we get at hame." Whatever kind of weather it may be it is certainly not the usual brand of Canadian winter weather. We have had two days below zero this month and two days in December, the lowest point so far being 6 below zero. In January last winter we had 14 days below zero, with quite a number in December, the lowest point being 26 below.—W. P.

STAGE SET FOR BUSY SESSION OF PARLIAMENT

Budgets and Estimates Will Be Dealth With at Opening.

SHORT PROGRAM.

St. Lawrence Waterway Question May Enter Into Debates.

OTTAWA, Jan. 19.—The government has pretty well completed arrangements for the opening of parliament, and no cabinet councils are in prospect until next Monday. The speech from the throne has been drafted and it is understood that, so far at least, the legislative program will not be at all extensive, apart from the annual fixtures.

Budget and Estimates

The budget and the estimates, of course, are common to every session and constitute the real reason for bringing parliament together. Of new matter, those subjects which arise out of the Dominion and provincial conference promise to be conspicuous. It is not yet known, however, whether the subsidy question as a whole will be dealt with this session or not. The lump sums accorded the Maritime provinces last year as a tentative measure will likely be confirmed, but there is also considerable opinion in favor of similarly adjusting, by lump sum concessions, the claims of other provinces.

British Columbia's Case

British Columbia's case is tied up with its demand for the return of several million acres of Dominion lands. Upon this case, a royal commission before long will report. There is likely to be a clear distinction between the legal claim of the province and the question of equity. That the former will be conceded is thought unlikely, but what may be conceded, on the basis of equity, is another matter. Supporters of B.C. claims are very hopeful.

Deep Waterways

Some reference to the St. Lawrence question is looked for, although the procedure which would be necessary for an international treaty is so lengthy as to make improbable legislation this session, dealing with the broad scheme. They would not be an obstacle to certain parts of the plan going ahead, if they have the requisite sanction.

COSTELLO GIRL WAS MURDERED

Jury Returns Verdict After Hearing Evidence of Autopsy.

HAD BEEN ATTACKED.

TORONTO, January 19. — Thirteen-year-old Florence Costello, who disappeared on the afternoon of December 14 while on her way to her home on Birdsall Avenue from St. Monica's Roman Catholic School, came to her death from a fractured skull inflicted by a blunt instrument in the hands of a person or persons unknown.

The remains of the child were found frozen in a creek which runs through Briar Hill and St. Clement's Avenues, North Toronto, on the afternoon of December 26 by three schoolgirls, who stumbled over her glove-covered hand, while playing on the ice of the stream, and thus brought to an end a search in which hundreds of men and boys had taken part.

Verdict of Murder.

A verdict of murder was returned to Chief Coroner M. M. Crawford last night at the city Morgue, after Dr. E. R. Frankish had given the results of his autopsy.

Although there is no mention of it in the jury's finding, the child was also the victim of a terrible assault.

Dr. Crawford expressed the opinion that the case was one of the most unfortunate in his lengthy experience.

Meteor Startles Bolivian Natives

LAPAZ, Bolivia, Jan. 19 (Canadian Press).—A meteorological phenomenon described as a veritable rain of stones from the skies has frightened natives of the Tarugani region, according to advices reaching this city.

A flash in the skies a day or so ago was followed immediately by a roar as of thunder, which had not ended before small stone fragments began to fall to the earth. Within a moment the fragments became larger, this suddenly ending with the fall of a huge meteor which fractured into small pieces when it struck the ground.

Mayor Denne Points a Moral With $50,000—Do You Agree With Him?

Co-operation is Mayor Denne's panacea for all community ills.

And if he ever had any doubts of the effectiveness of his sovereign remedy they were utterly routed by the Hon. John S. Martin's promise of a generous grant to Peterborough's Industrial Exhibition.

"When we get the $50,000," quoting the Mayor's confidence in the assurance of the Minister of Agriculture, "it should prove to every one of us what can be done when the city and country people get together in goodwill and with determination to succeed."

The Mayor would like to see this idea of co-operation expanded from that of the upbuilding of the Exhibition to the general relations, and especially the business dealings, between the people of Peterborough and of the surrounding district.

"We all know that spending money at the Toronto Exhibition or the Lindsay Fair doesn't help the Peterborough Exhibition. Not that we shouldn't be neighborly with Lindsay, nor ever visit the Toronto show, but let us realize from our happy experience with our own Exhibition that loyalty should begin at home.

In the very same way we should patronize our own merchants and our own manufacturers as much as we can. Co-operation requires that our merchants should give the public every possible consideration, and I feel certain that is being done. The quality and the prices of groceries, clothing, hardware and other merchandise indicate the advantages offered to the people of this city and district.

We have merchants in Peterborough who are just as progressive, just as honest, and just as eager to please the public as you will find anywhere. Some of them have been in business for many years and their reputation stands high among their fellow citizens.

"When a man gets into the City Council," Mayor Denne continued, "he takes a different view of taxes. He sees the taxes not so much as money to be paid in, but rather as money to be collected and carefully spent.

We all know that the merchants pay quite a large share of the taxes. And that is one reason why the citizens generally should try to co-operate with them in a business way. When I buy a suit of clothes in Peterborough, part of that money, even if a small part, goes to the city treasury, part of it goes to salaries, some of it goes to buy bread and milk and potatoes, and so on.

But if I buy the suit in Montreal or Toronto or London, England, the money I pay out is spent, not in Peterborough where we would all get some little benefit from it, but in Montreal, Toronto or London.

Suppose a man has a notion to buy something out of town. Why not first give the local business men a chance. Go to the hardware man, clothier, furniture dealer, as the case may be and get his price, and all things being equal or even nearly equal, give the local store the order."

Such is the practical plan of co-operation Mayor Denne recommends for this district community of which Peterborough is the hub. Carried out in one direction this city would pick up new vigor and vitality and confidence.

In the other direction, and well says the Mayor: "If we all bought our suits and shirts and socks out of town there'd be a lot of vacant stores and we would all be ashamed of Peterborough and want to leave it."

PRIVY COUNCIL DENIES APPEAL

LONDON, Jan. 19. — (Canadian Press Cable.)—The Judicial committee of the Privy Council to-day dismissed a petition for leave to appeal by Thomas Lacovoli and F. M. Camaraties, from conviction and sentence of three years in the penitentiary after arrest at Windsor, Ont., for carrying arms to the danger of the public peace.

Lord Haldane remarked that the case came entirely within the criminal code and an appeal to the Privy Council in such a case was allowed only under most exceptional circumstances.

SANDINO KILLED RUMOR STATES

Reported Slain By Bombs From U. S. Planes on Saturday.

STRONGHOLD BOMBED.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Jan. 19.—(Canadian Press).—Reports were current to-day that General Augustino Sandino, rebel leader, had been slain in an airplane bombardment by United States marines. Marine headquarters attempted to cnofirm the report, which originated with Nicaraguans coming from Neuvo Segovia, the scene of the marines' drive against Sandino. He was said to have been killed on Saturday at his mountain stronghold. El Chipote, which marine planes bombed on that day.

BROUGHT INTO COURT UNDER HEAVY GUARD

Adolph Hotelling Pleads Guilty To Murder of Dorothy Schneider.

SENTENCED AT ONCE.

Father of Victim Attacks Prisoner at Court House Door.

FLINT, Mich., Jan. 19. — Adolph Hotelling, slayer of little Dorothy Schneider of Mt Morris, was on his way to Marquette prison yesterday afternoon to begin serving a life term.

Hurried secretly into the court of Circuit Judge Fred W. Bennett, presiding judge of the Genesee county circuit court, Hotelling pleaded guilty and sentence was pronounced forthwith. He was immediately taken in charge by the sheriff's officers, and started on his way to the northern prison where he will spend the rest of his natural days

Hotelling was placed in an automobile, heavily guarded by Sheriff Frank A. Green and deputies, and the trip started.

The punishment was decreed on Hotelling's plea of guilty.

Leslie Schneider, father of the girl Hotelling admitted kidnapping and killing, attacked the slayer with his bare fists at the door of the court room. The two were separated by the guards.

A large crowd had gathered around the circuit court, but it was by no means as hostile as that which stormed the county jail on Monday night.

Few people were admitted to the courtroom as Hotelling, haggard and resigned was led in

All available city and county police were on duty, forming a human barrier. In the crowd were plainclothes men on the lookout for storm centres.

Michigan laws do not provide for capital punishment and the sentence given Hotelling was the maximum permissible.

No time was lost by the local authorities after the Genesee county circuit judges had decided against a change of venue. Sheriff Green and deputies loaded Hotelling into an automobile at the Ionia reformatory and brought him directly to Flint.

Dressed in the same clothes he wore when he kidnapped and murdered five year old Dorothy Schneider in a lonely spot near Mount Morris last Thursday Hotelling faced the court to plead guilty and hear sentence pronounced. He was accompanied by his attorney W. A. Seegmiller of Owosso. Mrs. Hotelling was not in court, having suffered a collapse following her husband's supplementary confession.

QUEBEC APPEAL IS DISMISSED

Privy Council Upholds Validity of Bankruptcy Act Section.

PASSED BY FEDERAL HOUSE.

LONDON, Jan. 19. — (Canadian Press Cable.—The Judicial committee of the Privy Council to-day dismissed the appeal of Attorney General of Quebec in a case involving bankruptcy laws of the Dominion. The Attorney General of the Dominion was interested in the case.

Their Lordships answer affirmatively the first important question involved, whether under the Bankruptcy Act, security by law over the real estate of a debtor resulting from registration under the Quebec civil code should be postponed to a subsequent authorized assignment for the benefit of creditors.

On the second question, whether section 11 of the Bankruptcy Act of 1919 was within the powers of the Dominion Parliament or was an infringement of the exclusive power given provinces to make laws respecting property and civil rights, their Lordships are of the opinion that the exclusive authority given the Dominion Parliament to deal with all matters arising within the Dominion Bankruptcy Act enables that Parliament to determine by legislation the relative priorities of creditors under bankruptcy for authorized assignment.

Price, Attorney-General, stated to-day that no action is being taken by his department in regard to the murder, but if the city police ask for assistance, they would do all in their power to help clean up the mystery of the girl's death.

S. A. LADIES HEAR SPLENDID ADDRESS

Mrs. Maxwell Speaks on Query, "What Is In Thine House?"

Mrs. Lt.-Commissioner Maxwell, of Toronto, who was accompanied by Mrs. Brigadier Bloss, of Toronto, was greeted by a crowd of some two hundred ladies last night in the Salvation Army Temple. The special women's meetings, held under the direction of Mrs. Commandant Ham, grow in interest and attendance, last night's meeting being the largest on record. The ladies of the Alpine Choir gave an item of vocal music, as did a ladies' quartette. These items were well rendered, and gained much applause.

Mrs. Maxwell's address was based on the Scriptural query, "What is in thine house?" It was an address full of instruction and advice, well interspersed with illustrations gained from experience ,an address that will live in the memory of her hearers.

Mrs. T. Lang moved a hearty vote of thanks to the speaker. This motion was seconded by Mrs. Johnston, and carried amidst hearty applause.

Mrs. Beulah Demone, Pleasant River, N.S., writes:—"Having suffered with the 'flu' a few years ago, I was left with a very weak heart.

"I was unable to go about, and could not do my housework.

"I would get dizzy spells and would have to go and lie down.

"I could not sleep at night as the least little noise would wake me up.

"I tried different kinds of medicine, but they seemed to do me no good.

MANY MATTERS DISCUSSED AT THE ANNUAL CONVENTION OF ALBERTA UNITED FARMERS

Involving International Relations and Problems of Federal and Provincial Jurisdiction.

OLD AGE PENSIONS.

Recommendation Shelved Regarding Negotiations Towards Resumption of Soviet Relations.

CALGARY, Alta., Jan. 19 (Canadian Press).—Issues involving international relations and problems of Federal and Provincial jurisdiction were tackled by delegates attending the annual convention of the United Farmers of Alberta yesterday.

After lengthy debate on a recommendation that negotiations be opened toward immediate resumption of diplomatic and trade relations with Soviet Russia the convention shelved the matter.

Similarly on the question of old age pensions the delegates deferred pronouncement and supported a suggestion that the Provincial government be entrusted fully to protect the interests of Alberta in the introduction of this measure.

Resolutions which obtained the approval of the convention urged that more effective means be taken by the United Farmers of Alberta in educating the public in a definite peace program and universal concord; called upon the Dominion Government to grant to farmers suffering as a result of crop failures, an extension of time in which to meet income tax payments.

Contentious Issue

The resolution relating to Russian trade relations proved the most contentious issue of the day. In its discussion questions of Empire solidarity, national autonomy and world peace were raised.

The Mackenzie King Government was assailed by a number of speakers for breaking off relations with Russia, "merely as a gesture of endorsing the action of the British Government." In adopting the course the Dominion Government had placed Canada in the position of a colony, it was said.

General opposition to this view was expressed and the delegates warned against taking precipitate action without possessing facts which influenced the Government of Canada in severing relations with the Soviets.

"It is purely a matter of business that this resolution has been introduced," declared J. Bowlen, of Calgary. "We had not intention of injecting politics into the discussion. The horse raisers of Alberta were exceptionally hard hit with the termination of trade relations with Russia, and it was with the purpose of remedying this condition that resumption of friendly intercourse was urged.

Organized Boycott

Carl Alexson, of Bingville, charged that an organized boycott of Russia was being pursued by the Great Powers of the World.

"The farmers of Canada already have entered into friendly conference with representatives of Soviet Russia on the question of co-operative marketing of wheat," Mr. Alexson asserted. "Some day," he added, "Canada will be compelled by economic pressure to travel the Moscow road. It is incumbent on us not to raise obstacles which will make our task more difficult."

Wiener Is Denied New Trial By Court

NEW YORK, January 19 (Canadian Press).—Robert Wiener, awaiting execution at Sing Sing Prison for participation of the killing of two guards at the Tombs Prison in November, 1926, yesterday was denied a new trial by Judge Mancuso in General Sessions.

He was convicted of supplying guns to Robert Berg, Michael McKenna, and Hyman Amberg who attempted to shoot their way out of the prison, and, after killing the two guards, killed themselves in the prison yard. He is under sentence to die in the electric chair in the week of May 2.

BRITISH NOTE TO LEAGUE FAVORS REGIONAL PACTS

Deprecates All Around Agreements For Arbitration of Disputes.

GIVES OBSERVATIONS.

Principles Follow Declarations Made By British Statesmen at Geneva.

LONDON, January 19 (Associated Press).— A British note to the League of Nations on security and arbitration, made public last night by the Foreign Office, deprecates all around agreements for arbitration of disputes, but favors regional pacts, such as the Locarno Treaty.

The principles enunciated by the memorandum follow recent declarations at Geneva by Sir Austen Chamberlain, British Foreign Secretary, and Lord Cushendon, British delegate to the League of Nations.

The time hardly seems ripe for any general system of sanctions for the enforcement of arbitration treaties, says the memorandum.

Arbitration treaties, the fourteen page document adds, setting forth the British Government's observations on the suggested program of the security sub-committee, "have no sanction behind them, but the force of public opinion in the world at large.

Prejudice Any Movement.

"Any arbitration award which a party to the dispute resolutely refused to execute," continues the memorandum, "would not merely fail to settle the dispute—it would prejudice any movement in favor of arbitration."

The memorandum considers impossible that any nation strong enough to use force effectively would at present undertake an obligation to force against either party to dispute which failed to submit to arbitration or failed to accept and comply with an award.

An arbitration treaty which goes beyond what the public opinion of a country will support, when that country's interests are concerned, and when the decision is unfavorable to those interests, is pronounced useless and by embittering the relations between the states involved, the document says, would result in a setback to a movement for pacific settlements.

HON. MALCOLM HEADS COUNCIL

Elected President of Advisory Council for Empire Shopping Week.

HELD APRIL 22-28.

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 19. Canadian Press. — Hon. James Malcolm, Minister of Trade and Commerce for Canada, has definitely accepted the office of president of the Advisory council for the Empire shopping week and it was announced yesterday after a meeting of the council here that the week would be that of April 21-28, and the movement in effect from coast to coast throughout the dominion.

Empire shopping weeks have been tried with success in other parts of the empire and have the approval and the co-operation of the Empire Marketing Board. The proposed week in Canada holds particular interest, however, as it is the first occasion on which the idea has been carried out on a national scale in any of the dominions.

The underlying principle on which it will operate is that while a natural preference will be given to goods produced in Canada other empire products will receive the next preference.

The Advisory Council includes the presidents of the following organizations: National Council of Women, Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire, Retail Merchants' Association, Canadian Chamber of Commerce, Trades and Labor Congress, Association of Canadian Advertisers, British Agents' Association, Association of British Manufacturers and Canadian Manufacturers' Association.

G. F. Braddock acting British senior trade commissioner for Canada, is chairman of the executive committee, and C. Wm. Rowley, assistant general manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, is treasurer.

The British Museum library is growing at the rate of 30,000 volumes a month.

The American navy is now stronger in number of vessels than the navy of Great Britain.

Rheumatism occurs more frequently in those districts which lie very close to sea level.

Beef contains a large amount of iron food.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action, it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any coughs or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

International Policy Short Wave Lengths

WASHINGTON, D.C., January 19 (Associated Press). — A uniform international policy for all allocations of short radio wave lengths was suggested by William R. Vallance, one of the assistant solicitors of the State Department, at the close of hearings yesterday by the Federal Radio Commission on the short wave problem.

He transmitted a communication from the Canadian Government containing its recommendations for a code to be adopted by the 77 nations represented at the International Radio Conference.

Under this plan, the following order will be used in assigning short waves, ship, aircraft, and other entirely dependent on radio for communication, emergency service for public utilities, public service dependent on radio, public service not dependent on radio, and private messages.

CUBAN ELECTED PRESIDENT OF CONFERENCE

Dr. Antonio Sanchez Bustamente Heads Sixth Pan-American Congress.

APPOINT COMMITTEES.

Recommendation Ratified That All Meetings Held Open to Public.

HAVANA, Jan. 19 (Associated Press).—The sixth Pan-American Congress, the greatest of its kind ever held, opened yesterday under the leadership of world figures in the universal striving for peace and understanding. The delegates of the 21 countries represented stood ready to proceed with the consideration of those problems of primary interest in the New World.

A man who was proclaimed as a leading authority in such matters, Dr. Antonio Sanchez Bustamente, of Cuba, was elected president of the Congress. Charles Evans Hughes, chairman of the United States delegation, was named as a vice-president.

Rafael Martinez Ortiz, Cuban secretary of state, opened the proceedings with an eloquent address, in which he emphasized the contribution of the Pan-American Congress to the establishment of the principle of arbitration in international disputes.

Alejandro Leira, Chilean chief, responded to the welcome, expressing similar faith in the destinies of the Pan-American ideal.

Open to Public.

Open diplomacy and full publicity was made certain by ratification by the congress of the recommendation previously adopted by the heads of the delegations, that all meetings, both plenary and committee, be open to the public. There is still the question of executive sessions, which the conference will decide upon later.

The conference also accepted the suggestion for the appointment of eight committees to deal with the various subjects on the agenda. Apart from this, yesterday's session was largely devoted to speeches. Mr. Hughes closed the discussions by formally thanking Cuba in the name of the United States delegation, his people, for the "warm welcome to President Coolidge." Mr. Hughes also thanked the Bolivian delegation for the resolution recalling the activities of President Woodrow Wilson for the peace of the world.

"It is very significant," he said, "that the meetings have begun by remembering the "apostles of peace." If we can go forward and achieve something in our own day comparable to what they did, we shall profit the cause they had so much at heart."

Flag Raising Ceremony.

One of the most interesting features of the day was the raising of the flags of the 21 republics on special flagstaffs erected on the two sides of the steps leading to the University of Havana, in the great hall of which the conference was held. President Machado officiated at this ceremony, which was not only picturesque, but aroused the enthusiasm of thousands who had assembled there.

On each occasion the anthem of the country greeted the standard as it floated to the breeze.

CAR OF TAN BARK REACHES TANNERY

Omemee People Hopeful Plant Will Re-open in Near Future.

OMEMEE, Jan. 19.—Optimism is again increasing in connection with the Omemee Tannery, which has been closed for many months. Although plans are being made for an early opening, nothing definite has been given out. Last week saw a carload of tan bark unloaded from the siding, and it is reported that 500 cords are due to arrive soon.

Neighbour Arrested When Woodchopper Found Murdered Near Shack.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., January 19 (Canadian Press). — Held as a material witness in the shooting of William Fogarty, 75-year-old woodchopper of Milway, whose lifeless body was found days ago in the woodland near his shack, Steve Lucas, 46, married, was arrested yesterday by County Detective Frank Juliano, and lodged in the jail at May's Landing.

Fogarty's body was found through the intelligence of a mongrel dog that led a party of searchers to the body after a fruitless hunt had been conducted by ten neighbors.

RECORD FLIERS ON SECOND DAY

Endurance Aviators Facing Threat of Failure By Lack of Fuel.

FOURTH ATTEMPT.

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., Jan. 19.—(Canadian Press).—Facing a looming threat of failure by lack of fuel, Captain Charles Kingsford-Smith, Australian flier, and Lieut. George R. Pond, U.S.N., sailed smoothly aloft through their second day of continuous flying in their fourth attempt to break the world endurance flying record.

The pilots of the big tri-motored monoplane Spirit of California, who took off from Mills Field at 6.09 a.m. Tuesday with 1,535 gallons of gasoline aboard, messaged by radio yesterday that they estimated only 350 gallons were left, although it was impossible for them to ascertain the exact amount of fuel still in their tanks.

Judging from the aviators' estimate, however, it was believed the monoplane could not stay up until after 1.31 p.m. Thursday, when they would have broken by one hour the record of 52 hours 22 minutes and 31 seconds set by the German aviators Cornelius Edzard and Johann Ristics. The Spirit of California only a few weeks ago lost its third attempt at assault on the endurance record when a diminished supply of fuel forced it to land after remaining aloft 49 hours.

Suffer From the Cold.

Frequent radio messages from the fliers reported that the motors were functioning satisfactorily yesterday. They suffered from the cold, particularly after a high wind tore away the side curtains of the plane, said one radio message.

Kingsford-Smith and Pond kept the plane flying slowly during the day, coursing the territory between San Francisco and Sacramento. At 3.09 p.m., they had been in the air 31 hours.

The fuel load lifted by the Spirit of California on her take off was believed to be one of the biggest ever carried by a heavier-than air craft.

KINGSTON HARBOR OPEN.

Entirely Free From Ice—Ferry Still Runs To Wolfe Island.

KINGSTON, Ont., Jan. 18 (Canadian Press).—Kingston harbor is still entirely free from ice and there is considerable speculation as to whether 1928 will see all previous records smashed for the closing of the port. The last date recorded is February 2, 1906. The ferry to Wolfe Island is making regular trips every day and will continue until ice forms.

TERRIS-M'LARNIN MEET IN FEBRUARY

Winner Expected To Be Matched For Championship Bout With Mandell.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19 (Canadian Press).—The lightweight elimination match between Sid Terris of New York and Jimmy McLarnin of Los Angeles, subject of considerable dickering, was closed yesterday for February 24 at Madison Square Garden, when McLarin's manager agreed to a stipulation to make the weight 135 pounds, the class limit.

McLarnin, former Vancouver boxer, previously favored agreement on 137 pounds, but the State Athletic Commission refused to sanction the match on that basis since both men are title aspirants.

The winner is expected to be matched for a championship go with Sammy Mandell.

Guelph Has Ghost In Police Station

GUELPH, Ont., Jan. 18.—Seymour Township may have a sensational ghost case, but it has nothing on the Royal City, where 'spooks' are reported to have been holding forth in the dingy police cells right in the City Hall for some time past. Chief of Police Alex. Rae is the authority for this statement, and he contends that officers frequently hear voices, apparently engaged in animated conversation, emanating from the cells at times when they are unoccupied. Other strange noises are also heard from time to time, and investigation has failed to throw any light upon the origin of the weird sounds.

The Chief declares that it was not so long ago that one policeman, whose nerves could not withstand the noises produced by the ghostly visitants when alone in the station at nights, handed in his resignation.

MILLBROOK LADIES ELECT OFFICERS

Anglican and Presbyterian Socities Hold Annual Meetings.

MILLBROOK, Jan. 19.—The Woman's Missionary Auxiliary of Saint Thomas' church held its annual meeting on Monday evening at the home of Mrs. (Dr.) N. H. Young, with the president, Mrs. (Canon) Allen in the chair, and a good attendance considering the dangerously icy condition of the roads and pavements.

Encouraging reports of the year's work were presented, and appreciative letters read by the secretary showing the need which was happily met by the "Christmas Cheer" bale sent by the W.A. to Rev. Mr. Butler, Haliburton, in December. The bale was packed at Mrs. Westmacott's, and held groceries, fruit, clothing, etc., the Junior W.A. also sending dolls, and other articles which made a Christmas tree possible.

The officers for 1928 are: President, Mrs. (Canon) Allen; Vice-President, Mrs. C. M. Westmacott; secretary, Mrs. E. Whyte; treasurer, Mrs. Charles McNeil; Dorcas secretary, Miss Annie Armstrong; Superintendent Little Helpers, Mrs. J. E. Allen; Superintendent Junior W.A., Miss Muriel Smith; Leaflet secretary, Mrs. T. H. Harkness.

The president thanked the members for their loyal support during the past twelve months, and urged a continuance of the same for the current year.

It was decided to continue the study book on Africa, and Mrs. J. A. Vance and Mrs. M. Todd were appointed visitors until the end of February.

Mrs. Young and Mrs. J. E. Allen were hostesses for the evening, and served dainty refreshments, a pleasant social hour being enjoyed at the close.

Presbyterian Ladies Meet.

A joint gathering of the Women's Missionary Auxiliary and the Women's League of Grace Presbyterian church was held in the church parlors at the week end, when reports of the year's work were received, and elections held.

The attendance was large, and interest in the work which is being so successfully accomplished is evidently well sustained. The list of officers for the W.A. for 1928 is:

President—Mrs. R. J. Doak.

Vice Presidents—(1) Mrs. W. T. A. Deyell; (2) Mrs. Wilson; (3) Mrs. S. E. Eakins.

Secretary—Mrs. J. R. Eakins.

Treasurer—Mrs. F. A. Kidd.

Supply Secretary—Miss M. Eagleson.

Welcome and Welfare Secretary—Mrs. C. Thorndyke.

Home Helpers' Secretary—Mrs. Robert Wright.

Glad Tidings Secretary—Mrs. J. N. McGill.

Expense Secretary—Mrs. Kidd; assistants, Mrs. E. R. Armstrong, Mrs. Reid, and Mrs. R. McMahon.

Auditor—Mrs. W. E. Russell.

The Women's League officers are:

President—Mrs. Charles Thorndyke

Vice-Presidents—(1) Mrs. S. E. Eakins, (2) Mrs. E. R. Armstrong, (3) Mrs. S. Pritchard.

Secretary—Mrs. Thomas Ingram.

Treasurer—Mrs. J. R. Eakins.

Mrs. (Rev.) John Riddell occupied the chair, and the entire meeting proved both interesting and profitable. Financial reports in the case of both organizations were exceptionally good, the League having raised over $1,000 in the year just closed.

An oyster supper was enjoyed at the tea hour, and a delightful social time was spent.

The Presbyterial executive meets in Saint Paul's church, Peterboro, on Friday, January 20. Mrs. J. R. Eakins is a delegate as she holds the office of Supply Secretary for the Presbyterial. TOURING FARMERS AROUSE INTEREST

Liverpool Paper Comments on Clothing of Canadian Party.

One Liverpool paper says of them, "They are dressed like Englishmen in their 'Sabbath best' except for a few of them who give distinction to the party by wearing fur coats."

Sage Tea Turns Gray Hair Dark

By SHIRLEY BLAKE

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. You hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture. You can get this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, for only 75 cents, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybodys uses "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous.

THE GASOLINE TAX.

The question of an increased gasoline tax, brought again into prominence by the reference made to it by Premier Ferguson the other day, gains new interest by the intimation that the Province of Quebec is seriously considering the adoption of a tax of 5 cents per gallon.

There will be no increase in Ontario this year but undoubtedly there will be a jump twelve months hence, if all the present indications are realiable.

The cost of highway construction and maintenance is becoming a heavy burden.

Yet more and more new roads are being demanded.

"We want lots more of them", some one told Mr. Ferguson during his speech here and the Premier retorted at once, "Then you will have to pay more."

That is inevitable.

These great systems of highways linking up the various parts of the province have come because of the motor car and because of the insistence of owners of motor cars that they should be built.

Motorists want the best type of modern roads and motorists should pay for them, to a very considerable degree at least.

There is no more reason why the man who does not drive a car and never uses the highway should have to pay an equal share of the cost of highways with the man who does drive on these roads than there would be for the non-motorist helping to meet the cost of garages for the benefit of the car owner.

Let those who use the highways the most pay the most.

POLITICAL EDUCATION FOR THE YOUNG.

The launching of a Young People's Conservative Association in Peterborough, with its primary object the education of young voters along political lines, is the inauguration of a movement that The Examiner would be glad to know will be copied by political parties generally in all parts of the Dominion.

Our young men and women automatically become entitled to the franchise when they become twenty-one years of age; they have the right to vote then and they should be ready to vote with a working knowledge of political conditions and something more than a hazy idea of political problems.

As a matter of cold reality, however, the average young voter is both regrettably ignorant of and lamentably indifferent to the issues of the day.

Although their's is the future, their's will be the responsibility of carrying on the public affairs of this country in the years to come, our young people, as a whole, are cold to political matters and indifferent to their responsibilities.

If organizations such as is being completed here will awaken the boys and girls to a sense of the importance of knowing something about public affairs we should have similar associations everywhere.

Somehow or other our educational system does not seem to be uniformly successful in developing the desired consciousness of citizenship and perhaps these young people's political associations will be able to do something to meet the situation.

THE CALL TO SERVICE.

By an interesting coincidence both the political chieftains who paid Peterborough a visit on Thursday sounded a call to service and emphasized the desirability of men capable and qualified to deal with public problems coming forward to play their parts in the municipal, provincial and federal governments.

Premier Ferguson very strongly stressed this point in his address to the Rotary Club and Mr. Bennett, the Federal leader, added his eloquence to an emphasizing of this responsibility, both in his main address and in his remarks to the young people afterward.

Leaders in public life would do well to point out more frequently this responsibility of citizenship as they go about the country.

The best men in the various communities are needed in the administration of public affairs, needed in the municipal council, needed in the provincial legislature, needed in the wider arena at Ottawa where, as Mr. Bennet happily phrased it, they have to look beyond the narrow horizon of today into the long, long tomorrow.

Canada needs her finest brains, her men of greatest vision, her best business genius in the legislature halls of this Dominion.

There is a very real call to service and public men who make that call coherent are doing a very valuable work for Canada.

SHOULD BE SUPPORTED.

The Women's Patriotic League of Ashburnham, that organization of public-spirited women who have visualized the possibilities of Armour's Hill as a beauty spot and have taken long steps in the direction of the ideal upon the accomplishment of which they have devoted their energies, deserves the support of the whole community.

They have undertaken a task that in the years to come will cause the name of their organization to be remembered gratefully by those who will look upon their finished handiwork and find it good.

The beautifuing of this imposing elevation, with its magnificent view of the city and the picturesque countryside surrounding it, is indeed a movement that calls for hearty and enthusiastic support and for that reason the opportunity that is being given by the presentation under the League's auspices of a high class musical revue in the Grand Opera House on Friday and Saturday of next week should be taken advantage to an extent that will ensure crowded houses on both nights.

The excellence of the production itself should do that in any case, for it can be taken for granted that this will be an entertainment well worth while.

With a programme of unusual interest and merit, staged on behalf of a cause that should command general support, there is no doubt of the result.

The proceeds will, of course, be devoted toward the work of further beautifying and improving this picturesque property.

KEEP THE MONEY AT HOME.

In his address to the Windsor Lions Club the other night, Mr. Louis J. Flint, Executive Vice-President of the Detroit Citizens' Committee, made the interesting statement that "the time has come when Canadians should invest their money in Canadian industries. If the money that is sent to Wall street markets were used to develop Canadian national resources, this country would be far ahead."

It is difficult to estimate the amount of Canadian money placed in American securities—for this is no doubt what Mr. Flint had in mind—but it is considerable. Certainly the thought that Dominion funds—that is the money of private citizens of this country—should be, so far as is possible, invested here, is an excellent one. There are so many projects awaiting development in Canada that it seems a shame to send an unnecessary five cent piece outside the country. And while we are seeking—and succeeding—in attracting much outside capital these days, we should keep in mind the necessity of using all possible Canadian money in Canadian projects.

This is a matter of interest to both small and large investors. The man who has $500 to spend for a bond will have no difficulty in finding a well-secured Canadian place for his money. He can buy a foreign bond if he wishes, but how much better to spend his money at home? Men with large amounts of money can do the same thing in one way or another; either through assisting others to develop businesses, or engaging in large enterprises on their own account.

"Canadian Capital For Canadian Investment" is a mighty good slogan. It is worthy of a place beside another slogan mentioned in these columns yesterday—"Canadian Coal For Canadians."—Border Cities Star.

THE ECONOMIC BOND.

"Canadian confederation," recently said a well-known publicist, "derives its strength less from the B. N. A. Act, though carefully prepared and enacted, than from the two ribbons of steel running right across the Continent. Our two extended railway systems keep united immense stretches of country and people of different interests who naturally would feel inclined to ally themselves to parts to the south of them than to the East or West. The railways help maintain the Dominion as it is."

There is much truth in this declaration. Those who are attached to our vast country by sentiment alone are rare. The majority of our people do not extend their sympathies outside of the limits of the Province of Quebec and outside of our racial groups, extending from Acadia to Alberta. In our practical age interest moves nations more than the heart. On this North American Continent, outside of the French Canadians, the ties of blood hardly count. This is easily understood, since, in this new country where immigrants are drawn from all nations, the melting pot has not yet come into operation to produce a homogeneous Canadian race capable of loving and sacrificing itself for its native country. We find, however, that material interest follows the inclinations of physical geography, and that, for example, British Columbia is naturally more apt to do business with the American States along the Pacific Coast, our prairies have common interests with the States of the middle west, and that even in Ontario, many find their interest more in common with Pennsylvania, Michigan or New York than with Alberta or New Brunswick. We can, therefore, well say that if we had constructed railways running for short distances north to south, they would soon have been connected exclusively with American railways. Social relations usually following the course of business relations, the union of the north to the south would be today practically accomplished. Because the Canadian Pacific and the National Railways have the main lines—for a long time the only ones—running east or west, the union was consolidated, even with the different elements who constitute the recently imported population now in the majority between the Georgian Bay and Vancouver.

To take full advantage of these conditions and of the outlay of billions on our railways, it is necessary for our traffic to remain Canadian to the full extent possible with outside competition. Canadians should purchase in Canada all the things they need, especially when these needed commodities have been given to us by a bountiful Providence. Before thinking of buying anything outside of Canada we should find out, first, whether we can purchase it at home or not. In purchasing across the line we are tributory to a certain sense to other nations, and it seems that there is no reason for this condition to exist when the article required is produced at home.

One of the principal products, which we are accustomed to buy from the nearest market, is coal. We go to Pennsylvania rather than to Nova Scotia or Alberta. It is fact, however, that these two Provinces alone have sufficient deposits of coal to easily take care of the Canadian market altogether. Would it not be possible by co-operation between the different Governments of Canada, Federal and Provincial, and our two railways, to perfect some arrangement by which the Canadian nation would become independent in the case of coal, and be able to satisfy all its needs, industrial and commercial, from its own sources of supply? Our own people established in the West have understood this: the French-Canadian Association of Alberta is doing all it can to arrive at this result. Can it be attained? If it cannot the possibility of keeping the confederated Provinces together is not very bright. We can well affirm that Canada, as a whole, has much to gain and little to lose if we favored the proposition coming from our western French-Canadians. Let the reader draw his own conclusions from the resolution found elsewhere and passed at the meeting of the Executive of the French-Canadian Association of Alberta, on the 2nd of November last.—Le Soleil, Quebec.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Hon. R. B. Bennett, one of Canada's richest bachelors, took a big chance in appearing at a Peterborough social function in Leap Year. But he got away with it.

The Canadian Produce Association spent the greater part of a day discussing the question of what is a fresh egg. A day's work for a hen yesterday sold today, would be a reasonable definition.

Almost every train arriving in Toronto these days brings men asking the Provincial Government to spend money. It is easy to forget that what we get we have to pay for.

"The possible walking of the 'ghost' near Peterborough", says The Globe, "excites the sane interest brought by that performance in other spheres of life."

That Seymour ghost has no one to blame but itself for not being continued as a front page story. The reporters were ready but even newspaper men cannot summons spirits out of the vast deep.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, January 19 (Canadian Press). — A feature of the export trade in Canadian grain here yesterday was the demand that developed from Italy for Manitoba grades of wheat and a moderate amount of business was worked. The trade in cash grain was quiet, but a steady feeling prevailed in the market.

There was some demand from foreign buyers for spring wheat grades of flour and some sales were made, but the volume of business on the whole was small. The demand from local sources was also slow and values were unchanged. A moderate trade was done in winter wheat grades and prices were firm.

Prices for all lines of millfeed were firmly maintained under a good demand from all sources. The tone of the market for standard grades of rolled oats was steady, with a fair business passing.

Only a small amount of business was done in eggs and the undertone continued easy, but there was no further change in prices. The receipts were 1,103 cases.

The market for potatoes was without any new feature to note, prices being steady, with only a limited trade passing. Sales of odd cars of Prince Edward Island Green Mountains were made at $1.15 per bag of 90 pounds; Prince Edward Island White potatoes at $1.05 per bag of 90 pounds; New Brunswick Green Mountains at $1.00 per bag of 90 pounds, in bulk; and New Brunswick White potatoes at 95c per bag of 90 pounds in bulk, ex-track.

The trade in imported beans was quiet, but as the offerings on spot and to arrive were small the tone of the market was firm. Car lots of choice white hand-picked were offered at $2.80 per bushel, ex-track, and smaller quantities at $2.90 per bushel, ex-store.

Owing to the continued indifferent attitude of buyers the trade in butter was extremely dull, and the undertone was easy. The receipts were 83 packages.

There was practically no change in the condition of the cheese trade, business being exceedingly slow and prices were unchanged. The receipts were 34 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, January 19 (Canadian Press). — Grain prices went lower all around yesterday, owing a good deal to increased country offerings of corn. Chicago and Kansas City and Omaha as well each had evidence of prospective enlarged receipts.

Closing quotations here on corn were weak, ⅝c to ¾c net lower. Wheat finished easy, ¼c to ½c down; oats ½c to ⅝c off; and provisions unchanged to an advance of 2c.

Wheat and oats were chiefly governed by the action of corn. Weakness of Liverpool wheat quotations and lowering of ocean freight rates from Argentina were also incentives, for Chicago sellers of wheat. Furthermore, export demand for wheat from North America appeared slow, sales to Europe being estimated at only 300,000 bushels. Late advices, too, told of timely rains in parts of West Texas, Oklahoma, and Nebraska.

Provisions held about steady.

A Thought

GREATNESS NOT FAME.

In one hour a prize fighter becomes famous and then is soon forgotten, for fame is the froth of popular applause. The modern man would say it is "applesauce."

Dr. Cook made himself famous through fraud.

The immortality of a name is but an idle boast, and yet, fame is a weakness that even the wise refuse to resign.

"It takes the judgment of the future to dispel our illusions and smash our idols into dust."

With one flight, Lindbergh attracted the attention and honestly won the applause of five hundred million people. He was made famous overnight.

Now, what I expect to see in this worthy young man Lindbergh, is some thing more than fame. I expect to see greatness, and "greatness" does not lie in being strong, but in the right use of strength.

Lindbergh's experience is 'strength', and now, that it is to be put to "right use", let's forget his fleeting fame and encourage the young man in "greatness."—The Silent Partner.

PLANE GOING WELL ON RECORD FLIGHT

Has Been in Air More Than 24 Hours—Aviation News.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., January 19 (Canadian Press). — Just twenty-four hours after taking off on a fourth attempt to establish a world's record for sustained flight, the monoplane Spirit of California reported by radio to Mills Field here at 8.09 a.m. to-day that "All is well." The big tri-motored Fokker monoplane was running smoothly with her motors doing 1,390 revolutions a minute, and radioed the message while flying over the field. Captain Kingsford-Smith, the British air ace, and Lieut. Pond, U.S. Navy, piloting the plane, hope to stay in the air sixty hours.

PLANE MISSING.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19 (Canadian Press). — A biplane carrying news reel films of President Coolidge speaking at Havana and piloted by Ted Mosely, was reported missing today, and an appeal was made to the Army Air Service at Washington to institute a search. The plane, occupied by Mosely and a mechanic, left Daytonia, Florida, on Monday on a non-stop flight to Mitchell Field. It should have arrived yesterday.

OTTAWA, Jan. 18. — (Canadian Press.) — Flight Commander Lawrence, reported in a number of morning papers to-day to be lost in the vicinity of Hudson Straits air base and whose plane is reported to have been found, was not "lost", according to a statement issued to-day by Alex Johnston, Deputy Minister of Mines and Fisheries. Lawrence, while flying from Wakeham Bay to Nottingham Island on Jan. 9, landed at Little Sugluk owing to unfavorable flying conditions and returned to Wakeham Bay yesterday. No apprehension was felt for his safety but he could not be communicated with during the time he was at Little Sugluk as communication can only be established with the several bases while the planes are in the air.

INDIGESTION, GAS AND SEVERE PAIN

Of the thousands of people whom Tanlac has saved from the misery of Indigestion and Stomach Trouble, none are more grateful than Mr. Fred Hill, 349 Thames St., London, Ont. "I had about given out altogether", he says, "and was going down hill so fast that I thought nothing could stop me. I ate only two light meals a day and even then suffered untold agonies from indigestion, gas and pains that just doubled me up. My nerves were wrecked; every bone in my body ached; I could not sleep; and just felt sick all over.

"Tanlac fixed me up so I could eat anything from soup to dessert without having indigestion. All my other troubles vanished like smoke. I picked up twelve pounds and never felt better. I never thought anything could do for me what Tanlac did."

Tanlac corrects Stomach Trouble and builds up the whole system because it is nature's own remedy for the sick—roots, barks and herbs. Remember, your money back if it doesn't help you; so get a bottle at your druggist's to-day.

Public Now Draws $1,500,000,000 Annually

Over Half the Population on This Continent Invests in Life Assurance

"Living" Policyholders Receive Nearly $10,000,000, or Two-Thirds of Money Paid Out by Canada Life in 1927

No Need to "Die to Win"

The figures just issued by the Canada Life Assurance Company with regard to benefits paid the policyholders and beneficiaries in 1927 explode the old fallacy as regards life insurance, that you have to "die to win." In the Canada Life last year $9,939,076 out of $15,243,335—the total benefits paid—were paid to living policyholders.

Were it possible for the public to change places with the staff of a Life Insurance Company for only one week all doubt as to the need, benefit and urgency of life insurance would vanish.

They would see cheques issued to many of the "totally disabled," thus relieving them of financial worry and affording a better chance for recovery; large cheques and smaller cheques constantly being paid to bereaved widows in lump sums or in instalments as an income for life—in many cases the only funds they possess to help keep their homes together and look after the children; cheques to middle-aged persons who through their savings are now able to realize many dreams of their younger days; cheques issued to happy old couples who have lived to benefit from their foresight and prudence, and cheques paid by way of profits to living policyholders.

They would read letters from persons in every walk of life, expressing real thankfulness for the payment of claims and for the sympathetic, kindly consideration shown them; for satisfaction received from the splendid profits paid, often in excess of expectations; letters from those in receipt of endowment funds stating how glad they are that they applied for the policy years before—most of them expressing regret that they had not decided to set aside more money in this way.

They would witness also the many cases where life insurance protection cannot be obtained because of the state of health of the applicants; most of whom have "put off" until too late the decision to insure.

They would read distressful letters from widows, inquiring whether their husband's insurance was in effect at the time of death. The hardest job that falls to the lot of a life insurance official is to tell a bereaved widow or mother that their sole reliance, a life insurance policy, has lapsed through neglect.

To catch such a glimpse of the picture as members of a Life Insurance Staff see it daily would thoroughly convince the most skeptical as to the wisdom of insuring early and adequately, for the sake of their own protection in case of total disablement, and for the protection of their dependents. Their own independence and comfort in later life is also at stake, because the great majority of persons find it difficult to earn a livelihood after age sixty or sixty-five.

Early Pioneers Suffered Great Hardships in West

Western Canada Undeveloped Even in 1879 When Canada Life Opened Office There — One Man Had Charge of Territory Port Arthur to Pacific

$37,000,000 Now Invested in Western Canada by Canada Life

A big life insurance company which transacts business all over Canada has no lack of appreciation of any part of it. As early as 1879 the Canada Life had its agencies in Western Canada, but the country was so sparsely settled that the entire West, from Port Arthur to Vancouver, was in charge of one man. The early Western pioneers, including Canada Life representatives, had to contend with the lack of transportation and other difficulties beyond appreciation by the present generation.

The belief of the Canada Life in Western Canada through the years of its history is found in the steady investment of funds west of the Great Lakes, the total amount so invested now amounting to over $37,000,000.

How to Keep Well

A generation ago every household expected more or less illness as a matter of course, and was devoutly thankful so long as it did not bring death. A human being who had uniform, uninterrupted good health was regarded as blessed by rare good luck.

Today we know that perfect good health is a human right; that nature wants us to have it; that we can find out how to have it, how to keep it and how to get it back if we have lost it.

While there are some people who are perfectly healthy and others who are incurably ill, the great majority form a class between these two. Most people can become perfectly, wholly healthy, and in time even the class of incurably ill may be reduced to a small, insignificant fraction of the race.

The Canada Life Assurance Company issues an attractive health booklet for its policyholders, entitled "How to Keep Well," which contains splendid suggestions, easily followed, which will enable any one to maintain his good health. Any one desiring a copy may have one without cost or obligation by applying to the company's Home Office at Toronto or to any of its Branch Offices anywhere.

Better Than Ever Is Canada Life Annual Report In 81st Year

Review of Salient Points

Established in 1847, the Canada Life is now performing its 81st year of service.

New Canada Life policies to the amount of $157,000,000 were issued during 1927.

Canada Life insurance on the lives of its policyholders now exceeds $769,900,000.

During the year 1927 the large sum of $4,253,000 was paid in profits to policyholders.

During 1928 the Canada Life will pay to policyholders profits amounting to $4,660,000.

Canada Life policyholders receive 95% of the profits earned by the Company.

The Canada Life did not reduce its scale of dividends to policyholders during the war and influenza epidemic. During the past few years, however, dividends to policyholders have been increased.

Policyholders are protected by policy reserves amounting to $124,800,000. This is the "legal reserve," but the total assets of the Canada Life are now more than $140,500,000.

Special contingent reserve funds of approximately $1,300,000 are maintained.

Canada Life investments warrant the utmost confidence of its policyholders. On request a complete list of its securities will be mailed to any policyholder.

A reputation for fair and square dealing with policyholders and prompt settlement of claims continued for over eighty years, is the best guarantee for the future.

Bank Required Life Insurance Collateral

$100,000 Policy Placed to Cover Large Loan

About eight months ago a Branch Manager for the Canada Life went to visit a motion picture producer, President of a company, with the object of interesting him in personal or business insurance. Being a bachelor with rather a large income, however, this man could not see the necessity for either personal or business insurance.

Later on in the year the Manager of his corporation called and the interview brought forth the fact that the manager had applied to his bank for a loan and the first question asked was: "What amount of insurance has your President on his life?" When informed that he had no insurance, either personal or business, the bank suggested that he go to an insurance company, present an application, be examined, make a payment for the premium and then have the office of the insurance company write a letter, stating that this had been done. The bank would then, it was explained, be in a better position to take up the question of a loan.

The ultimate result of this was $100,000 of insurance placed on the life of the business man.

Life insurance for business purposes is engaging the attention of business men today as never before. In the past year the Canada Life has assumed contracts on the lives of business men aggregating millions of dollars, and ranging in amounts from $5,000, in the case of small partnerships, up to $500,000 and more. The Canada Life has several policies for $1,000,000 in force.

Delay Is Always Dangerous

According to "The Weekly Underwriter," 111,220 policyholders died in Canada and the United States last year before their insurance had been in force one year, the highest percentage of these early deaths taking place between the ages of 30 and 39.

Death, as life insurance men know only too well, often comes unexpectedly, and the fact that such a large number of selected lives—all presumably in good health and with prospects of living many years—died within one year of securing life insurance, is a grim reminder to those whose dependents are not properly protected that delay in obtaining life insurance is extremely dangerous. Putting off a week or even a day may bring untold misery into the lives of unfortunate women and children who are made the innocent victims of procrastination.

ANNUAL SUMMARY OF AFFAIRS BY HERBERT C. COX PRESIDENT, CANADA'S OLDEST LIFE ASSURANCE CO.

Canada Life Issues Its 81st Annual Statement

At the 81st annual meeting of the Canada Life Assurance Company held on Thursday, January 12th, President Herbert C. Cox spoke as follows:

The important and widely distributed expansion evident during recent years in all classes of business appears to have again prevailed in 1927. Statements already issued by banking and trust institutions disclose an excellent condition and most successful operations for the twelve months. Deposits have increased, commercial loans are larger, assets have grown greatly, profits are much enhanced, all of which comes from a greater activity in industry and manufacturing. Exports of manufactured and partly manufactured goods are greater, more of our pulpwood is being converted into paper at home and less of it sent abroad in the raw state. Electric power undreamed of a few years ago is being developed and applied to industry, some of it old, but much of it new and attracted to Canada by our power possibilities. Cereal crops have again been most bountiful, having been exceeded in only one year, and our farmers, particularly those in the Western Provinces, will enjoy a most gratifying reward for their labors and will be enabled to make a very important reduction in their obligations. It may not be generally appreciated that repayments on account of principal of farm mortgages aggregate ten per cent. yearly, demonstrating a pleasing liquidity and tendency towards reduction of indebtedness. Mixed farming continues to grow, with the result that dairy and poultry products have enormously increased and the farmer has a more diversified source of income.

THE MINING INDUSTRY.

Nor must we overlook our vast mining areas which are seething with life and energy. They have produced this year in the neighborhood of $250,000,000.00 and with the addition of recent discoveries are apparently only beginning to show their possibilities. Canada is eminently fortunate in her mineral resources, which must ultimately bring her great wealth.

CO-OPERATION ON VAST SCALE.

Co-ordination of effort in industry and finance has become the key to success, and in an age of co-operation and investment trusts life assurance is the most outstanding example under both categories. Upon this continent alone upwards of sixty-five millions of people are joined in the greatest co-operative undertaking in history. Each member of this gigantic society makes his periodic subscription to it in order that at a time, determined or undetermined, his individual preconceived plan may without fail be carried out and his estate become the recipient of a definite sum of money, the proceeds of his life assurance contract. That the object of these members is being realized to the extent of one and one-half billions of dollars per year, irrespective of the number of subscriptions or premium payments each has made, is the demonstration of the co-operative spirit and intention developed to the highest degree and must carry its own strongest recommendation and appeal. Old and young, rich and poor, on every continent, today seek the advantage of this world-wide association which solves a pressing and important problem for all. If we are to share each other's burdens surely no better way is presented of doing so than through the channel provided by the life assurance companies. In Canada and the United States new policies taken up in 1927 approached twenty billions of dollars!

INVESTMENT OF FUNDS.

While enabling its members to attain a very definite goal, life assurance also makes each a shareholder in the most widely diversified Investment Trust in existence. As you know, life assurance funds are invested in a multitude of securities, carefully scrutinized and selected, and upon the payment of his premiums, beginning with the first, the assured establishes a proprietary interest in them and in the care of them. Their safety and earning ability are of primary importance to him, and I am happy to say the companies have been eminently successful in both directions. Government and municipal securities are much favored by the companies and their purchases have frequently been of material assistance in financing the requirements of the nation. Similarly public services and utilities have been largely financed through the accumulations of millions of policyholders' small payments. Life assurance funds are also the most important factor and source of supply in the real estate mortgage loan market.

EFFORTS TO PROLONG LIFE.

Already the life companies give indication of usefulness in the spreading of propaganda for health and right living. The desire to prolong life is inherent in every human being, but for a life assurance company the desire becomes, for obvious reasons, a necessity. Some headway towards greater longevity has been made, but there will be required many years of intensive effort to prevent unnecessary illness and premature death before a full degree of success can be claimed.

CANADA LIFE PROGRESS.

Further progress in all departments of our own company has been established in the year just closed. The intelligent and well-directed effort of our associates in the field has again enabled us to surpass the objective set by the General Manager and to report the very excellent sum of $146,492,000 in new policies issued and taken up.

This amount is again well in excess of the previous year, and is a tribute to the calibre and loyalty of your representatives. Success has not been confined to any one section of our forces, but has been general throughout Canada and the United States, Great Britain and Ireland, despite very difficult conditions overseas. There is necessarily a considerable turnover in personnel in a large agency organization, since not all who enter it can be successful, but we endeavor through judicious selection to restrict this to a minimum. As only the fittest survive and are added to from year to year, it will be apparent that we are gradually accumulating a force of high type and performance. This essential means of contact between the office and its clients must command confidence, and the figures just given you will suggest the care and acumen displayed by our agency officials.

CANADA LIFE SURPLUS.

The earned surplus of $5,127,823.69 for the year is very excellent, and again reflects an encouraging rate of mortality and a gratifying rate of interest. The former results from the continued influx and proper selection of new lives and the latter from a careful but expanding choice of investment securities. As the trend of yield upon Government and municipal issues, to which we have hitherto largely directed our funds, is generally downward, it has been thought wise to turn a measure of attention to industrial and public utility bonds which have become so popular with large investors. We have been able within recent months to make a selection of these in Canada and the United States which combine ample safety with satisfactory return, and as we have to provide the reserves for our American policies in American securities our purchases of the latter will continue to increase, but with, I am sure, agreeable profit to the Company. As a stabilizer for our interest rate we have upwards of forty-six million dollars of real estate mortgages about equally divided between city and farm properties and embracing practically every Province and important centre of population. The security is excellent, the return satisfactory, and the cost of caring for them extremely low.

COMPANY EXPANDS.

A year ago you were advised of the Company's re-entry into the State of New York. I am happy to say the result has been as anticipated, and encouraged by the success of the office in New York City another was opened in Buffalo on December first, and already gives promise of real progress. The cordial relations between the two great nations of this continent are nowhere more apparent than in the reciprocity between their insurance institutions which are, I am sure, a powerful factor in cementing that friendship.

C.L.U. Degree Conferred Upon Many Canada Life Men

Chartered Life Underwriters Earn Distinction by Examination

The "C. L. U." degree is the "hallmark" authorized by Dominion Parliament by which the qualified Life Underwriter may now be recognized.

Life Underwriters can only qualify for the degree by passing a set of test examinations after at least a three-year period of study, and experience in serving the public. This requires a thorough knowledge of life insurance law, ethics, history, fundamentals, policy plans, benefit clauses, rules and regulations, finance, etc., and the solution of set problems similar to which these men are confronted with daily in connection with the creation and conservation of estates.

Aside from this, every man representing the Canada Life completes a special educational life insurance course which is conducted from the Home Office in Toronto by correspondence, and when he is sufficiently advanced he is brought to Toronto and is given a further concentrated training, which enables him to give even better service to the public.

The idea prevalent a few years ago, that an estate was "something big"—something possessed by only the wealthy classes, is fast becoming obsolete, as now few people are without an "estate," because life insurance estates are created by the thousands daily; in fact, life insurance method is the only way by which a man can create an immediate estate in event of his death.

The Canada Life is "custodian" of almost 150,000 such life insurance estates, amounting in the aggregate to $762,900,000.

Of vital interest to everyone is the progress of our great National Institutions, and the annual addresses of the leaders in industry and finance which give the public an insight into conditions in every field of endeavor are, therefore, worthy of study. Life insurance affects so many persons directly and indirectly that practically everyone will find of much interest this review by President Herbert C. Cox, of the progress of Canada's eldest Life Insurance Company. Each year the Canada Life takes this means of informing its policyholders and the public generally as to its affairs.

Avoid Carbon Monoxide Menace

This is the "open season" for carbon monoxide poisoning. Statistics show that from December when fatalities from this cause reach their peak until April an alarming number of fatalities occur every year.

A short time ago the Canada Life published an advertisement warning the public about the dangers of running an automobile in a closed or poorly ventilated garage, and also about starting the engine with the car doors and windows all closed, stating that enclosed within the four walls of a car or garage the poisonous carbon monoxide gas generated by the engine takes deadly toll of human life. Giving no warning of its presence, it overpowers and kills its victims with startling suddenness.

Unless constantly reminded of the danger they are exposed to, automobile owners are apt to overlook it, and at this season of the year particular attention is called to the carbon monoxide hazard.

AVOID the MENACE!

Never run an automobile engine in a closed or poorly ventilated garage.

Never work under machine with motor running, even in open air.

Never close all car windows with engine running, even in open air.

If necessary to operate the engine for any length of time, for making repairs or adjustments, the car should be taken into the open.

Head Office Staff "Takes Own Medicine"

Canada Life Employees Insured Themselves for $673,872

Salary Deduction Plan Helped

Soon after the "Salary Budget" idea was introduced by the Canada Life and offered to the public, many members of the Head Office Staff took up the plan and adopted for themselves this "deduct from pay envelope" method of saving. A large number of new policies were issued, and a few old ones changed to the monthly basis of paying premiums; on the same basis as all other Salary Budget cases issued by the Company.

At the close of last year this insurance on the staff had increased to 210 policies in force, amounting to $673,872. This is in addition to other "yearly premium" insurance held by many employees. The way in which this insurance has been continued would seem to prove that, where it is the best understood, and its advantages realized, Salary Budget is likely to be kept up quite as conscientiously as insurance taken on the regular plan. Frequently some of these Salary Budget policies are changed to a yearly basis, when it becomes more convenient for the holders of them to pay the premiums annually instead of monthly.

The Salary Budget or pay envelope deduction plan, so far as the benefit to employees is concerned, is one of the most valuable ideas recently introduced into life insurance service.

The total life insurance carried by the 550 employees at the Canada Life Head Office in Toronto amounts to $1,090,315, while Branch Managers and Company Representatives have secured insurance in the Canada Life of approximately $5,500,000—making a total of almost $6,400,000 life insurance on the entire staff, which shows unmistakably how thoroughly they believe in practicing what they preach.

Workers' Families Protected By $6,250,000,000 Group Insurance

Surprising Facts Quoted By Group Sales Manager of Canada Life Assce. Co.

During the last fifteen years the principle of Group Insurance has been thoroughly tried and proved.

With the close of another year it is interesting to note the progress made in Group Life Insurance.

Many an Employer who had previously rejected or postponed giving his employees the benefits of Group Life Insurance offered it to his employees during the year 1927. The great good and the great economic result brought about by Group Insurance can best be understood by the following figures:

During the year 1926, forty-six per cent. of all the death claims paid in Canada and the United States were Group Insurance claims, and sixty-five per cent. of the above forty-six per cent. were paid to families who had no other insurance protection.

The figures given below show the growth of Group Insurance on this Continent and speak for themselves:

Group Insurance was first written in the year 1912, and the end of the year showed a total of $13,172,198 Group Insurance in force. In three years (1915), this figure had grown to $99,046,862; in 1920 to $1,662,327,449; in 1925 to $4,312,048,128, and it is estimated that at the end of 1927 over $6,250,000,000 will be in force.

Group Insurance Features.

This plan includes a total and permanent disability benefit, and a Group Policy may be converted to a regular plan if employee leaves the service of his company.

All are eligible, but only through the Employer can employees receive the benefits of Group Insurance.

Few Employers today are entirely free from the spirit of altruism, and Group Insurance has proved to be a sound and economic business necessity and should have first place in all employees' welfare schemes today.

The cost of Group Insurance is based upon the ages of the employees in the Group.

The insurance can be written under two plans. One, the Non-Contributory Plan, where the Employer pays the entire cost; the other, the Contributory (or Co-Operative Plan) whereby the employee is offered the benefits of Group Insurance and can contribute up to 60c per month per $1,000, of insurance towards the premium. 95% of all Group Insurance written today is on the Contributory or Co-Operative Plan—the cost to the Employer is moderate, but the resultant good is seldom fully realized by Employers until a few claims are incurred through deaths in the plant.

Measuring Group Insurance By the Happiness it Brings.

The happiness produced by Group Life Insurance can be illustrated by comparing a $100,000 insurance policy placed on the life of a wealthy man as compared with a $100,000 Group policy placed upon the lives of 100 employees.

In the first case the dependents of one man benefit, but in the second case it is possible to spread the "happiness" into the lives and hearts of 100 families. Then again, in the case of the wealthy man's dependents, they, in all probability, would not be destitute if he had not taken the insurance, whereas in the case of the "breadwinner," the lack of the $1,000 Group Policy may mean "Starvation."

"What do you do when one of your employees dies?" is a question often put to an Employer, and the answer in many cases is, "We were sorry to lose him, but we replaced him."

Analyze this answer — the employee is replaced in the business and the business goes on as before—replacing a life as you would a broken cog in a wheel or a pulley on a line shaft—but what of his home—his wife—his kiddies? Nothing can replace his loss in their lives and hearts—his presence—his love—his earning power—all are lost to his dear ones forever.

Group Insurance Helps.

Because it produces a fund free from the stigma of charity, that continues to feed the mouths and clothe the bodies of those who have been dependent on the Employer's payroll—whom the Employer may never have seen—but who are a vital part of his organization because they are entwined with the ambitions and lives of his employees, and it must also be remembered that "the home is the foundation of the nation."

Latest Comment on Grain and Industrial Markets. Closing Quotations on the Principal Active Stocks.

MINES

F. G. Oke and Company wires: With only another day left to purchase Amulet and obtain what are considered valuable rights, on these shares, it appears as though there is going to be a scramble to purchase Amulet shares. On a comparatively small amount of buying, the stock advances as high as $5.20 per share this morning but later eased off as demand was satisfied. Probably no other mine in its development stages at the present time is attracting so much comment and controversy regarding "ore reserves." It appears as though an announcement of ore reserves would be greatly appreciated by those interested in this stock. According to some reliable sources of information, ore reserves can be estimated at $12,000,000 in sight and a further $12,000,000 indicated, with further enormous possibilities. Also the underlying strength shown in this stock during the past week of falling prices, supports the above opinion considerably.

Amulet goes ex-rights January 20.

Circulars are now in the hands of Mining Corporation shareholders regarding the subscription at $15.00 per share to stock in Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Corporation today. For every 10 shares of Mining Corporation now held, shareholders have the right to subscribe to one share of Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Company Limited. Apparently the Mining Corporation directors can only hold these rights available for a short period and therefore request that shareholders make application as soon as possible, accompanied with cash for the full purchase price of the Hudson Bay stock.

The Bidgood market strengthened considerably this morning, but no news was available from the property as a reason for these advances. The company expect to locate commercial grade ore on the 400-foot and 600-foot levels similar to that already encountered on the 200-foot level. If this be the case, then further share appreciation in Bidgood may be anticipated.

Teck Hughes and Wright Hargreaves were in greater demand this morning, which was reflected in higher prices for the stock.

As a whole the market showed much greater strength this morning than for some days. Whether this strength is transient or otherwise, remains to be seen. However, developments at the respective mines of the market leaders appear quite promising and therefore good reason may be advanced for the expectation of a strong upward trend of prices very shortly.

New York Market Is Quiet But Strong

NEW YORK, Jan. 19. Canadian Press. — Quiet strength characterized to-day's stock market. The abundance of money available on call at 3½ per cent. after the renewal rate of four, tended to allay uneasiness over the credit situation although many traders showed a disposition to keep out of the market, pending the publication of the weekly federal reserve report on brokers' loans after the close.

There was little in the day's business and financial news to influence the price movement. The publication of the 1927 report of the United States Cast Iron Pipe Co. showing $21.11 a share as against $35.08 the year before apparently had been anticipated as the stock showed little change. Montgomery Ward sold down 1½ points to 118 on the declaration of $1 extra but quickly made up the loss. Wall street heard rumors of larger distribution.

Wheat Moves Higher On Forecast Of Frost

CHICAGO, January 19 (Canadian Press). — Forecasts of a cold wave implying danger for domestic winter wheat unprotected by snow, led to an early upturn in wheat values to-day. Wheat buying was also stimulated through unlooked for higher quotations at Liverpool. Opening at ⅜c to ⅝c advance, Chicago wheat later hardened a little more. Corn, oats, and provisions were likewise firmer, corn starting at ¼c to ⅝c gain and subsequently holding near to the initial figures.

Opening prices were: Wheat, March 129⅝, May 130⅞. Corn, March 90½, May 92⅞. Oats, March 55⅛, May 56⅛.

Trading Irregular On Mining Exchange

TORONTO, Jan. 19 (Canadian Press).—The market on the Standard Mining Exchange today experienced rather an irregular session with strong spots showing in some quarters. Bidgood turned strong and sailed up through the dollar mark, reaching 110 and closing for a gain of 15 points over yesterday at noon. Amulet crossed five dollars for the first time this year, and at noon at 5.02 was 30 cents higher. Mining Corporation continued to forge ahead reaching the 4.90 mark, up a dozen points. With the exception of Bidgood, the Kirkland Lake issues were weak. Beaver and Kirkland Gold settled back, Lebeloro lost three at 50, and Lake Shore eased slightly around 25.85, while Teck Hughes and Wright Hargraves were more or less stationary at 9.80 and 5.69.

Toronto Market Firm With Trading Light

TORONTO, Jan. 19 (Canadian Press).—Trading was rather light on the Toronto Stock Exchange and the market was very firm today. International Nickel continued its upward trend, gaining ½ at 91½. Building Products, after selling up to 37, closed at 36½ for a gain of one point. F. N. Burt made a gain of 1⅝ at 91¾, while Dominion Stores, selling at 112½, was up 3. Alberta Pacific Grain was fairly active, selling up 1¼ at 60¼. Winnipeg Railway also gained 1¼. Cockshutt Preferred was a strong feature in the unlisted market, and, after selling up to 122, closed at 121 for a gain of 1⅝. Service Stations sold up ⅝ at 42⅞. British American Oil, Carlings, Canada Malt, Northern Bakeries and Photo Engravers were all fractionally higher.

LOOK FOR PLANE ALONG SEASHORE

Carolina Coast Believed To Hold Secret of Aviators' Disappearance.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., January 19 (Canadian Press). — This city today looked toward the Carolina coast in the hope of news of Ted Mosely, pilot, and Fred Herring, mechanic, who have not been heard from since they left here on Monday for Mitchell Field, N.Y., with news reel films of President Coolidge's reception in Havana.

The last definite information about the Stinson plane in which the pair were flying came from Savannah, Ga., in reports that it passed over that city shortly after it left here.

OPENING GAMES ARE VERY CLOSE

Two Tie Games and One Goal Victory in City League Last Night.

RULING DISPUTED.

Three closely-contested games were played last night at Sacred Heart Rink and the attendance was accordingly large. The City League, now going strong, had lined up the Peterborough Lock Company to do battle with the St. Peter's team from six to seven o'clock, and battle they did, the final count being 1-0 for the Lock men. Referee M. McDougall handled the bell and kept the play well in hand despite the rough going on soft ice.

The O.H.A. ruling that a defending player who throws his stick to avoid a goal must be penalized for from three to five minutes, at the discretion of the referee caused the game between the Albion Knitting Company and the Crescents to end in a 3—3 tie, rather than 4—3 for the Knitters, as Referee Holland made it by awarding a goal when the offence was committed.

This was a particularly close and interesting game, and the fact that O.H.A. rules have been adopted means that there was no winner declared.

In the third game, the C.G.E. team and the Maple Leafs were unable to declare a winner, the count at the end of the game being 1—1. H. Fowler refereed satisfactorily.

The fourth game between, De Laval and Raybestos, went to the latter team by default.

Fans should keep in mind the games to be played next Wednesday evening. They will be good.

The Arizona Cowboy

The All Saints' Dramatic Club presented their play, "The Arizona Cowboy," in the George street Sunday School auditorium on Tuesday evening under the auspices of the Excelsior Club of the Sunday school.

The hall was packed to the door, and everybody was enthusiastic in praise of the play.

The following is a cast of the characters:

Farley Gantt, the Cowboy Sheriff, James Price; Paul Quillan, his partner, George Gimblett, jr; Duke Blackshear, a stranegr from 'Frisco, H. Freeman; Hezekiah Bugg, a glorious liar, H. Carter; Yow Kee, a heathen Chinee H. Lundy; Big Elk, a Navajo chief, E. Wandy; Grizzly Grim, a cattle rustler, J. Lancashire, Marguerite Moore, a ranch owner, Miss D. Worboy; Mrs. Petunia Bugg, from Old Indiana, Mrs. E. LeBarr; Coraline Backshear, Duke's sister, Miss G. Smith; Fawn Afraid, an Indian maid, Miss G. Lucas; Young 'Un, Not much of Anybody, Miss J. Maconomy; Three Cowboys, O. Price, C. Lewington, Fred Dyer.

All of the cast acted their parts so well that it would be very difficult to pick out any one in particular.

Mention might be made of Miss G. Lucas' superb acting as an Indian maid, and Miss J. Mcomonmy as Not much of Anybody. The partners Mr. Price and Mr. Gimblett were exceptionally good.

The Sunday school orchestra, under the direction of W. H. Cunningham supplied excellent music between acts, and before and after the play.

The play consisted of four acts, opening with a scene before an Arizona hotel.

Before the conclusion of the entertainment Mr. Sanders, president of the Excelsior Club, made a few remarks of appreciation to All Saints' Dramatic Club, and to those who had patronized them, and invited any men present who did not attend any Sunday school to meet with them on Sunday afternoons.

Refreshments were served to the members of the Dramatic Club by the members of the Excelsior Club. During this social hour Rev. J. ... by Mr. Price, the director.

Todd moved a vote of thanks to All Saints' Club. This was responded to

Commenting upon general conditions in Canada, the President and the General Manager both referred to the fact that during the year there was a substantial increase in the market values of securities of every description from Dominion and Provincial Government obligations down to those of more speculative type.

They also referred to the fact that Confederation Life Association had during the year engaged in the writing of group insurance and had already succeeded in placing insurance on a number of groups, amounting to $2,600,000. In closing, reference was made to the very high grade of securities held by the association and in view of the pronounced fall in interest rates during the year, it was gratifying to be able to state that the rate earned on the net ledger assets showed a slight increase.

Obituary

W. C. TULLY.

W. C. Tully was buried yesterday afternoon in Omemee, under Masonic auspices. Mr. Tully, who died suddenly on Monday, was a native of Omemee, but was well known here, having lived here for 25 years. The Rev. A. T. Weir, of Christ church, officiated at the service, at the home of Mrs. Isabella Magee, Mr. Tully's sister, and at the cemetery. The large number of people present and the numerous floral tributes from friends here and at more distant points, testified to the esteem in which Mr. Tully was held in Omemee and Peterborough and other places.

Man, when most alive to his physical condition, is only about 25 per cent. conscious to what his body is doing scientists say.

THE UNSEEN

By J. R. H.

I was sitting in the home of my friend, Dick Sherwood, when the queerest story broke that man ever reported. Sherwood was a lawyer by profession, but by intuition and choice he was a detective of rare inductive ability. I, John Flynn, was, at the time, star reporter for a big evening daily, usually choosing my own field of operations. Today I was talking over with Sherwood a recent prosecution in which he had figured largely, securing a dismissal in an apparently air-tight State case I was looking for feature stuff, and I found it in abundance in the riches of my friend's experience.

Sherwood was the product of a backwoods village, from the stagnation of which he had dragged himself by the strength of his mentality and the power of his muscles. He worked his way through college by slaving in a lumber camp; he elbowed his way into the choicest of legal practices by using his great gift of induction in a nation-wide case that brought him with his victory the prominence he required for the right start in his career. And today he is the last resort of the police in their difficult cases, and the terror of criminals of every class. Not that he takes every case that is thrust at him. He chooses only those that promise to exercise agreeably his mental powers, or those entwined in a legal exploit in which he is involved.

This night he was in reminiscent mood, and I had card indexed in my retentive mind many leads for human interest yarns, stories hot from the forcing beds of human greed, hate and devotion. It was nearly time to knock the ashes from my pipe and retire to my home, a few doors away.

And then the telephone bell rang. It was just an ordinary ring, but as I look back at it, it seems to me that it had something of a sinister significance. There seems to have been something unreal, an unearthly tingle, in it. But this is doubtless the growth of imagination following the mysterious case into which the gong called me.

Sherwood answered, and beckoned me to the instrument. "Hello, Flynn," I heard the night editor shout, almost hysterically, "old man Grey has been shot dead in his study, by someone or something that can't be seen. Hop to it." And he banged up the receiver, probably to call other reporters to cover different angles of the shooting, for Grey was a man of importance. He was the big man of the town, responsible for bringing it into being from a small village.

I turned, aghast, to my companion and told him briefly what I had learned, which was little enough. And then, to my surprise, he proposed that he should accompany me to the scene of the crime. Thomas Henry Grey, always referred to in the town as "T. H.", had been one of his clients, and I thought that in this fact might lie Dick's interest. But as we speeded to the old house on the outskirts of the town he surprised me by asking, "You are sure the editor said 'Can't be seen?' Didn't he say, 'Couldn't be seen'?" I assured my companion, somewhat pettishly, that the first was the correct form. I was peeved that he should deal in trivialities just then, for I was endeavouring, as was my system, to collect all the facts relative to the story before visiting its source. Old T. H. as I recalled, had drifted into the town about 20 years before, with his wife and daughter, then only a baby. He had lived for years in an unpretentious house near the little factory he had started for the manufacture of paints on a formula he claimed to have originated. Then, as his business expanded, and his trade became national, he had purchased the old Van Duren place, a big estate, about a mile out of the village. Ten years ago his wife had died, and since then he had not been seen much in town, his factory being managed by a trusted superintendent. It now employed about two hundred hands, whose influx, with their families, had raised the village to the status of a town. Grey was a reputed millionaire, known better as a recluse. "You'd think he was afraid of his shadow," his housekeeper had told a policeman, who told me. And now he was dead; shot by someone who couldn't be seen. Why of course the assassin couldn't be seen, he'd be foolish to show himself! It was crazy to talk like that when the main thing was to find out how it happened, and get the man who did it.

This I thought as I drove my speedy coupe through the quiet streets, and we swept through massive gates and along a tree-bordered driveway up to a porticoed doorway that was brightly lighted from the hallway. The door was open, and in its frame appeared a constable, while other figures moved around inside. I was persona grata with the police, and the gaining of permission for my entry was a matter of form. Within a few minutes my friend and I were seated in the big library, before a blazing fire, while the story was unfolded in detail by the daughter of the dead man. Strange, I had never known how beautiful Shirley Grey was until she stood there, her eyes moist from recent weeping.

Sherwood took the gleaning of the story out of my hands entirely after he had plunged to the heart of the mystery in his first question.

"Was the person who shot your father just hidden, or was there something else peculiar about him?" he asked.

"No, no," the girl answered, almost hysterically, with a swift glance about the room, "He was there, but he couldn't be seen. I just know he was there."

"Were you in the room when the shot was fired?"

"No. I was in my room upstairs, but I've been afraid of this for a long time. I've seen him—that is, I've seen him doing things. Oh, for months now there have been noises without anything to make them, and things have moved when there was nobody there. Father is—was—scared too. He used to sit in his study and look over his shoulder with little jerky motions, or in his easy chair where you are now, Mr. Flynn, and watch the floor. You see the carpet moved when the thing passed over it and you could tell where he was. Oh, it was awful! One day I was lying on the couch in the study, resting, when I heard the door open. I just opeend my eyes, expecting to see father come in, but there was nobody there. Then the door closed and I heard the swish-swish of someone walking, but couldn't see anybody. Then a drawer in father's desk was pulled out, and the papers rustled, without anyone touching them. I think I fainted then, and when I woke up I thought it was a dream. But, another day, I had a headache and was lying on the big davenport in the library, over in the shadow there, when the same thing happened. I mean the door opened without anyone there. Then it closed and the key turned, and I saw the carpet pressed down as someone walked across to the window. Then the shade was pulled up. No, it didn't just get loose and run up. I saw the tassel pulled out as if someone were catching it, then it was given a little jerk to loosen the spring, and allowed to run up quietly. But there was no one there!

About a month ago I was sure I heard father talking to someone in the middle of the night—my room is right above his study—but when I asked him in the morning he said no person had called. That day he bought a new safe and insisted upon having the combination set at the shop where they sold it. Today, he had a carpenter here and gave him orders to have all the secret panels solidly closed—you know the house is full of them. There's one in every room. They say Van Duren, who built the house, was queer, and had the hidden passages built in as a fad.

Then, when James came to call father to dinner tonight, he found him dead in his chair at the desk. He had been shot."

"What," asked Sherwood, glancing an order of silence at me, "had your father been doing at the desk?"

"He had been writing," she said, taking a sheet of paper from her dress and handling it to the detective. "I don't understand it, except that he has seen the same things I saw," and she shuddered as she glanced fearfully around the book-lined walls.

The paper was evidently the second sheet of a lengthy document. It contained only a few words before the pen had been dug into the paper, apparently as the death shot was fired. The crabbed writing read:

"—ton came back. I got a new safe yesterday, for he looked over my shoulder and saw the combination of the old one, and my papers were being thrown into disorder every night. I haven't what he wants; I swear I never st——"

"Hmmm. Have you shown this to the police?" Sherwood asked.

"Oh yes, but they didn't think it meant much. They didn't believe me when I told them about these things I've told you; but they're so real! I can see now the pad pad of the footsteps across the floor and the blind being pulled up by the unseen hand—and that's the hand that shot my father!" Her voice broke in a half scream, indicating the tension she had been under, and Sherwood moved over to sit beside her and talk quietly in an effort to restore her self-control. Then, having gained her consent, he walked around the house, into every room, and sat for a long half hour in the study, in the chair where the man had been shot. I was feeling creepy, the story of the girl had sounded so real and yet, I told myself, it was absurd. Nobody could walk around a house, pull out desk drawers and draw up window blinds, without being seen. It wasn't sensible. It was impossible. Nevertheless when Sherwood finally leaped to his feet and started toward the door, I felt my heart turn a flop. I wouldn't have stayed in that house without Sherwood for anything. I followed him closely as he went back to the library, adjoining the study, and watched while he moved from place to place, glancing always at the floor between himself and the fire. Then, apparently satisfied, he moved out into the hall and spoke for a few minutes to the police who were discussing the affair. "It's an inside job, alright," they told him. "Not a window or door was opened. We're interviewing the servants in the upper hall now."

Passing out of the house, Sherwood asked me to drive him to his home, and on the way he refused absolutely to pass comment on the mysterious affair. This in itself was peculiar, for he usually was willing to talk over his conjectures with me, but what was still more strange was his action when I pulled up the car at his home. He stepped out and banged the door after him. "Call for me at nine o'clock in the morning, Jack," he said, "Good-night." It was the first time in the history of our friendship that he had failed to ask me to go in with him to talk over an adventure we had had together. I drove off to the office to write my story, stupified.

Next morning, while photographers jostled each other to get pictures of the cold walls of the house and of the servants and of the police, I called for Sherwood and drove him to the Medical Association building, where he was closeted with the librarian for half an hour. Then we drove up to the Grey home and were ushered into the study where last night's interview had taken place. Miss Grey came in, dressed in black and more composed than she had been. There had been no events during the night, she said. Her aunt had slept in the same room with her and everything had been peaceful.

"Did you ever hear your father speak of a man named Arthur Preston," Sherwood asked her in a low tone.

"No, I don't think so," she answered hesitatingly. "Isn't that the name of the man who wrote several books on medical subjects and on scientific research? We have two or three in the library."

Sherwood stopped her as she arose to find the books. "It doesn't matter since you never heard your father mention him. It was just a thought of mine." Then he went on to question her about her early life. Her father had made his money from a paint he had originated, she said. The paint had several properties, such as rust prevention, weather resistance, and so on, that had brought it great popularity. In her childhood she had heard him tell her mother of some other great chance he had missed, but she could not definitely say what it was.

"Did your father ever do any research work?" Sherwood asked.

"Not recently," she said. "Before mother died he had a little laboratory, but I don't think he entered it afterward."

A gleam of satisfaction appeared in Sherwood's eyes. "Do you know what nature his experiments took?" he pressed.

"Not much, only that it was another kind of paint, the secret of which he had gained and lost."

The remainder of that day Sherwood spent in prowling about the old house, poking into corners here and there, and searching the disused laboratory for signs that would help in elucidating the mystery. The police had drawn blank in their interrogation of the servants. I passed the day in intermittent dashes to the office to keep new features running in the various editions, though I was hard pressed to find material. Sherwood gave me little help.

After dinner, which we shared at the Grey house by invitation of Miss Grey, Sherwood and I sat in the library, before a blazing fire. My companion had pushed two easy chairs back half way across the room, and we had a small table between us, on the white-clothed surface of which rested our tobacco and matches. We had been silent for a long time, each busy with his own thoughts, when Sherwood arose about midnight to add a fresh log to the dying fire, and as he resumed his seat he whispered to me, "If anything happens, watch the floor." I felt my spine tingle. What did he expect to see? Into what wild adventure were we to be plunged in this house of mystery?

Suddenly, there was a double click in the wall on the left of the big fireplace, and my hair stood on one end as I saw a whole section of the book case open up. There was no one there. I grasped the arms of my chair and stared stupidly at the blank space. Then, with the consciousness of another presence in my mind, I glanced at Sherwood. And I was amazed by the intensity of his look. I have remarked, I think that he was a brave man; yet his eyes were wide, now, and his nose distended as he gazed fixedly at the floor between him and the fire. He trembled visibly. I remembered his order, and I glanced stupidly at the floor, and then my heart leaped to my mouth, for the soft pile of the thick carpet was being pressed down under feet that could not be seen. My teeth gripped my pipe frenziedly as I stared at the foot-marks that slowly prolonged themselves toward us. I can hardly describe the movement. It was slow and stealthy looking, yet so straight that I found my eyes glancing ahead to where the next footfall would show in the carpet. And directly above the approaching marks the rising flames of the fire gleamed through—nothing. I was paralysed. I was so enmeshed in the fascination of the moment that I could not tear my glance away to see what Sherwood was doing.

Then the foot-marks halted beside the table, turned, and retreated to the hole in the wall; the bookcase swung back into position with a double click.

"Damn," said Sherwood softly, the nearest I ever heard him come to swearing, and our eyes met across the table.

"Did you see what I saw?" I asked in a faint parody of my customary voice. "The carpet wasn't just pressed down around the invisible feet—I saw it pressed down under the ball of the foot and in the very centre of the heel."

I reached a trembling hand for a match, and withdrew it in renewed terror, for there, on the table between us, was writing that stood, trembling, on nothing, above the white cloth. It was not on the cloth; it literally hung in the air, shaking a little as if on a slight breeze. Sherwood followed my startled glance, and I heard a sibilant hiss as he leaned over to read with me.

"F. S. This does not affect you. Keep out."

Just that; nothing more. A very ordinary warning. But this was written in ink on air!

Then Sherwood stretched out his hand toward the writing, and I expected to see his fingers go through it. But instead I heard the rustle of paper as his finger-tips neared the ink marks, and then he picked up the writing and folded it as though it had been a sheet of paper and put it in his pocket book. My astonishment was complete. I asked in vain for an explanation. He sat there gazing, apparently vacantly, at the fire, his fingers drumming on the table where his arm lay. Why wouldn't he stop that drumming! My nerves were going raw and every thump beat its way into my head. Then a regularity in the dull taps got through the fog of horror and amazement that clouded my mind, and I recognized that he was JF, JF, JF." As I lit my pipe I glanced tapping out in the old railway code, again at his face and saw that his eyes were on my foot where it dangled over my left knee, and I signalled with it "G"—go on. "You will pretend to go home," he rapped out almost noiselessly, the while he gazed into the dying embers of the fire. "Bang the door and then slip upstairs into the Green Room, first on the left. Do you understand?"

My senses had returned. "Look here, Dick," I exclaimed, as though tired of the vigil, "How about going home. I'm tired and I've had enough for one night. Let's go."

"I'm not inclined to leave here tonight, Jack," said Sherwood, crisply and, I thought, a little loudly. "They have the Blue Room ready for me and I'll sleep there. I'll want your car first thing in the morning, if you don't mind, so will you walk home now? The air will do you good."

"Oh, all right," I assented ungracefully. "It's a good mile and a half, but . . . sure you can have the car. Don't bother coming to the door, I can get out all right. Good-night."

"Good-night," he responded, getting languidly to his feet and stretching. "See you tomorrow." Then I slipped out of the room, fussed with my coat in the hall, opened the front door, and banged it again in a moment—while I stood in the hallway. It took me but a minute to slip off my shoes and run lightly up the wide stairway to the room designated by Sherwood, and there I stood, shivering a little, and panting, not altogether from cold and hurry. In a few minutes Sherwood came upstairs, humming. As he passed me, standing just inside the door, he thrust a piece of paper and a revolver into my hand, then continued, still humming, to the centre table where he switched on the light. I slipped into a corner behind the door, and read his pencilled note:

"Don't speak. Nothing will happen for half an hour or so. You can sit by the table till I give you a signal, then hide quietly in the clothes closet and follow my lead."

Obediently, I sat down by the table and laid my revolver on it—uncocked—while I watched Sherwood. He rolled up a spare blanket and thrust it into his bed in simulation of a recumbent body; draped his coat and waistcoat over a chair back in the half shadow and threw his collar on the dresser. Then he took his revolver from his pocket, glanced at the chambers, and held it lightly in his hand as he sat across from me, smiling slightly. I smiled back, though I felt like yelling aloud.

It was fully half an hour afterward when Sherwood tensed and waved his hand, at the same time springing noiselessly to his feet and gliding towards the high-backed dresser, standing slightly out from the wall in a corner. I rushed to shelter in the clothes closet, and gazed out in wonder at the room I had just left. It was all clearly visible to me through the crack between the double doors of the closet. There was the bed, with its apparently sleeping figure; there was the dresser behind which I could just see Sherwood crouching in the shadows; there was the table we had left, the light burning on it—and there, by all that was holy, was my revolver. Ass that I was, I had rushed to cover without the weapon Sherwood had given me to defend myself or him against whatever was coming.

Was there time to rush out and get it? I was about to try, when a familar click sounded in the room, drawing my attention to the wall near where Sherwood crouched. A panel slid back, revealing blackness more profound than dark itself. Nothing more. Then I looked at the floor, and there, sure enough, were the footmarks in the carpet, not so clear here, because the rug was not so thick. They crept ahead of each other toward the bed, and there paused, while a dent in the topmost coverlet showed where some object rested on it. Then, with a snarl from the unseen, the footmarks whirled around to face me. For a fraction of a second the toes pointed in my direction, then they moved swiftly to the table. Fascinated, I watched.

Drawn by a strange magnetism, my eyes wandered up to where I knew I could see nothing. The toes again pointed towards me, one a little in front of the other and a little apart. As I knew, there was nothing. Directly above the footmarks I could see through the nothing that was there, the legs of the chair and the back, and above that, the bright colours of the wall paper on the opposite wall. And then, frozen with terror, I saw my revolver rise up from the table, held by nothing; rise until it was level with a tall man's shoulder, and pointed straight at my breast. With terror gripping at my palpitating heart and numbing my brain, I saw the hammer slowly cocked. Another second, and it would fall. . . .

There was a flash of light and a thunderous detonation in the small room, and my revolver leaped from the unseen hand that held it. Sherwood had fired just in the nick of time. "Grab him, Flynn," he shouted, as he leaped from his hiding-place to stand beside the panel. Dazed, but with renewed life, I jumped to the place where my revolver had been levelled, and made a flying tackle at a place about two feet above where the footmarks were retreating toward the secret passage. My arms encircled solid limbs, though I could see nothing, and I hung on desperately in spite of a terrible bludgeoning from a huge fist. My face was cut and bleeding in a dozen places before Sherwood reached my side and lunged viciously into the vacancy that towered above me with his revolver butt. And then the unseen collapsed. I threw myself on top of him where he lay stunned, and I rested, apparently, on nothing, inches above the floor. It was a weird, terrible sensation.

Sherwood ripped the curtain ropes from their places and returned to where I held the unseen, and together we tied his ankles and wrists, groping for the unseen limbs. And as we arose, only the strained cord was to be seen, tied securely around invisible human extremities.

Pantingly, we faced each other as a battering at the door signalled the arrival of the alarmed household. "What's wrong?" shouted the butler, trying the door and finding it locked.

"It's all right now," said Sherwood reassuringly, as he opened the door. "There's nothing to be afraid of. Please call the police, we have a prisoner here for them."

Stepping into the hall, he whispered to Miss Grey, and she obediently turned and went downstairs to the library. Then Sherwood came to stand by me, looking down at the twisted rope. "Strange case, wasn't it Jack?" he asked. "This'll make a good yarn for you, though your carelessness nearly made another kind of story. Man, man, I thought you were done for. I was so occupied in watching his footmarks that I never thought to glance up until he had you covered."

"What's it all about?" I asked. "I don't get it yet."

"I'll tell you after these people go," he answered, as the heavy tread of the police was heard on the stairs.

Scared as I had been in the past half hour, I could not help laughing at the idiotic look on the faces of the policemen when Sherwood pointed to two pieces of cord and told them, "There's your prisoner, the man who killed T. H Grey."

"Where?" they asked in stupification, suspecting a practical joke.

"Just kick in between those two strings," said Sherwood with a grin, "and you'll find out." One of the constables drew back his foot and planted it midway between the ropes. He expected it to strike only air, of course, and when, instead, it struck a solid body, he stumbled and fell over the unseen. Scrambling to his feet with surprising agility in one so dignified, he showed an inclination to flight, but Sherwood restrained him. "I'll explain it at the station in the morning," he promised, "but in the meantime you must take this man for safe keeping. He is a dangerous maniac. You can't see him, because he has rendered himself invisible, but you can feel him. Now, both of you grasp him and carry him down to the wagon. You'd better snap a pair of cuffs on instead of this rope."

After a period of persuasion, the two constables did as they were instructed, and the unseen passed downstairs between them.

Down in the library, Miss Grey waited. The fire had been rekindled, and the lights left no dark corners in which terrors might lurk—though what use were lights when the unseen stalked? Sherwood drew thoughtfully on his pipe before he opened his amazing tale.

"The unseen," he said, presently, "is a man named Arthur Preston, who was formerly engaged with T. H. Grey in research and laboratory work in an eastern city. He was a crank along certain lines, but a very clever chemist. Twenty-two years ago he and Tom Grey quarrelled over a young lady, your mother, my dear," he said, bowing toward Miss Grey. "She married your father, and Preston went a little insane over his disappointment. He broke up partnership with your father just before the marriage, and disappeared.

Your father came here and started in business, using a formula he, himself, had worked out. There was another, even better, formula that had disappeared about the time of the dissolution of partnership and each partner blamed the other with its theft. They had worked it out together, and neither could claim the undivided right to it. As it happened, neither took it. I am convinced of that.

Just about the time of your mother's death Preston followed your father here and commenced to torment him in an endeavor to force from him the formula which we know now your father never had. Preston found his way into the secret passages, which you will find leads to a well-appointed suite under the roof, furnished in splendid style by the fantastic Van Duren who built the house a century and a half ago. There he lived with chemicals he smuggled in through an entrance in the orchard—through that old tree in the corner. To make a long story short, he discovered the secret of the ray that lies at the ends of the solar spectrum—the unseen ray that scientists have known of for years but have never been able to place or trap. He developed it until it became a mania with him. He soaked himself and his clothing in it until they became invisible to the human eye, which after all only discerns a few octaves of the chromatic scale, and he prowled around the house seeking the formula which he believed your father to have. No protestations could convince him that a third person had taken the formula. His obsession finally led him to slay your father on the night when he found that the secret passages were to be closed up.

Up in the attic he had also perfected a vacuum that could be thrown around any source of sound, absolutely deadening it, and this he used when he fired the revolver. That is why no one heard the shot. There would be no noise except the whistling of the bullet after it left the vacuum."

"But how did you find all this?" I asked in amazement.

"I recalled a paper presented by Preston to the medical association some years ago in which he dealt with actinotherapy, and on examining the copy on file at the association library I found that he made mention there of the expectancy of isolating this unseen ray. The remainder was easy. When I saw that writing on the note he left for me on the table I saw at once that it was the same hand that wrote the lecture. And in an old volume in the vault of the public library I found the story of the Van Duren peculiarity, with a plan of this house and of the rooms under the roof. When I was decided I signalled you to go to the Green Room, while I said aloud I was going to the Blue Room, in order to lead Preston astray and give us time to get settled. He had to go all around the house to get from one to the other, and only the two were unoccupied. Let us go and see his hiding place."

It was as Sherwood had said. He had solved the mystery of the unseen.

ARMOUR TO SELL PUBLIC STOCKYARDS

New Company Will Take Over Large Holdings of Illinois Packers.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Jan. 19.—(Canadian Press.)— Formation of a new company to take over public stockyards holdings of Armour & Company of Illinois, valued at between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000, was revealed here yesterday in plans for a public offering of common and preferred stock in the new concern. The action is in compliance with a decree filed in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia February 27, 1920, requiring Armour & Company to sell its interests in public stockyards.

Stockyards involved are situated in Sioux City, St. Paul, St. Joseph, Mo., Fort Worth, St. Louis, Omaha, Louisville, Newark, N.J., Milwaukee, Brighton, Mass., North Portland, Ore., and Cleveland. Swift & Company also are interested in these properties, and it is believed that they may consider taking a similar step following the Armour action.

The decree under which the sale is being made was taken in the case of the government against the "big five" packers, including Swift & Company, Armour & Company, Morris & Company, Wilson & Company, Inc., and Cudahy Packing Company.

The packers were ordered to divest themselves of all holdings in public stockyards, railroads and terminals, as well as their interests in market newspapers and cold storage warehouses. They were to limit their activities practically to the wholesaling of meat, eggs, butter, poultry and cheese and similar products.

MANY MATTERS

Through the intervention of Hon. George Hoadley, Minister of Agriculture, the debate was abruptly checked. The purpose of the resolution, he maintained, in no respect involved the serious questions of acceptance or rejection of the political principles of Soviet Russia. Negotiations already had been opened between representatives of the British Government and Russia in pacifying those issues which led to the break of trade relations. The Russians were endeavoring to raise a loan in London which would enable them to increase their trade with the British Empire. If successful in obtaining this loan, the Russians would again become an important customer of Canada, which, from a business point of view, was most desirable.

Appeal Supported

The appeal of the Minister of Agriculture to table the resolution pending the result of the London Conference was accorded overwhelming support.

Recommendation that a farmers' borrowing pool be formed met with short shrift when opponents of the motion pointed out that it would be futile to launch such an enterprise without lengthy conferences and presentation to the convention of some concrete plan of action.

A full investigation of the transportation problem was urged in a resolution which declared that under existing freight rates the farmers of the country bore a heavier cost of transportation than any other class.

At the separate meeting of the women's branch the problems of health, child welfare and social service were discussed. In introducing these subjects, Miss Jean Field advocated the creation of health districts in different parts of the province from which would radiate all public health activities, school inspection and community surveys.

Obituary

JAMES T. BELSHAW

STIRLING, Jan. 19.—In the person of James T. Belshaw, Stirling lost one of its oldest and best known citizens, when he passed away on Wednesday, January 11th.

Mr. Belshaw was born in Sidney township in 1842. His parents came from Ireland in 1840, and settled in Sidney. Two years later they moved to the fourth concession of Rawdon, where Mr. Belshaw grew up and spent all his life until a number of years ago when he purchased the farm adjacent to the village on which he spent the remainder of his days. He went into the lumber business latterly, also, along with his sons. On February 4th, 1863 he was married to Mary Buttimer, who survives him, also three sons, Samuel, George and Buttimer, all of Stirling, and one daughter, Mrs. Charles Mumby, near Harold. Mr. Belshaw was an outstanding figure in the communities where he lived and held many important positions of trust. He was a devoted member of the Anglican Church and instrumental in building St. Thomas' Church, 8th Line, at Rawdon. The funeral took place on Friday, from his late residence to St. John's Church (Anglican), where Rev. Mr. Byers conducted the service in the presence of a large attendance of mourning citizens.

MRS. JOHN McLEAN.

OMEMEE, January 19. — Mrs. John McLean passed peacefully away on Tuesday, January 10, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Haggan, in Toronto. The deceased was over 90 years of age, and had been an invalid during the last two years. She was well known here, having lived for many years a short distance from the village. The remains arrived on the C.N.R. train to-day from Toronto, and were met by many sympathetic friends and relatives, and conveyed to the Presbyterian Cemetery at Mount Pleasant for interment. Rev. E. W. Rowland, of Trinity United Church, conducted the service. In religion the deceased lady was a staunch supporter of the Presbyterian Church.

The late Mrs. McLean is survived by three sons, George, Joseph, and Robert, all of Toronto, and two daughters, Mrs. Haggan of Toronto and Mrs. J. Hayes of Omemee. Her husband and one daughter predeceased her many years ago. The three sons, a son-in-law, Mr. Haggan, and a grandson, Mr. Ormond Hayes, all of Toronto, attended the funeral.

JEFFERY WIDDIS.

OMEMEE, Jan. 19.—In the sudden death of Mr. Jeffery Widdis on Saturday afternoon, Jan. 14th, in his sixty-second year, Omemee has lost a very highly respected citizen. Mr. Widdis was born and raised on a farm not far from the village. In his younger days he followed the profession of a public school teacher until the illness of his father, when he was forced to return to the farm, which occupation he followed for a number of years. He retired in Omemee several years ago and again took up his profession, being engaged as principal of the Public school in Omemee for three years. He also taught in schools adjacent to the village and in No. 14 Emily and everywhere he met with success.

The late Mr. Widdis was a man who stood for the best things in the community and when health permitted was a faithful worshipper of the former Methodist church and afterwards in the United church.

Owing to ill health, the deceased was forced to resign from school work at mid-summer, yet he remained cheerful and was out and around when able. On Wednesday evening he was seized with a weak turn and although medical skill was obtained and everything done to prolong his life he passed peacefully away on Saturday.

The funeral was held on Tuesday afternoon and was very largely attended by sorrowing friends and relatives. The service was conducted by his pastor, Rev. E. W. Rowland, assisted by Rev. A. T. Weir, rector of the Anglican church, both of whom spoke very feelingly of the life of the deceased.

The remains were tenderly borne to their last resting place in Emily cemetery by his three brothers and Messrs. Thomas Rowan, Isaac Fee and Charles Ivory.

Left to survive a loving husband, father and brother are his wife, formerly Miss Emma Graham of Cavan, one son, Ross, one sister, Mrs. George Henderson, of Omemee, and three brothers, Wesley of Merlin, Henry of Toronto, and Fred of Victoria Road, to all of whom the sincere sympathy of the community is extended.

Many beautiful floral tributes were placed on and around the casket, thus showing a glowing tribute of the love and esteem in which the deceased was held.

Among those who attended the funeral from a distance were Mr. Wesley Widdis of Merlin, Mr. Henry Widdis of Toronto, Mr. Fred Widdis and daughter, Miss Pearl Widdis of Victoria Road, Mr. and Mrs. Forman of Victoria Road, Mr. and Mrs. Powell of Millbrook, Mrs. Frederick, Mrs. Charles Lindsay and Mr. Milton Fee, of Lindsay.

GILMOUR MEMORIAL CHURCH

Rev. W. S. Edgar, of Gilmour Memorial church preached from the text, Matt. 6-5—"Thou shalt not be as the hypocrites are," on Sunday morning.

Mr. Edgar said, "We all know to whom our Lord was referring in his use of the word hypocrite in our text, and yet so strange is the power of infatuation that those Pharisees who are here designated hypocrites, considered themselves the only religious people in all the land.

"Those people were self-deceived, they had blinded their own eyes with a bitter unreasoning hatred, they had clouded their judgment with a dark and fatal prejudice, with the result that they mistook evil for good and darkness for light. Their religion instead of being a thing of the heart, became a thing of mere outward observance, and instead of seeking the glory of God, they sought their own glory, paraded their own virtue. They loved to pray, standing at the street corners, that they might be seen of men and thereby win a reputation for holiness of character, which character they did not possess. One translater has this, 'Ye shall not be as actors are or as those who play a part.' A hypocrite is simply an actor, one who pretends to be what he is not. So the Pharisee acted the part of a saint without having a shred of genuine saintliness. So our Lord said to His disciples, 'Except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no wise enter the kingdom of heaven.'

"The leading feature of the righteousness of the Pharisee which our Lord here condemns is that it lacked genuineness, it was unreal, put on, a mere pretense, and if our Lord hated anything it was this sham religion. Hence the reason why His words to these people were so bitter and stern. His attitude to the poor, penitent sinner was infinitely tender and gentle, and His words to all such were loving and kind and hopeful, but toward the religious formalists, the hypocritical Pharisees, His attitude was that of relentless opposition, and His words full of righteous indignation, scorn and scathing rebuke. Our Lord came into the world to plead for reality—reality in character and He was specially incensed against these religious formalists who were so signally lacking in truth. Hypocrisy in any walk of life is hateful to the right-thinking man, but in the realm of religion it is doubly so, and of all the hypocrites the religious hypocrite easily tops the list. Jesus was very anxious that His disciples and followers should be free from this spirit, and He warns them again and again, against it. 'Beware of the leaven of the Pharisees which is hypocrisy.' 'Ye shall not be as the hypocrites are.' Jesus was very anxious that they should be genuinely righteous.

"I want this morning to bring before you some of the characteristics of true righteousness. True righteousness is not a matter of rites and ceremonies, but of the hallowing of secular life. The Pharisee was so largely occupied with questions of religious ceremonies and sacred festivals that he forgot the obligation of high living in practical everyday life. Christ protested against this purely ecclesiastical piety. True righteousness cannot be confined within the church, it must radiate throughout the home, the farm, the street, and the market place.

"If we wish to be sure of the quality of our goodness, let us test it on the secular side of life, rather than on its church or ecclesiastical side. That is to say that your conduct in the home, or on the farm is a surer test of your righteousness and your Christianity than your conduct in the church.

"The religious profession that cannot stand the test of the home and the workman's bench is spurious and unreal, however well it may look in the church. The piety that does not reveal itself in common things, and that does not bring a richness and a sweetness into the ordinary walks of life, is in the estimation of the Master, a fraud—a counterfeit. 'Ye shall not be as the hypocrites are.'

"Then again, true righteousness is not outward and mechanical, but inward and spiritual. A great writer has declared that there are times when society is all surface, having no depth of thought, strength of conviction, or readiness of action. This was largely true of the religious society of our Lord's time; it was shallow and formal. Our Lord said, 'The kingdom of God is within you,' and He was deeply distressed by their outward mechanical worship, their professions which had no heart, their pretentions, prayers, alms and fasts, that were simply routine. They were done out of custom, rather than out of love to God.

"Again, true righteousness is divine. The righteousness of the Pharisee was self-fabricated and worked out with strict regard to human appreciation and reward. God was not in all their thoughts. Their worship of God and all their religious exercises were done in order 'that they may have glory of, men' and in order that they may be seen by men.

"These then, are three characteristics of true righteousness. It is not a matter of rites and ceremonies, but of the hallowing of secular life. It is not outward and mechanical, but inward and spiritual. True righteousness is divine. Let us test our character by these things and find out whether our righteousness is genuine and true or merely formal and unreal. I am sure we all want to be real followers of Christ, and to live our lives under His shadow, to be in possession of real love to Him, to be filled with His truth, and controlled and dominated by His spirit so that at last He may acknowledge us as His, and grant us an abundant entrance into His everlasting habitation."

MARMORA UNITED CHURCH

MARMORA, Jan. 19.—Before a good congregation at the United church on Sunday evening, the pastor, Rev. C. J. Beckley, preached a very fine sermon on "Jesus, the ideal in soundmindedness or self-possession." He showed how that the Greeks taught the avoidance of extremes in all things, but the striving after the golden mean."

The golden mean is to work sufficiently to provide for one's needs and to accomplish some worth-while object. As all work and no play is to be avoided, so is a surfeit of recreation that unfits a man for the real business of life. The function of recreation is to give zest and flavour to life and not "the morning after the night before" feeling. So in all things. To eat or sleep too much or too little is the sure sign of an unbalanced life. In the life of the Master of all good living is seen displayed the quality of sound-mindedness or self-possession.

REBEKAHS HOLD EUCHRE PARTY

Enjoyable Evening Spent By Millbrook People in I.O.O.F. Hall.

MILLBROOK NEWS

MILLBROOK, Jan. 19.—The Golden Sheaf Rebekah Lodge No. 176, held an enjoyable progressive euchre in the I.O.O.F. Hall on Friday evening, eighteen tables being in use for play.

Owing to the shortness of time for preparation, and the unfavorable state of roads and weather, the attendance was smaller than usual, but the reputation of the Rebekahs as popular hostesses was not in any way lessened when Friday night's 'party' reached its conclusion.

The first prizes went to Mrs. Walter Henry and Mr. G. W. Sayles, and the consolations to Mrs. Russell Smith and Mr. Howard Fair.

Music, dancing for those who wished, and further play at the card tables finished out the evening happily after the supper hour, and shortly after midnight the gathering dispersed.

It is probable that another of these popular forms of entertainment will be sponsored by the Rebekah Lodge within the next few weeks.

Sister Mabel Fallis P.N.G. is convener of the social committee.

Herald—Dorothy McDowell.
Pianist—Annie McMahon.

The leader's talk, in the devotional period, was "The Challenge and Transforming Power of the Upward Look," and the verse chosen as the year's motto was Psalm 5 3, "My voice shalt thou hear in the morning, O Lord; in the morning will I direct my prayer unto thee, and will look up."

The usual social hour was enjoyed at the close.

Marmora

MARMORA, Jan. 19.—The recently organized Choral Society will hold its first practice in the Town Hall on Monday evening. Mr. Ross Hunter is the leader and with thirty or more in the class, success is anticipated for this as proven out in the other ventures in which he has taken a part.

A delightful dance was held in the Town Hall on Friday evening by the young people of the Sacred Heart church. The big line-up of cars outside the Hall signified the presence within of a large number of patrons and patronesses. The Bon Ton orchestra of Belleville furnished splendid music for the occasion.

Mr. George Blake has been on the sick list for the past few days.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Foster is stricken with pneumonia.

The largest picture ever painted by the old masters is the "Paradise" of Tintoretto, which hangs in the palace of the Doges at Venice.

GENERAL MOTORS RE-OPENING PLANT

Walkerville Factory, Closed for Four Years, Will Again Be in Use.

WINDSOR, Ont., Jan. 19.—Industrial development in the Border Cities is expected to receive immediate impetus as the result of the announcement made today that the large Walkerville plant of General Motors of Canada, Limited, which has been idle for four years will be re-opened at once.

Slightly more than half the plant is to be put into operation as soon as new machinery is installed, the major portion of the space to be used by the Truck and Coach Division of General Motors Products of Canada, Limited, who will manufacture there a complete line of General Motors trucks, bus bodies and cabs. Other space will be devoted to offices and to the manufacture of front axles for Pontiac and Chevrolet cars.

H. A. Brown, vice-president and general manager of General Motors of Canada, Limited, authorized the announcement by long distance telephone from Oshawa. He stated that W. E. Davis, assistant general manager in charge of operations, would arrive in Windsor on Monday to supervise the installation of new machinery and equipment, with the intention of having the plant in production by February 1.

"Mr. R. S. McLaughlin, President of General Motors of Canada and myself have been anxious for a long time to get this plant open and provide increased employment for men in its vicinity. The entire manufacturing of General Motors Trucks is to be removed from Oshawa to Walkerville," said Mr. Brown, "which will provide more room here for the expansion of other divisions." The move was also being taken, he declared, owing to the rapid increase in sales of General Motors Trucks in Canada and the very large amount of space necessary for the manufacture of trucks.

The manufacture of truck and bus bodies, which has not been undertaken at Oshawa, will be carried on in the newly opened plant to the designs and specifications of Canadian engineers. It was learned, however, that H. H. Henchel, General Sales Manager of the Truck and Coach Division, with the sales and development staffs, will remain at Oshawa, in closer touch with General Motors officials.

Mr. Henchel's department has been making a study of the transportation problems of various types of truck users with a view to recommending to them the kind of transportations for their particular needs. The result is that General Motors trucks will be practically custom-built for each particular user.

Every Cold is Serious

Any cold is serious enough when its dreadful possibilities are considered, but when there is soreness or tightness in the chest and a dry hard cough you can look for bronchitis, which is often confused with an ordinary cold.

It is usually known by aching limbs and body pains, chilly feelings, weariness and weakness, pain in the chest and a tight, tearing cough. Fever, dry skin, thirst, coated tongue and constipation are other symptoms.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine seems almost like a specific for bronchitis because it is so successful in loosening up the cough, aiding expectoration and preventing the inflammation from reaching the lungs.

DRESS
By MARY MARSHALL

To wear at the dog show or other sporting events these dog's head canes are considered very smart. The sticks are of hazel wood with horn ferrules and each dog's head is carved by an expert and hand colored to the life.

No one could say that the carrying of canes amounts to a fad, because so very few women ever do carry them, but that very fact adds to the distinction of the woman who does carry one for some special occasion.

The other day I saw one that had been made to order for a woman well known for her amateur interest in dogs. It was made of beautifully marked hazel wood with a head carved in the wood in the likeness of her favorite breed of dog, and the carved likeness had been carefully painted so that the effect was most lifelike. This dog fancier wanted this cane to complete her costume at the next dog show. The idea was not entirely original with her. Other women have carried similar canes at the races or other sporting events—bearing the carved heads of their favorite breed of dog.

Fashion gives our hands ample employment nowadays. The only difficulty apparently is to decide just which of the two possible accessories we shall carry. For evening wear large chiffon handkerchiefs are carried in the hand. But you may prefer to use the hand to carry a fan—one of the new fans that have a fringe of long ostrich flues at the edge. One hand must, of course, be left free for the indispensable evening bag or vanity case.

And speaking of hands—have you noticed how much more attention photographers and portrait painters give to this detail nowadays than they used to? I saw the other day a collection of pictures taken recently at one of the smart photographers, and in every one as much care had been taken to portray the hands as the face.

And this is by no means easy, for many women who are quite able to assume a natural enough facial expression when "sitting for their picture" really don't know the trick of holding their hands in positions that are at once quite natural and attractive. Perhaps this is because under ordinary circumstances their hands are usually occupied, holding a bag or umbrela or cigarette or holding together the opening of a wrap-around coat.

SAINT and SINNER
By ANNE AUSTIN

Faith Lane Hathaway had never plumbed such depths of self-loathing in all her too-introspective life as she reached that Tuesday morning, the third day of her sudden illness.

The thing that plunged her to the very bottom of the pit of despair was the realization that both Cherry and Bob had credited her with only the loftiest sentiments. To them she was blameless, a person of such unquestionable nobility that it had never occurred to them to put the true interpretation upon her flight and supposed loss of memory. They had been bewildered, frantic with terror for her, but they had never for a moment explained or sought to explain her strange behaviour on the grounds of her jealousy for Cherry. And although she had fled from her family in the company of George Pruitt, a former suitor, a man who still loved her, as they very well knew, neither Bob nor Cherry had for a moment considered the possibility that her flight with George and the taking of an assumed name indicated an intrigue between the two.

No. They could think no evil of her, for they both trusted her implicity. Alone, except for the nurse, Miss Sutton, Faith turned her face to the wall and wept silently, drearily. Not yet could she take comfort from the very fact of their loyalty and their implicit faith. Her conviction of unworthiness was so profound that again she wanted to die. Who was she to be the wife of a man like Bob Hathaway? Ever since the first week of her marriage she had poisoned her happiness by suspicion and doubt. It was she, not he who had stipulated that Cherry should make her home with them. Had she hoped, in the depths of evil which lie dormant even in the best of us, that Bob would be rude to Cherry, that he would ignore her beauty and vivacity and show only his distaste for the girl he had once been in love with?

"I'm not fit to live." Faith cried in her heart despairingly. "I've been called good—the 'family saint,' they've always called me—and I'm not worthy to polish his shoes. When I'm thinking the worst of him, he's doing his best to insure Cherry's happiness—and ours, by urging her to accept and glory in her love for Nils. When I run away from him, mortally sick with horror of him, he explains my insanity by saying—and believing—that it is caused by my overpowering love for Hope, whom Cherry would take from me by marrying Nils. No, I'm not fit to live."

Her ceaseless weeping and her profound despair whipped up the fever which had been almost conquered, and for a few merciful hours she was again too ill for coherent thought. The doctor, puzzled, and alarmed, excluded visitors for the rest of the day. For the girl who hated herself there was a sort of bitter pleasure in being denied a sight of the man and the sister she had wronged. And she had not yet the heart to plan a way out of the "amnesia" deception which she had practised upon the doctor and upon her family.

LEAGUE HOLDS SUNDAY SERVICE

Missionary Department Takes Charge of Sabbath Services at Zion.

MEMBERS WIN HONORS

PETHERICK'S CORNERS, Jan. 19.—Owing to the absence of the pastor, Rev. C. Daniel, the service at Zion on Sunday was in charge of the missionary department of the League under the leadership of Mr. Earl Fairman. The service was in the evening at 7 30 and a fair number of League members braved the sub-zero weather to hear one of the best League programs presented for some time. The president, Mr. Fred Barnum, led the opening song service, with Mr. William Petherick and Mr. Amos Barnum assisting in the devotional period. Mr. Fairman was fortunate in being able to secure the services of Mr. Bond of Hastings to give the main address of the evening. Mr. Bond's missionary sermon-talk was much appreciated. Vocal numbers by both Mr. Bond and Miss Bond were greatly enjoyed. Mr. Fairman gave a short talk on the regular missionary topic.

Attend Lecture.

A number of local people attended the lecture by Mr. Ralph Gordon of Toronto at Rylstone Church on Friday evening. Mr. Gordon's subject, "My Neighbor's Face and How to Read It," proved instructive as well as interesting and quite amusing. Mr. Gordon has been heard previously in his more usual role as a superb comic entertainer, and is always sure of an audience.

Miss Gladys Simpson and Miss Jennie Fry, local League members who attended the Cobourg Winter School during the past week, have returned home after a very enjoyable and profitable course. Both secured certificates of merit, which bring further honors to the Zion League, which has for some time been known as the premier League of the Quinte Conference in regard to the quality, as well as quantity of leaders promoted in the Young People's Department.

The Rev. Chas. D. Daniel, pastor of the local church, was the president of the Cobourg Winter School, and so provides another noteworthy link between the Zion congregation and the great work of the young people's movement.

HOROSCOPE
The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

FOR FRIDAY, JANUARY 20, 1928

Astrologers read this as a threatening day in which many malefic aspects are operating.

It is a rule under which to avoid politics and legal matters for there is a menacing sign governing whatever requires logic or real diplomacy.

For those who seek employment there is a faint hope of success, but they should be careful not to accept small wages, astrologers declare.

Business matters may be easily disturbed under this direction of the stars and it is well to postpone all new ventures.

Lawyers should be wary in personal contacts today, for they will be unjustly criticised in all probability.

Uranus is in an aspect that bodes ill for well-balanced decisions and it is wise to defer definite moves in important matters.

This is read as an unlucky day for aviation, not only for those who sail the skies, but for proper development in new enterprises.

There may be a contentious spirit manifested in business as well as domestic relations and for this reason important discussions should be postponed.

One sign of a return of interest in the army and navy will be a public trend toward special honors for officers who have served with honor.

Novel features will encourage attendance to the theatres as winter advances and a play of remarkable character will meet with success.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a prosperous year in which new enterprises bring success. Women are well directed.

Children born on this day probably will have marked constructive talent. Architects and builders are born under this sign.

Lyrics of Life - By Douglas Malloch

ONE LITTLE FACE.

One little light at the window,
One little face at the door,
And men may come home to a glittering dome,
But never to anything more.
One little hour in the ev'ning,
An hour for a romp and a play—
Oh, that is the thing, what the money we bring,
That pays us for all of the day.

One little face that is smiling,
One little heart that is true,
And summers may go, or the winters may blow,
But what do you care if they do?
One little heart will be happy,
And one little face you can see,
And one world is bright that you come to to-night,
Whatever the other may be.

One little face I remember;
And, Fate, if you handle me ill,
It's easy to choose what to keep, what to lose—
So take all my gold, if you will.
But leave me the light in the window,
And leave me the face at the door;
For men may come home to a glittering dome,
But never to anything more.

WOMEN MAY SEEK CAREERS

Springville Literary Society Debaters Reach Decision in Problem.

REGULAR MEETING

SPRINGVILLE, Jan. 19. — The Springville-Fairmount Literary Society met on Friday evening with a record attendance, there being about eighty persons present. The basement of Springville United church formed a pleasant setting for a very interesting program contributed by several of the young people. The meeting was opened with the President, Miss C. McConnachie in the chair. After the customary opening exercises were completed, Miss Jean Fairbairn delighted the audience with a reading.

This being the debating evening of the Society, the major part of the program was devoted to the debate, "Resolved, that women are justified in seeking a career." The debaters, Miss HelenWhittington and Miss Sybil Robertson, for the affirmative, and Mr. C. Seymore and Mr. Bruce Herron for the negative, ably defended their cause. Many good and interesting points were brought forward and proved by both sides. There was a humorous as well as a serious side to the question at stake which added life to the debate.

While the judges, Mrs. B. Preston, Mr. A. E. Sanderson and Mr. S. S. Staples were coming to their decision, Mr. B. Preston rendered two vocal selections, "I've Done My Work," and "Smilin' Through."

Mr. S. S. Staples announced the decision of the judges in favor of the affirmative, who won by a small majority of points.

Community singing was another enjoyable feature of the program and was indulged in for a short period of time.

After the Benediction had been pronounced by the Rev. Mr. McConnachie, a social hour was spent in friendly chat and games.

COLOR NOTE

If your kitchen is a dead white, paint the back of your shelves some gay color, such as butter yellow, and put up chintz or gingham curtains the same tone. Dead white tires when not relieved by color.

VETERAN PASTOR GIVES TESTAMENTS

Rev. Joseph Wilks Makes Offer to Young People of Sunday School.

MILLBROOK, Jan. 19.—Rev. Joseph Wilks, who has an assured place in the affections of all denominations in the community, has decided to make the distribution of Christian literature his objective during his later years, and on Sunday afternoon made an initial movement toward starting boys and girls in regular reading of the Scriptures.

Mr. Wilks offered a copy of the gospel of Matthew to each scholar in the junior classes of the intermediate department of the United Church Sunday School who would promise to read the little volume through; when this is finished Mark will be given, then Luke, and lastly, John. Twenty-five boys and girls joined this 'reading circle' to the great delight of the donor of the gospels.

At the recent township convention held here, Rev. Mr. Wilks generously offered to provide any of the Sunday Schools represented with Miss McCorkindale's "Temperance and Life," and the accompanying charts, if the study of this helpful book would be taken up as the temperance topics for the year. He has already presented the book and charts to the local C.G.I.T. group.

Owing to the difficulty of getting about in the winter months, Rev. Mr. Wilks has been obliged to resign his office as Home Department Superintendent of the Sunday School, after some years faithful service. Mrs. J. H. George is his successor.

The organized men's Bible Class, Mrs. (Dr.) Rae, teacher, has recently presented new hymn slides to the Sunday School, and the Boneka (women's) Class, Mrs. (Rev.) F. H. Howard, teacher, donated the twenty dollars taken in at the supper hour on Thursday when the township convention met here, to the Sunday school funds.

The annual executive meeting of the Sunday school is being held earlier than usual this year, Wednesday, January 18, being the date chosen.

SHORT SKIRTS BRING HEALTH.

Doctors and fashion experts of France have declared that the death rate amongst French women is in adverse proportion to the length of their skirts. French women are said to have never been so healthy as since the abolition of the corset and the coming of the knee-length skirt. When they were covered from neck to heel, and their skirts swept up the dust, they were more liable to tuberculosis than men. Present medical statistics show that to-day, after five years of "reform" clothing, women comprise only one-fourth of the tubercular patients that are under treatment.

THE distinctive, captivating flavour of Gold Medal Coffee was not secured by chance. Only after months of blending the world's finest coffees did we achieve the fascinating flavour that distinguishes Gold Medal Coffee.

Even then, we did not offer Gold Medal Coffee to the public until it had secured the unanimous approval of many qualified judges of coffee in both Canada and the United States. Despite the varying tastes of these judges every single one selected Gold Medal as the finest flavoured coffee ever tasted.

It stands to-day as the finest coffee ever offered the Canadian public. Its delightful flavour is rapidly winning for it a secure place in the esteem of discriminating people.

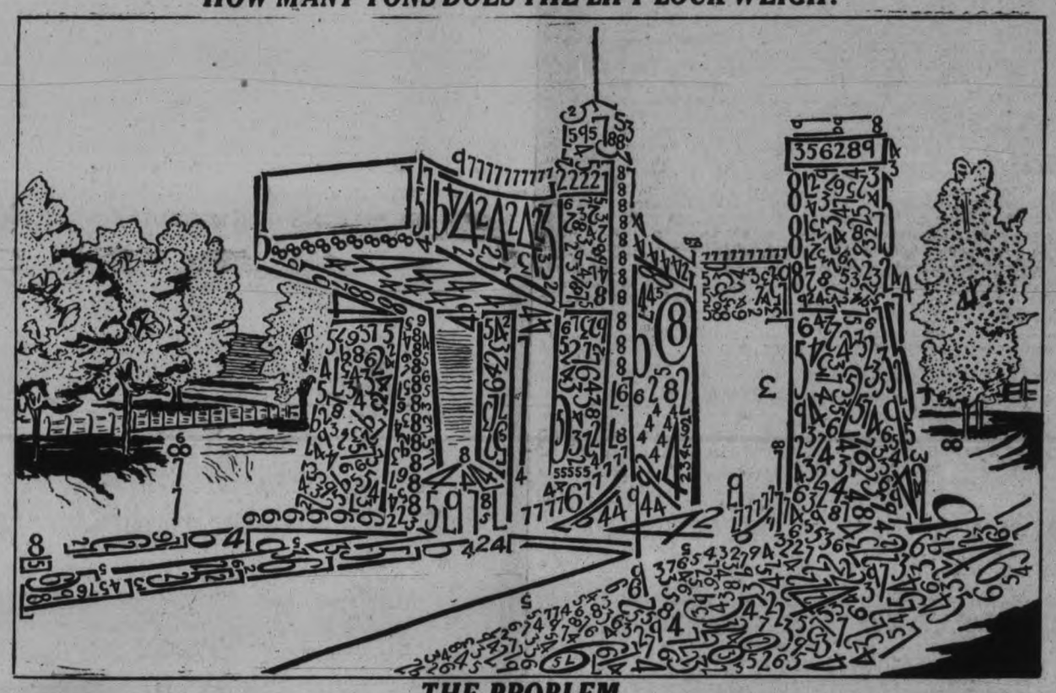
HOW MANY TONS DOES THE LIFT LOCK WEIGH?



THE PROBLEM

The problem is to add together all the figures shown above, which, when added together, represent the total number of tons that the Lift Lock weighs.

The puzzle is entirely free from tricks or illusions, every figure is complete and stands alone. The figures range from two to nine. There are no ones (1) or ciphers (0) in the puzzle. The sixes are curved, while the stem of the nines are straight.

We wish it clearly understood that every figure can be plainly seen. There is nothing hidden in the trees or shadows, but the problem of adding these is a real test of accuracy.

Remember, each figure is added separately. For example, 9777 is counted 9 plus 7 plus 7 plus 7, or, in other words, simply add them as if each figure stood one above the other in a single column.

REMEMBER, NO ONE KNOWS THE CORRECT ANSWER UNTIL THE CONTEST CLOSES

To ensure this we had Mr. E. M. Elliott, County Treasurer, and Mr. Frank Adams, City Treasurer, each erase one or more figures from the original drawing, which they carefully noted and sealed in an envelope and gave to the manager of the Royal Bank for safe keeping until the contest closes.

A TIP ON HOW TO WIN

Take a pencil and put down the numbers as you stroke them out, then add them up. Some suggest that you cut the chart into dozens of pieces, then check them from all sides; or if you wish, try blotting them out with colored ink or pencil. Others think the best way is to pick out all the twos, threes, fours, etc. Any they miss the first time they find later. Or suppose you try taking a combination of figures which, when added together, makes a total of ten. For example, 5 and 3 and 2 make 10. Tens are not only easily added together, but there is less danger of making a mistake.

Important Points to Remember

1. Everyone has the same opportunity. A person sending in only $3.00 in subscriptions has the same chance of winning the first prize as a person sending in more money. The advantage of sending in more money is to increase the value of the first five prizes.
2. This is a contest for Peterborough district, and 50 people from Peterborough or the surrounding district, which The Examiner serves, will win the prizes.
3. Don't forget to answer all the necessary questions on the solution blank.
4. If you collect a subscription from a friend or neighbour, that person can also submit an answer to the puzzle without further payment.

THE JUDGES

In order that each Contestant shall have fair and impartial treatment, we have arranged with Mr. Roland Denne, Mayor of the City and Alderman Nagel Phelan to act as judges for the contest. Any complaints in this connection will be referred to these judges whose decision will be absolutely final.

PETES GIVE VARSITY GREAT BATTLE, LOSING CLOSE GAME TO STUDENTS IN SENIOR SERIES

League Leaders Get the Breaks to Win 3 to 1 Verdict Over Homesters.

A GOOD EXHIBITION.

Fans Enjoy the Best Played and Most Enjoyable Game of Season.

(By F. D. C.)

The Petes gave their best display of the season at Brock street rink last night when they held the Varsity team, who are at present leading the senior parade, to a 3 to 1 score, the breaks going to the students who got one fluke goal on a rebound from the wall and another on a play that started from a long offside at the blue line.

It was 1-1 at the end of the first period but Varsity scored once in each of the last two sessions to win the argument.

The game was easily the finest exhibition of the present campaign despite the soft ice conditions.

There was plenty of action at all stages, fine goal-keeping, fast skating, and on the part of the Varsity team in particular some very effective combination and excellent use of the forward pass in their own defence area.

It was in these respects that the students had the edge. They repeatedly caught the Petes' attackers up in the corners and left them behind by whipping passes to the blue line and going into Peterborough territory they did some clever passing, getting two of their goals by effective team work.

Nowhere else, however, were the blue-sweatered visitors superior on the night's play. The Petes checked with more determination than in any other fixture this season, took their men out of the play more consistently and never let up trying to break through for goals. They gave Varsity real opposition at all stages and the students were favored materially by the vagaries of fortune in setting up their margin.

The crowd enjoyed the battle immensely and win or lose they'll be glad to come back for more of the same brand of hockey. They appreciated the determination of the homesters, realizing that this year's Peterboro team is fighting against big odds.

Varsity, while not of the same calibre as the famous Grads, have been smartly drilled, have considerable hockey talent and show the effects of long and consistent practice. In Snyder they showed a clever and steady goalie who blocks well and feeds his forwards very effectively. The Carrick brothers were a hard-checking and useful defence pair who have the weight and the inclination to use it to much advantage. On the forward line there was little to choose although the starting trio, Harley, Stewart and McMullen looked the best. Red Legon was one of the subs but did not show to any great advantage. The Petes took a particular delight in riding their fellow townsman and his passage was far from being smooth.

On the Peterboro side Jack Lebarr earned a large share of the honors by a very clever exhibition of goal-minding. He had plenty to do and he arose to the occasion in fine style, making some fine saves. It was a tough break that he should have his lips badly cut as the game was almost over. The veteran Lackey was used on the defence and gave an excellent account of himself, while Rose did some very effective defensive work. On the firing line McFee was consistently prominent by reason of a clever display of most useful poke-checking, breaking up rush after rush. Williams made many smart attacks. Kane's stick-handling and checking were of great assistance, and Cripps, who got the Petes' only goal, showed speed and cleverness. Foley never stopped trying and turned in a good card.

The line up:

Varsity.

Goal—Snyder.
Defence—D. Carrick, A. Carrick.
Centre—Stewart.
Right wing—Harley.
Left wing—McMullen.
Subs—Legon, Richards.

Peterboro.

Goal—Lebarr.
Defence—Rose, Lackey.
Centre—Williams.
Right wing—McFee.
Left wing—Kane.
Subs—Cripps, Foley.
Referee—Harry Batstone, Queen's.

The game opened at a fast clip with both teams checking closely and the fans who looked for a Varsity walkover were soon convinced that the Petes were a greatly improved outfit and were going to make it close. Good checking by the local forward line in mid-ice enabled them to flag the Varsity offensive plays and to launch dangerous attacks on their own account. Both goalers, as a result, were given plenty of action but they beat the attackers steadily until a horseshoe goal put Varsity out in front. Don Carrick it was who was the recipient of Dame Fortune's favors. The big defence man came down alone and blazed a shot from outside the defence that whipped by outside the post, only to have the puck rebound from the wall, hit Lebarr's foot and drop into the net. That shot was lovely billiards but it counted just as much as if it had been one of Howie Morenz's best.

The Petes got that one back inside of a minute on a fast and clever play by Fred Cripps. McFee had got up and smoked a shot over the top of the cage and Cripps dashed in, recovered the loose puck, caught Varsity flatfooted by circling the net, and scored at close range.

Before the end of the period Alex Carrick drew a penalty for dumping McFee and soon after Williams was banished.

The only goal of the second period went to the invaders and it started from an offside play that Referee Batstone missed. The Petes were pressing but Snyder, after a nice save, shot the puck up to the blue line where his forwards were waiting. The Varsity man who played the pass failed to hold it and when the rubber glanced forward off his stick a team-mate ahead of the play secured possession and started a rush that culminated in a point blank goal by McMullen on a neat pass from Harley. It was a palpable offside that got the play under way. Right after this the Petes had a glorious chance to sew up the game when Alex Carrick and Legon were chased almost together and the homesters had a two-man advantage that they did not turn to account because they failed to pass the puck. Two three-man attacks in succession crumpled because the puck-carrier refused to transfer the rubber. It was the best chance of the period. Kane also missed a good opportunity when Williams gave him a neat pass that beat the Varsity defence. Snyder went to his knees and blocked the shot.

Varsity naturally lasted better than the Petes and they showed superior condition in the last twenty minutes although the losers never stopped trying. It was even going until the finish, with Varsity getting the only counter after eight minutes play when Stewart took a pass close in that again looked to be offside. Several times afterward the smart passing of the students carried them in close but Lebarr pulled off some spectacular saves while at the other end the Petes found it difficult to break through for a short range shot at Snyder. A few minutes before the game ended Lebarr had his lip cut by a bullet-like drive from Don Carrick's stick but he finished the game after leaving the ice for repairs.

The summary:

First Period.

1—Varsity, D. Carrick, 7.35 mins.

2—Peterboro, Cripps, 50 secs.

Second Period.

3—Varsity, McMullen, 5 mins.

Third Period.

4—Varsity, Stewart, 8 mins.

Will Use Honorary Coaching System

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 19.—(Canadian Press).—Major Stuart Forbes, director of athletics at McGill University, has announced that the Red and White will revert to the honorary coaching system next season. The change in system is caused by the resignation of Frank Shaughnessy, dean of Canadian football coaches, who resigned the McGill helm at the close of the 1927 season.

The present plan includes the formation of a board of honorary coaches composed of three or four prominent graduates who know the game in all its phases, with a junior professional coach as assistant. This board will meet constantly to decide all questions of policy and to determine the coaching programme for the season.

Such prominent former players as Dr. "Monty" Montgomery, Dr. Cyril Flanagan, Tommy Hall, Dr. "Dud" Ross, have been mentioned as possibilities for the board.

AUGSBURG TEAM ARE NOT TO GO

U. S. Olympic Committee Declines to Approve College Hockey Club.

STILL HOPEFUL.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19. — Because it does not regard the Augsburg College team of Minneapolis as sufficiently representative, the United States Olympic committee yesterday announced it had declined to approve its selection for competition in the Olympic winter sports at St. Moritz, Switzerland, next month.

Still Hopeful.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. Jan. 19. — Canadian Press. — Augsburg College, of Minneapolis was notified to-day that its hockey team had been rejected as the United States representative in the Olympic, held hope last night that it might participate.

Athletic authorities at the small Lutheran institution said they would ask the Olympic committee an opportunity to prove their team merits favorable consideration through actual competition.

"If we fall short then," said Athletic Director Melby, "we will have no complaint. We shall communicate with the American committee either to-night or to-morrow."

The "Hansons of Augsburg," as the team has been called because five brothers of that name are its stars, are held in respect in hockey circles in the Northwest, for they won the state college title of Minnesota last year.

The University of Minnesota, previously invited to represent this country in the Olympics, is hardly rated higher than Augsburg's icemen by the hockey experts here, although the two teams have not met.

There will be no halt in plans, at least for the present, in the matter of raising funds for the expenses of the Augsburg team abroad.

MADOC BEATS CAMPBELLFORD BY ONE GOAL ON HOME RINK

Winning Counter of Hard Fought Game Comes Near End.

ICE RATHER SOFT.

Hard Checking Marks Game, With Many Players Serving Time.

MADOC, Jan. 19. —Old Lady Luck, Dame Fortune, or whatever you wish to call it, did not see fit to take sides with the Campbellford team when they played in Madoc last night. The truth is, the game was fast and for the most part good, clean hockey, but the visitors were unaccustomed to the open rink and the low slung lights and lost out 2-1. In the first period the visitors almost scored twice. On one occasion the goal umpire actually raised his hand in the usual signal, but took a second look and lowered his arm. The visiting supporters felt their hearts sink and Madoc rooters took a new lease of life. By the end of the period Madoc really had a goal. The second period ended without a score from either side. In the last session, both teams tallied a counter and the final score was two for Madoc. From the beginning Ross Burtt, Trenton, ruled the play with his usual unquestionable fairness and as the lawyers say, without fear or favor.

For a time the visitors seemed unable to get the rubber out of their territory. The ice was slightly soft and rougher than they had been used to. After about five minutes used in feeling out their opponents, both teams settled down to play hockey. Madoc had been crowding their guests, but Ibey managed to get to their blue line and his shot was blocked by the goalie with the rugby helmet. Cowell tried the same thing and the same results followed. Then came a rush for the Campbellford goal. Campbellford got going strong and held the play in the Madoc territory till Blute missed his shot at the net and Madoc rushed out of their tight corner. A moment later Blute scored for Campbellford, but it was a false alarm because the bell rang just a moment before he shot. He had taken it on an offside. As soon as the play began, Cowell got spilled and Caverley drew a trip to the bench for tripping. Blue did a streak of fast skating and snappy stick handling, shot a hot one at the Madoc goalie and shouldered one of the Madoc men into the boards. The result was that the shot was saved and Blue drew a penalty for "boarding."

With only five men to each team, the game was faster than it had been and Campbellford worked a fast combination right up to the goal, but Cowell shot wide and the play was lost. Madoc made a nice save and as they rushed out, McCarthur got in a neat check and his shot on the goal went over the fence. Cowell shot at the Madoc net but the goalie with the rugby helmet saved the day again. On the second shot, the umpire signalled a goal, but lowered his hand a moment later, having decided that it was not actually in the net, but about an inch and a half outside. For his decision he was patted on the shoulder by the Madoc goal tender, who immediately had another opportunity to show his worth. Rupert of Madoc drew a penalty for a trip and Ibey's short shot was blocked.

An offside at centre ice resulted in the usual face-off, followed by an exchange of long shots like a rugby game. A little stalling in the corner stopped the play, and a moment later Blute got a penalty for tripping. A few seconds later Ibey got a rest in the penalty box for using his body and it looked like the case of the noble six hundred against the entire world. The visitors were playing four men to the local six. A close scramble around the Campbellford goal resulted in a score for Madoc. Then there was some really fast hockey and Ibey got an open shot at the goal, but it missed and Henderson and Blute, one from each team, got a penalty for mixing it down in the corner. When the time was up, the puck was in Madoc territory and the visitors were struggling valiantly to make a count.

Second Period.

Campbellford got the first two shots at the goal, but the Madoc tender did his stuff and fought them off while the game was pressed hard in the locals' area. First a Madoc and then a Campbellford player could not resist the temptation to kick the rubber and the game was stopped twice. Then Madoc took a chance on a long shot from their own blue line, followed it in, and Sanders stopped a fast one from close range. Moon of Madoc got a rest on the bench for slugging. For a time Madoc pressed hard inside the Campbellford defence line, and for two minutes there was some fast hockey. Blue got into a terrible rush, but missed his shot. On the return rush by Madoc, Referee Burtt pointed his finger at Ingram for bodying a Madoc player into the boards, and Sanders saved a Madoc shot from the blue line. Moon, Madoc, found himself ordered to the bench for bodying into the boards. Madoc got themselves out of a dangerous position by a long shot into Campbellford defence area, and Ibey worked hard to get the puck back to centre ice. McArthur shot from centre ice and rushed in to try another from the rebound. For the next few minutes there was a rain of shots on the Campbellford net. McArthur tried another long one, and Madoc returned the compliment by shooting it out over the fence.

Apparently Referee Burtt had been watching closer than some of the players suspected, for he pointed his finger at Henderson and told him to "cut out that chopping." Campbellford got away with a snappy combination and Ibey's shot was saved by the goalie. Blute shot again on a pass from Ibey, who had recovered the rebound, and two men in the goal blocked his shot. The rubber soon was fought back toward the Campbellford goal, and Cowell worked desperately all the way up along the boards, only to have a Madoc player do the same thing. Ibey corralled it for a few moments while he worked his way close enough to shoot. Blute caught the rebound and shot high. The Campbellford defence staged a rush and missed their shot. As soon as the puck was worked back, Campbellford staged a second attack, and there was a pile up in the Madoc goal; but no score. While the shots were showering on the Madoc goalie, the bell rang and the period ended without a score from either side.

Third Period.

Apparently both teams had been getting a lecture during the rest interval. They came out with a whole bag full of new tactics, and for the first three minutes the play was fast and faster. Ibey shot at the Madoc net and Madoc retaliated by pressing the play hard in the visitors' defence area. The visitors rushed it out, but missed their shot on the local net. Then the furious pace led back to the visitors' nets, and Sanders was called on to save two fast ones. Henderson got the bench for chopping, and Blue accompanied him for bodying to the boards. The Madoc goalie made a neat save, but the puck seemed to have a bad habit of falling into his pads. Then Sanders got the opportunity to stop a long one, and almost immediately the play returned to the Madoc goal. Ibey for Campbellford, came back on with the play still dangerously near the local net. There was a regular succession of shots at the Madoc goal, and then the same was true of the Campbellford net. In a rush on the Madoc goal, the defender of the net was laid up momentarily from impact with another player, but was able to continue the game, which remained hot around his territory.

Ibey drew a rest on the penalty bench for using his stick for other purposes than chasing the puck, and Madoc used the interval to send out two subs. Sanders saved a nice open shot. Bennett and Blue drew the bench for a little fracas. Then Ibey won thunderous cheers when he scored for Campbellford on a swift pass from McArthur. Madoc subbed again and the game went on at a furious pace, the score tied, and only a very few minutes to go. Ibey tried again, but failed, and Sanders stopped a slow one of the long range variety.

For a time the game was real fast, and the visitors seemed to be having the better of it. The play was down in the Madoc defence area when Bennett managed to get in a long, high shot over the lights. No one could see the puck until it dropped quietly into the net close to Sanders' right foot. And thereby hangs the tale.

Campbellford tried desperately to win out but Ibey drew a penalty. Campbellford used the interval to sent out a sub and just as Blue was going strong past centre ice on one of his million dollar rushes, the bell rang, and the game was over. Madoc had played a hard fast game, and managed to keep the honors at home. The Campbellford players cheered the victors before leaving the ice and the compliment was returned in good measure.

The visiting players have no alibis whatever to offer although they were literally in a strange land. The open air rink, the low lights that hid the puck as it sailed silently and slowly into their net for the winning goal, and even the broom gang that cleaned the ice between periods were all strange to them. It may be expected with a fair degree of confidence that the tale of the return game will at least be no sadder for the Campbellford sextette than the story of their first defeat of the season. HAVELOCK WINS IN BOBCAYGEON DEFEATING HOMESTERS 4 TO 0

Railroaders Look Better From Start, Having Advantage in Weight.

ICE VERY SOFT.

Losers Try Hard, But Are Outlucked Around Goal—Out of Running.

BOBCAYGEON, Jan. 19.—Barney Quinn and his band of C.P.R. puck chasers from Havelock won for themselves a fighting chance for the group honors when they stepped into Bobcaygeon last evening and in a soft-ice battle administered the brush in no uncertain manner. They pulled out on the long side of a 4—0 count, thereby eliminating the Tourist Town's first O.H.A. entry and by winning, stand a chance of knotting the group with Lakefield. If they win against the Lakefielders at Brock Street in their next scheduled game each will have won two and lost one.

Fans Back of Team

Though this is their first year in O.H.A. circles, the Bobcaygean lads have a large following in their village and district, and last night almost four hundred people jammed in to watch their boys play. Though they were disappointed at the balance being on the wrong side of the sheet, their loyalty never wavered.

Soft Ice

Referee Bill Jackson called the game sharp at 8.15 at which time, there was every evidence of heavy going in store. The ice was soft and in several places pools of water were to be seen. Taking this into account the fans were agreeably surprised at the pace set and held from gong to gong.

The Railroaders, a bigger and heavier team, took to the sticky sheet well and though given some anxious moments, they showed every promise of being the ultimate winners.

They took the offensive at the start of each session and only in the last thirty minutes were they in very great trouble. In this time their opposition threw in all they had and hard luck, rather than lack of ability, kept the home town team off the sheet. Nichols, the Bobs' goalie, had a bit of an off night, though he was afforded poor protection on many occasions. His former good game against Lakefield is recalled by many.

On the defence, Read and Armstrong proved better attackers than defenders, while Johnstone, Kelso, L. Wright and Hill turned in plenty of assistance up in front. All four had chances to count, but the breaks simply were not coming.

One thing remarable about the pastime was the unusually clean play. Soft ice is not conducive to gentlemanly conduct among players, but last night only nine penalties were imposed: six to the vistiors and three to 'Caygeon. The boys laid on the hickory at times, but not to excess and Jackson had an untroubled evening with the bell.

The First Period.

The first period saw the more confident Havelock team take the offensive, Jack doing a neat solo effort down the right rail in the first minute after the face-off. His attack failed to give the Bobcaygeon goalie a shot to handle, however, and play shifted back to the centre ice area. The home town lads began to regard their rivals as something that could be stopped with a fair expenditure of effort and close checking made the play slow and uninteresting for several minutes. The ice, soft at the start, held things up, particularly the attempted combination of the Bobs, who were trying hard to get going in pairs and trios. Against their heavier opponents and with ice conditions as they were, this type of play was gradually forced into the discard and the last two sessions brought out a lot of individual effort.

Brennan was the first to draw a rest within five minutes after the opening of hostilities, Read having been brought down after an attempted invasion of the railroaders' territory. Even consistent back-checking was forgotten at this stage, and as a result, end-to-end rushes gave the two goalies the first real chance to show their wares.

The forward lines, doing most of the work, failed to get in any organized attack, but as individuals, Johnstone, the Bob's recruit from Fenelon Falls, and Wright, the visitors' right winger, gave the fans plenty to yell for. In fact, the above two players stood out throughout the entire game.

The First Goal.

Ten minutes of heavy going and no relief in sight—then came the first break. A rush by two of the railroaders was partly blocked but the Caygeonites cleared slowly, a loose puck was picked up by Brennan and before Nichols quite realized what was happening, the rubber hit the twine on the inside. For the next ten minutes both aggregations caused the fans considerable merriment with the homesters trying hard to even the count. A rolling puck is hard to control, however, and passes went astray. The solo boys fared little better and the session ended without further register.

Second Period.

As in the previous stanza, the visitors went down to shoot first but Ken. Read and his henchmen had done considerable plotting in the intermission and they came back strong with a rush that gave them two hard shots on Armstrong. That gentleman was quite prepared and the man with the flag had no occasion to raise it—for the present, at least.

Barney Quinn, the Havelock defence mogul, got in some heavy checking here and for the first time drew forth the wrath of the home town rooters. His team found difficulty in breaking away and only hard luck combined with inexperience while within shooting range, kept their attackers from counting. A tendency to hog the rubber was also quite noticeable on the part of the Bobs. Otherwise they worked hard and were given plenty of encouragement from the railbirds.

During the seige, C. Armstrong drew a penalty for tripping Laing, and while he was warming the bench, Wright took a long heave. Laing, skating in fast, grabbed the rebound and raised his team's total to two. Quinn handed Wright a mean bump and went to the fence for his efforts, and his intended victim had no less than three shots while the big defenceman looked on. 'Caygeon put four men up but to no avail, and Wright beat Nichols with a long drive. The score now stood 3-0. Three minutes later Nichols made the mistake of his life when he banged the rubber way down the ice. Barney promptly returned the compliment, with the result that the Bobs' goalie was caught cold. It was the final score of the game and the homesters left the ice with a four-goal handicap to face in the final session.

Third Period

Though there was not a single counter in the last period, and though the ice was very sloppy, the fans witnessed the fastest brand of hockey dished up all evening. The C.P.R. boys were out for more and their opposition was making a final effort to ward off the calsomine brush. Pile-ups were frequent and five penalties were imposed by Referee Bill Jackson, three of them going to the Bobs. Johnstone, shifted from the line to the defence, teamed up well with Read, while Kelson and Lorne Wright did the hornet stuff up in front. Brennan, Laing, Rothwell and Wright balanced them, and their only real approach to a counter was Hill's shot that beat Armstrong. Hill was offside at the time and the goal was disallowed.

Both outfits tired in the last ten minutes and the Bobs' chance of staying in the running in their first O.H.A. year faded out with the time keeper's bell.

The teams:

Havelock.—Goal, Armstrong; defence, Quinn and Hooper; centre, Jack; wings, Brennan and Wright; subs, Rothwell and Laing.

Bobcaygeon.—Goal, Nichols; defence, Read and Armstrong; centre, Johnstone; wings, L. Wright and Hill; subs, Daniels and Nichols.

Referee—Bill Jackson of Peterborough.

Ex-Pugilist Found Guilty of Robbery

MONTREAL, Que., January 18 (Canadian Press). — "Kid" Marshall, a one-time professional pugilist, was found guilty yesterday of being one of three people who held up the Capitol Jewellers, Limited, on August 6 last. Sentence will be imposed on January 19.

The thieves escaped with $40,000 worth of diamonds and other valuables.

On August 6, a man and a woman walked into the jewellery store. They asked to be shown some diamonds. As the clerk brought out a tray of diamonds he was ordered to "stick 'em up." A third accomplice entered and brandishing a revolver assisted in the hold-up. A second attendant was backed against the wall. The trio then scooped up $40,000 worth of loot and escaped in a high-powered car.

The erstwhile pugilist was arrested shortly after the robbery.

ANEMIA NOT CAUSED BY LACK OF SPINACH

Pernicious, or primary anemia is really quite rare, but so many people have a fear of this disease that it is well to make a study of it, and understand the cause and the possibilities of a cure.

As I so often tell you in this column, the primary source of most diseases lies in a polluted blood stream, which is full of toxins developed through wrong habits of living. The one with rheumatism is he who has developed the rheumatic toxemia; one with diabetes is suffering from faulty metabolism caused by the diabetic toxemia, and so on.

In spire of all the nonsense written about anemia, and the claims made that the cause is unknown, I can assure you that this disease is not so mysterious. And, although we have not isolated and named the poison which produces it, we nevertheless know that anemia is due to a definite toxicosis, and that most patients can be cured through the simple plan of entirely eliminating ALL disease toxins from the body. This gets rid of the anemia toxins, even though we do not know them by any other name.

In the first place, pernicious anemia is not produced because the one who is ill has not eaten enough of the iron-bearing foods.

Before developing anemia the patient has probably eaten much the same foods as other members of the family, and after he is told that he is anemic he has doubtless consumed large quantities of spinach, steak, and iron which his blood seems to need. even liver, to try to supply organic

The fault with the anemic patient is that no matter how much iron or other mineral-carrying food he uses, it is either destroyed before it reaches the red corpuscles, or the red cells are themselves destroyed by the systemic toxicosis which exists in his body, and which is not caused by a lack of mineral elements. It seems that the more food he feeds into his body the more red cells are destroyed. It does not take a sage to understand that something in the body is destroying these cells, and all the investigation of our physiologists has failed to disclose any special place in the body where these cells are killed off. Some scientists have tried to pin the trouble on the spleen, and others to the marrow of the bones, in which place it is thought the red cells are formed. Many positive statements have been made, but each one has been refuted by some other investigator.

No better explanation will ever be offered than the one I am giving you, and that is, there are some people who have the tendency to the anemic toxemia just the same as others are inclined toward rheumatism; and anemia, the same as rheumatism or any other disorder caused by toxemia, can be cured by a thorough bodily housecleaning, and afterwards prevented by the patient using more care in regard to his eating, exercising, breathing and thinking.

The one with anemia is concerned first with a cure, and after this has been effected he does not have to be very strongly encouraged to live with good habits.

Questions and Answers.

Question: J. J. J. writes: "For some time I have been troubled with a swelling at the corner of my left eye. When I press at the side or under it there is a discharge which seems to come from a pinpoint of an opening in my lower lid just as though there was a hair out. I have very little pain from it, but I would like to know if you could tell me what to do, as I am afraid it might cause some disease of the bone of my cheek or nose."

Answer: It would be wise for you to consult an oculist and have him give his opinion about the cause of your trouble. If the treatment which he suggests does not help, write me again, giving me his diagnosis and I will make whatever suggestions I think best.

Question: Mrs. R. D. W. writes: "Have been reading your articles and am very much interested in them. I would like a list of non-starchy vegetables printed."

Answer: Practically all vegetables are non-starchy except potatoes and Hubbard squash. Here is a list of those I consider best to use both raw and cooked: Celery, spinach, small string beans, asparagus, summer squash, cucumber, egg plant, beet tops, turnip tops, small beets, small carrots, small parsnips, pumpkin, lettuce, okra, chayotes, oyster plant, mallow, kale, zucchini, parsley, endive, alligator pear and ripe olives.

Question: Mrs. F. A. S. writes: "Please advise me what to do with a child that holds its breath till it is black in the face and lifeless—what causes this condition?"

Answer: When a child cries so hard that it holds its breath for a long time it is usually because it suffers from periodic attacks of indigestion, due to wrong feeding. He is frantic to tell you about it, and probably loses his temper because he cannot properly express himself. The shock from the application of a cold towel over the body is a good cure for this habit.

Uncle Wiggily

By HOWARD R. GARIS

To-day's Bedtime Story

(Copyright, 1927, McClure Syndicate.)

UNCLE WIGGILY AND PEETIES FIFE

Uncle Butter, who was a goat gentleman friend of Uncle Wiggily, pranced over to the rabbit's hollow stump bungalow one day when it wasn't very cold, and asked Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy where Mr. Longears had gone.

"He hasn't gone anywhere," answered the muskrat lady housekeeper.

"Then I'm just in time," bleated Uncle Butter. "I want to see him on very important business."

"Come in, please," invited Mrs. Longears, who had hopped to the door to see who was talking. "Wig is up in the bathroom shaving. I'll call him down."

And when Uncle Wiggily, rubbing the talcum powder off the end of his pink, twinkling nose, hopped into the room where Uncle Butter was sitting, the goat exclaimed:

"I'm getting up a parade. Will you take part in it?"

"What kind of a parade?" asked Uncle Wiggily, at the same time wondering whether his red trousers would need cleaning or if he could put them on back to the front so the spots wouldn't show. The spots were made at a Fourth of July picnic when Baby Bunty spilled her ice-cream cone in Uncle Wiggily's lap. "What parade are you speaking of?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"Blow louder, Peetie!" bleated Uncle Butter.

"Oh, a parade I thought it would be nice to get up to see the Old Year out and the New Year in," bleated Uncle Butter. "You know the year 1927 comes to an end at midnight on Saturday. And, right after that, the new year of 1928 begins. I thought, seeing that all the children are home from school for Christmas week, that we should have a parade."

"That's a fine idea!" exclaimed Uncle Wiggily, joyfully twinkling his pink nose. "I'll help! I'll parade."

"But we must have some music!" said the goat, "A parade without music for the march would be like eating apple pie without a bit of cheese, I think."

"I think the same," agreed Uncle Wiggily. "And I know where we can get fine music for nothing."

"Where?"

"Jackie and Peetie Bow Wow have a drum and fife," answered Mr. Longears. "They were Christmas presents. Jackie's drum was stuffed with acorns yesterday by a Blue Jay bird, but I emptied them out so it's all right now. As for Peetie's fife—"

"That can't be stuffed with acorns, can it?" asked Uncle Butter, begging Uncle Wiggily's pardon for interrupting him.

"No, I think not," replied the rabbit gentleman. "And now let's go ask Jackie and Peetie to play music for the parade march to celebrate the going of the Old Year and the coming of the New Year."

"Hurray!" bleated Uncle Butter just as if the parade had already started. So he and Uncle Wiggily hurried to the dog kennel house. But, no sooner had they reached it than they heard Peetie barking loudly.

"Sounds as if something had happened!" bleated Uncle Butter.

"Right you are!" agreed Uncle Wiggily. A moment later Peetie, the little dog brother of Jackie, came running around the corner of the kennel, his cheeks all puffed up like balloons and with the Christmas fife in his mouth.

"Blow louder, Peetie," bleated Uncle Butter, "I can't hear you!"

"Can't you see he is blowing?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"Well, he isn't making any noise," objected the goat. "Or else I'm getting deaf, I can't hear any music! Oh, I wonder if I'm getting deaf?"

"No! You can hear all right!" barked Peetie. "But there's something the matter with my fife. No matter how much I blow in it no tooting comes out. See if you can fix it, Unkie Wig!"

The rabbit gentlemen looked at Peetie's Christmas fife and, all of a sudden Uncle Wiggily laughed.

"No wonder you couldn't blow it!" he chuckled. "The fife is filled with ice. Did you put the ice in your fife?"

"No, Unkie Wig. I did that!" said Baby Bunty, the little orphan rabbit girl who was visiting Mrs. Bow Wow. "I poured some water in Peetie's fife to see the water run out of the holes and—and—"

"And the water froze into ice inside of Peetie's fife," laughed Uncle Wiggily. "But that is easily fixed. So he took the fife in the warm house and in no time at all the ice thawed and Peetie could blow music (if you call it that) out of the holes.

"Now we can have our parade," bleated Uncle Butter, for Jackie's drum had been freed of acorns. And while Mr. Longears and the goat are getting ready for the New Year's parade I'll be thinking up another story for you.

THEATRES

AT THE REGENT.

MADGE BELLAMY STARRED AS DEMURE HEROINE.

Now Playing at the Regent.

One thing about "Colleen," Frank O'Connor's first production for Fox Films, it has all the authentic Irish atmosphere a picture can possibly attain.

O'Connor saw to that and since he was born in Dublin and travelled widely in the rural districts of Ireland he made a good job of the background.

Many of the quaint Irish customs, which anyone who has ever read about or visited the "ould country" knows, are shown in the picture. O'Connor personally directed all the types of the atmospheric characters, and has supervised the building of the various "props." His cast is typical. Most of them can find a trace of the gaelic in their family tree.

"Colleen" is a story of Irish hearts and Irish fortunes and Irish horses. Madge Bellamy is cast as demure Sheila Kelly, owner of the pedigreed race horse Nora, and the daughter of a wealthy Irish landholder. She is in love with Terrance O'Flynn, the last of an impecunious, though noble Irish family, owner of "Colleen," Nora's only rival on the Irish turf.

The O'Flynn's try to recoup their family fortunes in America by entering Colleen in the international sweepstakes. The Kellys, on discovering that their fortunes are also wiped out decide to enter Nora in the race. From this point the story develops into a fight between the two families with the love of Sheila and Terrance in the balance.

Terrance, at the last minute, "throws" the race to Nora but the family groups divide the purse.

Charles Morton plays opposite Miss Bellamy in the role of Terrance O'Flynn, with J. Farrell Macdonald as his father. Tom Maguire is cast as the small but important father of Miss Bellamy.

Others in this well chosen cast are Ted McNamara, as the Irish groom; Sammy Cohen, as the pawnbroker's son; Marjorie Beebe, as Kitty the maid, and Sarah Padden as a policeman's wife. Tom Maguire, Sidney Franklin and Carl Stockdale also have important roles.

Mrs. Herbert Pulitzer of New York is the latest American woman to acquire a racing stable.

Thirty-two of the Army-in-India team's polo ponies have been sold at auction in New York for over $100,000.

WINDSOR TIES NIAGARA FALLS

Detroit Olympics Defeat London 2-0 in Hard Fought Battle.

KITCHENER WINS.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Jan. 19.—Niagara Falls celebrated their sixth tie game of the Canadian League season here last night when they finished deadlocked 1 to 1 in an overtime game at Windsor. The game was fast in spots, though not as thrilling as some of the recent contests here. The visitors had a little edge on the play for the second period and for the greater part of the third frame, though the locals were just as effective in the pinches.

LONDON LOSES.

LONDON, Ont., Jan. 19.— Detroit Olympics defeated London by 2 to 0 in a hard fought Canadian League game played before a good crowd of spectators at the London Arena last night. While the Londoners provided stubborn opposition, they failed to shake their losing jinx and dropped their eighth consecutive start. Morrison, former London player, scored Detroit's first goal in the opening period, while Bobby Connors registered the second counter in the dying seconds of the game.

KITCHENER WINS.

KITCHENER, Jan. 19.— Stratford struck a snag here last night in its meteoric climb in the Canadian League, when Kitchener, fighting to retain first place, gave it a 3 to 1 beating at the Auditorium. The Kitchener victory terminated Stratford's winning streak of five, and kept the locals out in front.

WHITBY WINS HOME GAME 3-0

Junior Petes Shut Out in O. H. A. Match Played on Soft Ice.

PLAYERS WORK HARD.

WHITBY, Jan. 19.—Playing an almost invincible game here last night, Whitby juniors subdued Peterborough H. C. to the tune of a 3 to 0 whitewash. The game was at times indicative of good hockey, although both teams were hampered in their efforts to play combination by the terribly soft ice. Mild weather has made the ice at the local rink this winter in a very bad condition and on only one occasion this year has the local club had an opportunity to oppose teams at home on fairly good surface.

The game, while not as good an exhibition, according to those who witnessed it, as that played in Peterborough recently, was productive of good hockey. For Peterborough, Calladine, Kenneally and Jones were the outstanding players, while Lebarr, Mein in goal, and Allin, also showed up well. Whitby shone with J. Sleightholme and Tucker, the former doing exceptionally good. He certainly likes soft ice.

While he was outscored 3 to 0, the fault of the loss does not lie in the path of Mein. That goalie displayed a wonderful exhibition of watching the citadel last night, but he did not receive the support necessary to keep away the Whiteby goal getters. J. away the Whitby goal getters. J. Sleightholme and Tucker were getting two and the latter one.

The teams:

Peterborough—Goal, Mein; defence, Calladine and Lebarr; centre, Jones; wings, Kenneally and Allin. Subs, Hatton and White.

Whitby—Goal, Clark; defence, Lavin and Tucker; centre, S. Sleightholm; forwards, E. Sleightholme and E. Mowbry. Subs, Long and Sturgess.

CHAPTER IV.

The two rooms had apparently been thoroughly ransacked. Clothes and various articles were strewn about the floor. The doors of both clothes-closets (there was one in each room) were open, and to judge from the chaos in the bedroom closet, it had been hurriedly searched; although the closet off of the living-room, which was given over to the storage of infrequently used items, appeared to have been ignored.

The drawers of the dressing-table and chest had been partly emptied onto the floor, and the bedclothes had been snatched away and the mattress turned back. Two chairs and a small occasional table were upset; several vases were broken, as if they had been searched and then thrown down in the wrath of disappointment; and the Marie Antoinette mirror had been broken.

The escritoire was open, and its pigeonholes had been emptied in a jumbled pile upon the blotter. The doors of the Boule cabinet swung wide, and inside there was the same confusion of contents that marked the interior of the escritoire. The bronze-and-porcelain lamp on the end of the library table was lying on its side, its satin shade torn where it had struck the sharp corner of a silver bonbonniere.

Two objects in the general disarray particularly attracted my attention—a black metal document box of the kind purchasable at any stationery store, and a large jewel case of sheet steel with a circular inset lock. The latter of these objects was destined to play a curious and sinister part in the investigation to follow.

The document box, which was now empty, had been placed on the library table, next to the over-turned lamp. Its lid was thrown back, and the key was still in the lock. In all the litter and disorganization of the room, this box seemed to be the outstanding indication of calm and orderly activity on the part of the wrecker.

The jewel-case, on the other hand, had been violently wrenched open. It sat on the dressing table in the bedroom, dinted and twisted out of shape by the terrific leverage that had been necessary to force it, and beside it lay a brass-handled, cast-iron poker which had evidently been brought from the living-room and used as a make-shift chisel with which to pry open the lock.

Vance had glanced but casually at the different objects in the rooms as we made our rounds, but when he came to the dressing-table he paused abruptly. Taking out his monocle he adjusted it carefully and leaned over the broken jewel-case.

"Most extr'ordin'ry!" he murmured, tapping the edge of the lid with his gold pencil. "What do you make of that, Sergeant?"

Heath had been eyeing Vance with narrowed lids as the latter bent over the dressing-table.

"What's in your mind, Mr. Vance?" he, in turn asked.

"Oh, more than you could ever guess," Vance answered lightly. "But just at the moment I was toying with the idea that this steel case was never torn open by that wholly inadequate iron poker, what?"

Heath nodded his head approvingly. "So you, too, noticed that, did you? . . . And you're dead right. That poker might've twisted the box a little, but it never snapped that lock."

He turned to Inspector Moran. "That's the puzzler I've sent for 'Prof.' Breener to clean up—if he can. The jimmying of that jewel-case looks to me like a high-class professional job. No Sunday school superintendent did it."

Vance continued for a while to study the box, but at length he turned away with a perplexed frown.

"I say!" he commented. "Something devilish queer took place here last night."

"Oh, not so queer," Heath amended. "It was a thorough job, all right, but there's nothing mysterious about it."

Vance polished his monocle and put it away.

"If you go to work on that basis, Sergeant," he returned carelessly, "I greatly fear you'll run aground on a reef. And may kind Heaven bring you safe to shore!"

(Tuesday, Sept. 11; 9:30 a.m.)

A few minutes after we had returned to the living room Doctor Doremus, the chief medical examiner, arrived, jaunty and energetic. Immediately in his train came three other men, one of whom carried a bulky camera and a folded tripod. These were Captain Dubois and Detective Bellamy, fingerprint experts, and Peter Quackenbush, the official photographer.

"Well, well, well!" exclaimed Doctor Doremus. "Quite a gathering of the clans. More trouble, eh? . . . I wish your friends, Inspector, would choose a more respectable hour for their little differences. This early rising upsets my liver."

He shook hands with everybody in a brisk, businesslike manner.

"Where's the body?" he demanded breezily, looking about the room. He caught sight of the girl on the davenport. "Ah! A lady."

Stepping quickly forward, he made a rapid examination of the dead girl, scrutinizing her neck and fingers, moving her arms and head to determine the condition of rigor mortis, and finally unflexing her stiffened limbs and laying her out straight on the long cushions, preparatory to a more detailed necropsy.

The rest of us moved toward the bedroom, and Heath motioned to the finger-print men to follow.

"Go over everything," he told them. "But take a special look at this jewel-case and the handle of this poker, and give that document-box in the other room a close-up-and-down."

"Right," assented Captain Dubois. "We'll begin in here while the doc's busy in the other room." And he and Bellamy set to work.

Our interest naturally centered on the captain's labors. For fully five minutes we watched him inspecting the twisted steel sides of the jewel-case and the smooth, polished handle of the poker. He held the objects gingerly by their edges, and, placing a jeweler's glass in his eye, flashed his pocket-light on every square inch of them. At length he put them down, scowling.

"No finger-prints here," he announced. "Wiped clean."

"I mighta known it," grumbled Heath. "It was a professional job, all right." He turned to the other expert. "Found anything, Bellamy?"

"Nothing to help," was the grumpy reply. "A few old smears with dust over 'em."

"Looks like a washout," Heath commented irritably; "though I'm hoping for something in the other room.

At this moment Doctor Doremus came into the bedroom and, taking a sheet from the bed, returned to the davenport and covered the body of the murdered girl. Then he snapped shut his case, and putting on his hat at a rakish angle, stepped forward with the air of a man in great haste to be on his way.

"Simple case of strangulation from behind," he said, his words running together. "Digital bruises about the front of the throat; thumb bruises in the sub-occipital region. Attack must have been unexpected. A quick, competent job, though deceased evidently battled a little."

"How do you suppose her dress became torn, doctor?" asked Vance.

"Oh, that? Can't tell. She may have done it herself—instinctive motions of clutching for air."

"Not likely though, what?"

"Why not? The dress was torn and the bouquet was ripped off, and the fellow who was choking her had both hands on her throat. Who else could've done it?"

Vance shrugged his shoulders and began lighting a cigaret.

Heath, annoyed by his apparently inconsequential interruption, put the next question.

"Don't those marks on the fingers mean that her rings were stripped off?"

"Possibly. They're fresh abrasions. Also, there's a couple of lacerations on the left wrist and slight contusions on the thenar eminence, indicating that a bracelet may have been forcibly pulled over her hand."

"That fits O. K.," pronounced Heath, with satisfaction. "And it looks like they snatched a pendant of some kind off her neck."

"Probably," indifferently agreed Doctor Doremus. "The piece of chain had cut into her flesh a little behind the right shoulder."

"And the time?"

"Nine or ten hours ago. Say, about eleven-thirty—maybe a little before. Not after midnight, anyway." He had been teetering restlessly on his toes. "Anything else?"

FAMOUS LOVE ROMANCES — Dante and Beatrice (IV) — By Nicholas Afonsky

Dante, to try to explain his position to Beatrice, wrote a song for her in which he sought to tell her the truth in a subtle, hidden way. He sent it to her, but apparently she took no notice of it. And a little later, when her father died, he wrote her another poem, of sympathy at her bereavement. But he had no answer.

One day at a wedding banquet Dante says he suddenly felt a "faintness and a throbbing" at his left side which soon took possession of his whole body. So weak was he that he fell back against a painting that ran around the wall. The cause of the faintness was the entrance of Beatrice into the room.

After this no cause on Dante's part could keep the knowledge of his hopeless passion from his friends. Some of them jested with him at his love-lorn appearance. Some sympathized. Then he fell ill, and for long lay desperately weak dreaming of Beatrice, who never seemed to him far from him in spirit.

He had a vision, while ill, of the death of Beatrice. And not long afterward, while he was working over a long poem celebrating her beauty and virtue, she died. "The Lord God of Justice called my most gracious Lady to himself," wrote Dante. Thereafter he called her the bride of his soul. She was just twenty-five.

Delegates to the Branch meeting in Lindsay, were appointed as follows:

Mrs. MacFarlane, Keene, Ont., and Mrs. Johnson Springville, Ont.

The consecration hymn "Take My Life and Let it Be," was sung and the benediction pronounced.

A delightful lunch was served to the delegates by the ladies of the W.M.S. of St. Andrew's United Church, in the Sunday school parlors.

Branch President Speaks.

The Presbyterial Program Committee was fortunate in securing Mrs. J. F. Daley, of Port Hope, president of the Bay of Quinte Branch. In addressing the delegates, Mrs. Daley said it was a real pleasure to attend this meeting. She was proud of the record of the Lindsay Presbyterial, and as had been voiced by many others, she, too, regretted that the Presbyterial was to be divided. In order that the W.M.S. territories should correspond with that of the Presbyteries it was found expedient to make the change, which adds two new Presbyterials in the branch, making seven in all. In the smaller Presbyterials the officers will be enabled to come into closer touch with the auxiliaries. She said if the happy fellowship that had existed in the past is carried into the new work, it is assured of success.

The message left with her hearers was embodied in three impressions remaining from the Dominion Board meeting. First was the stupendous amount of work devolving upon the executive. The Board decides all difficult questions, leaving the Presbyterials, Auxiliaries, Circles, and Bands free for the actual carrying out of the work. They deal with all re-adjustments, working out of new methods, requiring much study and thought, solving the many financial problems, caring for the missionary both in service and on furlough, and many details the various branches do not have to deal with. Mrs. Jolliff of Kingston is the candidate secretary and one of the many ways in which the individual Auxiliary can assist the Dominion Board is to report any possible candidate for mission work, either in one of the foreign fields or at home.

The W.M.S. workers are in no way rivals of the work of the General Missionary Society, but rather helpmates in all their efforts.

The study of the annual report, filled with knowledge of the whole W. M.S. scheme, was urged for the Auxiliary members. At the same time, in the reports from the missionaries in this book, there are a great many details lacking. Only the optimistic side is reported. They never dwell upon the dark side or the handicaps which assail them along the way. However, these details have been received from the deputation sent out to view the situation, and there is a great need on all sides for more workers, more nurses, doctors, and missionaries.

The need in China is for sympathy, interest and prayer, money and most of all for missionaries to go out at once. There are also appeals for new workers in British Columbia, where in one settlement of Doukhobors there is no registration of births, marriages, or deaths. Schools are burned down. In 100 school districts in Alberta there is no religious service being held, excepting in two or three, where school teachers were trying to do something in this line. All honor to these school teachers. None of these many calls for help can be granted for lack of money, and it is the responsibility of the Auxiliaries to provide this money, and they can only do this by keeping pace with their allocations. Unless this is done there can be no growth in the liberality or vision of the members.

To win every member of the church for the W.M.S. a missionary spirit must be developed. There must be prayer and more prayer. To this intent a prayer circle has been instituted, where prayer is offered for the work every day by every member, at the twilight hour.

A circulating library has also been established. Reading necessary literature brings knowledge, and knowledge inspires interest.

In closing, Mrs. Daley urged that W.M.S. seek to cultivate a higher standard of giving. "Pray for the spiritual life of our members and a fresh outpouring of the Holy Spirit," she exhorted the members.

Evening Session.

Rev. J. W. Gordon, pastor of St. Andrew's United Church, presided at the open evening session on Tuesday with Scripture lesson taken from Isaiah 35, and prayer. The congregational singing throughout was ably led by the choir and the organist of St. Andrew's Church. The pastor again welcomed the delegates and introduced the two speakers of the evening, Mrs. R. G. Lawlor, B.A., and Miss Shipley, missionary, paying high tribute to their endeavrs in W.M.S. and to the ends that had been accomplished.

Rev. Mr. Gordon then introduced His Worship Mayor Denne, who brought greetings from the city and the City Council, welcoming the delegates to the wonderful city of Peterborough, and assuring them that everything in his power would be done for the comfort and happiness of the guests during their stay. The convention was especially honored by the Mayor, as this was the first time he had appeared in this capacity since his inauguration.

Greetings were also sent from the Peterborough Presbytery, presented by their chairman, Rev. J. E. Todd, who said it was a pleasure to greet the youngest Presbyterial in the conference. He congratulated the ladies on their work, and assured them of the hearty support and confidence of the brethren of Presbytery. Rev. Mr. Todd said that union was not yet consummated, but was simply in the act. The work of carrying on the great United Church was a privilege and responsibility, and that there never was a day in the history of the church when such an opportunity had been given. He trusted that this would continue through the years to come, and that the members would never lose the thrill received at the inaugural of the great United Church of Canada.

Their little clothes must be changed constantly

Children have such pretty clothes today . . . how do mothers do it! An active child can soil two dresses a day without half trying, and as for boys—!

But wise mothers know that Jane's dress and Johnny's rompers can make their frequent trips to the tub, UNDAMAGED—if Surprise Soap goes too.

CERTAINTY of Safety is what you want. That's why Surprise Soap is the leading laundry soap of Canada. For over forty years it has proved that it cleanses thoroughly, yet is pure, mild—and safe.

DISTRICT CHURCHES.

TRENT RIVER UNITED CHURCH

TRENT RIVER, Jan. 19.—At the United Church on Sunday, the pastor, the Rev. W. R. Archer, took for his text Matthew 5 1 and 2—the sermon on the Mount. "Jesus came to establish a kingdom," he said. "God never loses his right to control nor forgets his children. We are children of God!—the characteristics of which are meekness and mercifulness. These are some of the qualities and characteristics of good citizens. There is a standard in Christian living. Belief isn't all but he that doe h righteousness. Some men say the believe the same as their forefather.—we want faith that is fed by the living word of God.

"The saving qualities are in keeping the body pure. Some men say they don't believe in going to church and that they consider themselves a lot better than some of the church members. The King's treasury is Heaven; lay up treasures in Heaven, the King's bank," the minister continued.

"Ye cannot serve two masters; undivided service is required. Love to God is shown by loving our neighbors as ourselves, and observe the 'Golden Rule,' watching like the Boy Scouts, to do something for some one each day. By their fruits ye shall know them.

"What is the fruit of our lives? To judge is to condemn. We may see good fruits of others' lives. There are two ways, the highway of holiness by the straight and narrow way, and the broad way, which leads to death, the way of the careless and prayerless.

"The King's subject may petition the throne in prayer. People do not realize it. Why should we be urged when we have such a wonderful privilege?

"There is the secret prayer and the model prayer, or the Lord's prayer—Have we been seeking success or money? Let us think what it would mean to be left out of the kingdom? The master builder has a good foundation. The wise man builds on a rock. Let us build on a foundation that will stay the test of years. Let us have the enduring powers of life."

During the service, ballots were distributed for annual election of the Board of Session, composed of five elders and the Board of Management composed of twelve Stewards. The ballots are not to be counted till January 30.

SPRINGVILLE UNITED CHURCH

SPRINGVILLE, Jan. 19.—The regular morning service was held on Sunday, January 15th, in Springville United church, with the pastor, Rev. A. H. McConnachie in charge.

The Scripture reading was read from Psalm 27. The children's text from the Lord's Prayer, "Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil," was explained.

"Jesus acknowledges that we are all subject to temptation. We therefore need daily help and daily forgiveness from our Heavenly Father.

"The question is likely to arise, especially in the mind of the child, 'Does God ever lead us into temptation?' It may be of some help in answering that question to know that the word, temptation has different shades of meaning. It may mean, 'trial for our own good,' or it may mean 'enticement' especially to evil.

"God never entices anyone to sin, but He may permit us to be led that way. He appoints trials for us all that we may be tested and proved, When we pray this petition of the Lord's Prayer we therefore mean—'Suffer not to be tried overmuch, or to be seduced by evil.' Jesus, Himself, was tried when in the wilderness when He was tempted by the Devil, and again in the garden of Gethsemane.

"If God permits trial He will sustain us, but if we wilfully bring trial upon ourselves there is no promise that He will sustain us.

"'But deliver us from evil,' and from the evil one. This is the second part of the petition. There is evil in the world going about like a hungry lion, seeking to devour us. Trial and temptation are real. We cannot escape from those, but we must pray that we may not be overcome in the hour of trial."

This discourse was followed by the children's hymn—"Yield not to temptation."

Mr. B. Preston rendered a beautiful solo, "Only a Smile."

The morning text was taken from Psalm 27, verse 14—"Wait on the Lord be of good courage, and he shall strengthen thine heart wait, I say, on the Lord."

"Some moral qualities called virtues are not very highly appreciated. Gentleness, meekness, honesty, sobriety and truthfulness are sterling qualities, but are too lightly esteemed because they do not parade themselves. Gentleness in a mother is under-rated. She effaces herself, practising self-sacrifice for her children, but the mass passes such a virtue by as a common thing. Meekness in olden times was a sign of cowardliness and weakness and even in modern times is not praised enough.

"Courage, bravery, valour, etc., are admired by all, especially by the children. The story of William Wallace or Bruce always excites interest in history and now the story of Lindbergh enraptures the children. Courage is a great virtue needed at all times in all places and all circumstances, even in the lowly places of life. The woman in the home is really a heroine who, year in and year out, tries to make ends meet with little with which to carry on her work. She is unobtrusive in the home life, needed in time of sickness or trouble, as no other person. Some people have never known real sickness or trouble, but have magnified their petty needs until they think they are troubles. Courage is so necessary to the human life as daily bread. If preserves all other virtues, and is as a great bracelet binding them together and making them stronger. Just as evil becomes easier with repetition so Christian virtues become easier as practised day by day.

"Courage is not the absence of fear, but the conquest of fear when the cost is counted. One great secret of courage is self-forgetfulness. A mother forgets even her own necessities and is brave for the sake of her children. The sense of God makes for courageousness. Jesus was sensitive to the touch of His Heavenly Father. He went to Jerusalem, knowing that the crown of thorns and the cross awaited Him, but He knew that God was with Him, so He feared not.

"The modern man has need of moral courage to make a mark on the times. To them that hath shall be given. If we have a strong desire to be like Jesus we will not fall low. We are told to 'wait on the Lord, be of good courage, and he shall strengthen thine heart?"

A story that depicts wonderful courage was told of the death of four brave men. Captain Scott and his three companions after discovering the South pole were overtaken by a great blizzard and became hopelessly lost. Their fragile tent was drifted over with snow, their food and fuel supplies were exhausted, and they knew they must die of starvation and cold. One of these brave men slipped away in the snow-covered country to die by himself and thus leave more for the others. Captain Scott, before he died, wrote a letter to Sir James Barry, which was afterwards found and delivered, telling of their hopeless condition. It was a letter of farewell telling of the surety of approaching death, and the desperate state they were in, with feet frozen and food gone, but asking that his friend would think well of the end. He writes that it would do one's heart good to be in their tent to hear their songs and cheery conversation. They had intended to end their own lives, but finally decided to die a natural death. The last of the letter becomes rambling as the strength of Captain Scott is ebbing away.

The courage of Paul singing with his feet fast in prison stocks was also pictured.

"We complain about our trifling troubles and sorrows. What are they in comparison to the previous stories of suffering? We need courage if we are to do a man's work.

"Let us be of good courage and God shall strengthen us."

MILD WEATHER DELAYS FARMERS

Absence of Snow Handicaps Farmers in Winter's Work.

BURNBRAE, Jan. 19.—Local farmers have been badly handicapped in their regular winter occupations by the absence of snow during the last three weeks. The more recent snow flurries and zero weather may mean that sleighing of a sort will be provided for the hauling of wood, logs, feed, coal, and the various other things which a farmer requires good sleighing for. Due to the very soft condition of the swamps, practically no low-land wood-cutting has been done, and consequently a great deal of this work is to be done if the proper weather sets in. While an open winter may be fine for the city dweller and all right in theory for those in the country, it does work a great hardship in loss of time and money on the farmer who depends on his swamp wood-lot for fuel, and perhaps a few cords of saleable wood to relieve the pressure of the grocery bills.

Then, there are many jobs of heavy teaming to be done which are only possible on good winter roads, as an ordinary team can draw on good sleighing a load that would stick the best horses on a waggon. A few farmers were in the fortunate position to take advantage of the few days' sleighing before Christmas and profited thereby to the extent that they can sit back and sympathize with their less fortunate neighbors.

Bailieboro

BAILIEBORO, Jan. 19.—Messrs. Fred Barnard, Keith Barnard, Herbert Dean and Charles Barnard have been attending the United Church Winter School which was held at Cobourg during the past week.

Mr. R. Johnston of Peterboro spent Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Johnston, of Bailieboro.

The Cavan and South Monaghan shipping board will hold their annual oyster supper in the S.S. Hall, Centreville, on Friday, January 20.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 18.—(Canadian Press).—Five children were tossed out of windows into the arms of firemen and a woman jumped from a second storey window to the street when fire, which started in a baby carriage in an apartment hallway yesterday, drove eighteen families from their home. Two women were carried down ladders and a fireman, engaged in rescue work, was overcome by smoke. Mrs. P. Peterson, trapped by the flames, jumped from a window to the sidewalk and was badly injured.

TO-NIGHT'S GAME IS POSTPONED

Lindsay and St. John's Will Likely Play Early Next Week.

Owing to the soft ice the Junior game between Lindsay and St. John's scheduled for Brock Street Rink to-night has been postponed indefinitely. If colder weather comes, it will be played early next week. The St. John's management believed the fans would appreciate a chance to see the Junior battle decided on good ice and accordingly arranged the postponement as the conditions prevailing to-day would certainly not be conducive to good hockey.

HAMLET SUBJECT OF FINE LECTURE

Dr. Pratt Gives Second of Series of Addresses on Shakespeare.

The second of the series of Shakespearian lectures was given by Dr. E. J. Pratt, of Victoria University, Toronto, in the green room of the Y.W.C.A., last evening, the speaker choosing "Hamlet" as his subject and progressing through the first act.

The president of the Y.W.C.A., Miss Margaret Hamilton, was in the chair, and announced the musical numbers, which consisted of an instrumental solo Brahms' "Cradle Song," played by Miss Agnes Logan, and two vocal numbers sung by Mr. M. H. Park and taken from "Twelfth Night;" "Come Away, Death," and "O Mistress Mine."

Dr. Pratt's exposition of "Hamlet" was illustrated by quotations from the play and opened with a reference to the intense interest in the first scene in the appearance of the ghost, acting as a forewarning of some grave national crisis impending. Later, Shakespeare makes the scepticism of Horatio contribute to the dramatic effect of the ghostly apparition, because of his scholarly, unbelieving attitude, whose later conversion to belief makes the affair all the more convincing to the multitude.

The tragic atmosphere created in this play is accompanied by examples of matchless poetry and lightened by the touches of irony, both delicate and gloomy, which appear from time to time. One of the most tragic moments of the play according to Dr. Pratt, is in the brief episode in which Hamlet stands up and agrees with his mother, who has glibly chided him for his attitude toward his father's death, and assures him that "All that lives must die—death is common to all." Hamlet's response: "Aye, madam, 'tis common," is one of the monosyllabic, pithy and profound utterances in which Shakespeare's plays abound, and is uttered in an acquiescence due to utter despondence and lack of energy to dispute her words or combat the mental atmosphere which created them.

In Hamlet's first soliloquy is an illustration of the advance in the medium of blank verse made in this play by the author. Here Hamlet begins with the wish: "O, that this too, too solid flesh would melt," and speaks of the "weary, stale and unprofitable uses of the world." He muses on his dead father, and on the haste with which his mother has wedded that father's brother.

But a change comes in Hamlet when he meets Horatio, that old and trusted friend, of sturdy and dog-like fidelity.

Later, there is the dialogue between Laertes and Ophelia, when the former is on the eve of departing to France and the conversation between Laertes and Polonius, when the latter, who has been drawn by Shakespeare as an old, hide-bound politician, on the verge of senility, begins to spout a series of mouth-filling maxims, "fit for calendars." Dr. Pratt referred here to the fashion in the England of those days of repeating the aphorisms coined by a famous writer of that period John Lilly, and considered this speech of Polonius as an example of many of these phrases.

The speaker concluded with the end of the first act, to finish at the final lecture of the series, next Wednesday.

Maloney In Training To Stage Comeback

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 18. — Canadian Press. — Tex Rickard's "terrible disappointment" over Jack Sharkey's showing against Tom Heeney in New York last week, yesterday sent Jim Maloney, South Boston heavyweight, scurrying into the Maine woods for six weeks of preliminary roughing it before attempting a comeback to the status of a logical heavyweight contender.

Dan Carroll, Maloney's manager, intimated if Maloney can stage a few clean cut wins over such men as Risko, Heeney, and Delaney, he will bid to re-enter the heavyweight elimination runs out of which he was dumped by Sharkey last year. Maloney will spend six weeks in the woods and will be ready for a match about March 1. Harry Wills or Jack Renault have been named as possible first opponents.

IN MEMORIAM.

BULLOCK. — In loving memory of our dear husband and father, Mr. Robert Bullock, who passed away on Jan. 19, 1927:

The month of January again is here
The saddest month of all,
For then we loved so well and dear,
Answered the Lord's great call;
Some may think we have forgotten,
Because again we smile,
But God and we alone can know
The sorrow hidden all the while.
